BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES.

MARTIN CHITTENDEN, the second son of Gov. Thomas Chittenden, was born in Salisbury, Conn., March 12 1769, and graduated at Dartmouth College in 1789. He represented Jericho in the General Assembly 1790 and subsequently for eight years, and Williston two years; was Clerk of Chittenden County Court four years, and Judge ten; Judge of Probate two years; delegate in the Constitutional Conventions of 1791 and 1793; Member of Congress from 1803 to 1813, ten years; and Governor in 1813 and '14. He died Sept. 5 1840, in his seventy-second year, having been for about thirty years employed in public service.—Drake's Dictionary of American Biography; Vt. Historical Magazine, Vol. 1; Deming's Catalogue; and Vt. Watchman & State Journal of Sept. 21 1840.

MARK RICHARDS, born in New Haven, Conn., in 1760, represented Westminster in the General Assembly nine years, beginning in 1801 and receiving his last election in 1834; was one of the Council of Censors in 1806, Sheriff of Windham County five years in succession beginning in 1806, Elector of President and Vice President in 1812, Councillor in 1813 and 1815, Member of Congress 1817-1821, and Lieutenant Governor in 1830. He died at Westminster Aug. 10 1844, aged 84 years. —Lanman's Dictionary of Congress; Deming's Catalogue; and Vt. Watchman & State Journal of Aug. 23 1844.

GAMALIEL PAINTER, born in New Haven, Conn., May 22 1742, was one of the first three settlers of Middlebury in 1773. "He was a plain man, slow of speech and of few words," "but he had sound judgment and common sense, on which his friends placed implicit and safe reliance. He had great wisdom—some would say cunning—in forming his plans and in adopting the means to execute them. Thus he became a leader in all important enterprises." To him, more than to any other one man, the town of Middlebury is indebted for its college, its first church, its village square, and the first mills; so he is recognized as "the father of the town." He had derived very little advantage from schools, but much from association with men of more learning and experience, so that he became an efficient public servant, and was honored for his patriotism and practical business qualities. July 5 1776 he was appointed by Congress a first lieutenant in Warner's continental regiment; and as the officers of that regiment consisted of "such as have served with credit in Canada," it is apparent that Judge Painter had served in the campaign of 1775. Drake states that he served as quartermaster and captain in the revolutionary army. He was the first delegate of Middlebury, having been a member of the Conventions at Dorset in January and September 1776, and delegate for Cornwall at Windsor in June 1777. He was the first representative of Middlebury in the General Assembly, in 1786, and for fourteen years in all. On the organization of Addison County in 1785, he was appointed Assistant Judge of the County Court, but he resigned that office before the term expired, for the purpose of being Sheriff, as he was in 1786. In 1787 he again became judge and held the position until 1795, when he was again elected, but declined to accept the office. He was Councillor in 1813 and 1814, coming in as a candidate of the Federal party, and going out with it in 1815. He died May 21 1819; and the Trustees of Middlebury College, to whom his estate was bequeathed, erected a monument over his remains.—Swift's History of Middlebury, in which see a portrait; Drake's Biographical Dictionary; and Deming's Catalogue.

SAMUEL SWIFT, LL. D., seventh of the fourteen children of Rev. Job and Mary Ann Sedgwick Swift, was born at Nine Partners [now Amenia.] N. Y., Aug. 2 1782, and graduated at Dartmouth College in 1800. He was tutor in Middlebury College 1801 to 1803, and a member of Addison County bar as early as 1808, and probably earlier. He opened a bookstore, and from Sept. 1812 to Sept. 1816 edited the Vermont Mirror, a weekly newspaper published at Middlebury, and also a Vermont Register and Almanac, 1803 until 1818. He was Secretary of the Governor and Council 1813 and '14, Judge of Probate 1819-41, Clerk of Addison County Courts 1814-46, Assistant Judge 1855-1857, and Elector of President and Vice President in 1836. By request of the Historical Society of Middlebury, he wrote a history of Addison County, and also of the Town of Middlebury, which were printed in 1859. He died July 8 1875.—For portrait, see his History of Middlebury and Addison County.—Memorials of a Century, Bennington; Drake's Biographical Dictionary; History of Middlebury; Thompson's Vermont; and Deming's Catalogue.

¹ The editor of this volume is indebted to CHAUNCEY K. WILLIAMS Esq. of Rutland for the statement of the votes of the freemen for Governor as canvassed in 1813, to wit : for Jonas Galusha 16,828, Martin Chittenden 16,532, scattering 605. No person having received a majority of all the votes cast, there was no election by the people. For Councillors a plurality sufficed for an election, and but for the rejection of the votes of Colchester by the canvassing committee, the entire Jeffersonian Republican ticket but one, [Joseph Woodworth of Montpelier,] would have been declared elected ; whereas the four gentlemen, last named in the above list reported by the committee, were on the Federal ticket. Samuel C. Crafts, Pliny Smith, and William Cahoon, of the Republican ticket, claimed that the votes of Colchester should have been counted, and that in that event they were entitled to seats in lieu of Samuel Fletcher, Gamaliel Painter, and Daniel Dana. The General Assembly did not concur in these claims, though a Committee of the Council, after deliberate examination, declared that the votes of Colchester should have been received and counted. The Assembly refused a reading to the report of this committee. For the petition of Messrs. Crafts, Smith, and Cahoon, see printed Assembly Journal of 1813, p. 30 ; for report of a committee of the Assembly on the same subject, see same, p. 144 ; and for report of the committee of the Council, see post, in the record of Nov. 11 1813.

WEDNESDAY October 20th, 1813. 9 O'clock A. M.

Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Mr. [Asa] Lyon appeared in Council Chamber and returned the resolution appointing a [time] for both Houses to meet in joint Committee to take into consideration the petition and remonstrance of Pliny Smith, Samuel C. Crafts & William Cahoon, against Samuel Fletcher, Daniel Dana and Gamaliel Painter, and informed the Governor & Council that the General Assembly had not concurred in passing the same, and assigned the reasons of said nonconcurrence, and then withdrew.¹

Some, in this day of new things, had the hardihood to contend that the Canvassing Committee were omnipotent, and that their decision was unalterable.

The evident purpose of the petition and remonstrance was, to contest the seats of three persons who had been declared duly elected Councilors in the mode prescribed by the constitution. An examination of that instrument will show three things : 1, that the House of Representatives had power to "judge of the elections and qualifications of their own members," but had no such power over members of the Council ; 2, that the Council had no power granted to it to judge of the election of its own members ; and 3, that, by the constitution, it was made the duty of the canvassing committee to receive, sort, and count the votes, and declare the persons elected. The canvassing committee was not appointed by the joint assembly, nor was any power given to that body, by either the constitution or any statute, to revise the work of the committee. In this case, the two Houses differed politically, and it is obvious that the Federal House held that the election in Colchester, on which the result turned, had been utterly vitiated by the intrusion and votes of United States troops, under command of Maj. John McNeil of New Hampshire ; while the Jeffersonian Republican majority of the Council, on testimony taken after the canvassing committee had declared the election of the three Federal Councillors whose right was questioned, held that the votes of Colchester ought to have been received and counted, and the seats given to the contestants.

The Council first proposed, Oct. 18, a joint assembly "for the purpose of taking into consideration the petition and remonstrance" &c., to which the House disagreed. The inference is that the Council then anticipated a re-opening of the case, at least for discussion, in joint assembly ; but on the 12th of Nov. the Council asked for a joint committee "to devise suitable rules, by which future canvassing committees shall be governed, in receiving, sorting and counting votes." &c. This implies an abandonment of the idea, if such had been entertained, that the joint assembly could overrule or instruct the canvassing committee ; and the adoption, by statute, of rules by which that committee could correct its own errors, or investigate so fully as to preclude error. This question was elaborately and ably discussed in the joint assembly in 1853—a body consisting of members of three political parties, and in which neither party had a majority—and it was decided by the adoption, yeas 128 to nays 63, of the following resolution :

Hon. Samuel Fletcher appeared in Council, the oaths of office were duly administered to him by His Excellency the Governor, and he took his seat as a Councillor.

Rec^d from the House of Representatives the petition of J. & W. Mott, for a right of ferry, with an order to refer the same to a committee of

Resolved. That the Joint Assembly have not the constitutional power to reverse the decisions of the Canvassing Committee in regard to election of County and Probate District Officers.—See printed Assembly Journal of 1853, pp. 464–468.

This resolution accorded with the opinion of the canvassing committee, as declared by the chairman to the joint assembly, who however did not report that the committee also claimed it to be “the right and duty of the committee to revise its own work at any time while in its power, and to correct every mistake, error, or fraud.”—See statement of one of the committee in the Vermont Watchman & State Journal of Dec. 1 1853.

The two acts of Nov. 4, 1812, passed by a Jeffersonian Republican legislature, provided that any freeman of the State, in the service of the United States as officer or soldier, might vote “for state officers in any town in this state, wherever he may happen to be;” and for Members of Congress “on his first proving to the satisfaction of a majority of the selectmen and justices of the peace” “that he is a freeman of this State, or that by his residence and good moral conduct he is entitled to take the freeman’s oath.—Provided, That all such officers and soldiers attending any freeman’s meeting as aforesaid, shall attend without their arms.”—Printed Laws of Vermont of 1812, pp. 131, 139. Under the stress of the embargo and the war, the Federal party in Vermont was rapidly growing, and the purpose of these acts was to save the votes of the Vermonters in the army, the most of whom were presumed to be of the war party, as the following letter, copied from Spooner’s Vermont Journal of Aug. 22 1814, shows:

U. S. Senator Jona. Robinson to Maj. Gen. Wade Hampton.

BENNINGTON, Aug. 23, 1813.

Dear Sir.—Although unacquainted with you personally, yet possessing a knowledge of your public character, I take the liberty to address you on a very important subject, deeply interesting to the people of this State. We consider it rather improbable that the soldiers under your command will march out of this State until after the 7th of Sept. next [the day of the election]—and the Legislature having provided by law that all soldiers who are Freemen in the State should have a right to vote in any town in the State where they should be stationed—our friends here, who are leading characters, believe that the exercise of their franchise as freemen will decide the Election for Governor and one branch of the Legislature [the Council]. Those who have enlisted being principally Republican, we have it to solicit, sir, from your clemency, that every facility may be given for the soldiers on that day to leave the camp by companies, and repair to the neighboring towns to give in their votes. Through this medium is our only hope of preventing the State of Vermont from becoming one of the Eastern Confederacy against our Tabor to the County of Bennington," with an order of the House to refer the same to a committee of two to join from Council: Which was read, & Resolved, to concur with the House in said reference, and Mr. Richards was appointed on the part of Council.

government. Col. [Elias] Fassett [of the 30th U. S. regiment] and Col. [Isaac] Clark [of the 11th] will, probably, confer with you on the subject. I am, sir, with high esteem, your friend. JONA. ROBINSON.

Gen. Wade Hampton.

Had the soldiers who voted at Colchester been under the command of a Vermonter and the election there so conducted as to avoid criticism, it is highly probable that three more Republican Councillors would have been declared elected and the re-election of Gov. Galusha and Lt. Gov. Brigham secured in the joint Assembly. The Federalists of 1813 had been warned by the success of their opponents in securing the election of their ticket for six Congressmen in Dec. 1812, which should here be noted. The Washingtonian of Dec. 28, 1812, contained the following:

The following Order was issued at Burlington, Dec. 7th, by the Colonel of the 11th Regt. We presume it to be the first, of a similar import, ever issued in any country, by the Colonel of a regiment in public service:

"All the officers of said regiment that are freemen of Vermont, and all others that have a right to take the oath, are requested to attend the Freeman's Meeting at the Court-house, at 12 o'clock, this day, in order to choose Representatives to Congress.—By order of the Colonel.

[Signed]

N. S. CLARKE, Adj."

The militia at Plattsburgh had been discharged a few days previous to the election and returned with Clark's regiment. As the Republican ticket received a majority but little exceeding two hundred, it is undoubtedly true that its success was due to the return of these troops to Vermont.

Rec^d. from the House a bill entitled "An act appropriating the County Grammar School lands in the County of Franklin," with an order of the House to refer the same to a Committee of two to join from Council; Which being read, Resolved, to concur in the said reference, and Mr. Harrington was appointed on the part of Council.

2 O'CLOCK P. M.—Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Mr. Edmond of the House of Representatives appeared in Council and returned the resolution of the Governor & Council, appointing a time for both Houses to meet in joint Committee to elect a Governor & Lieutenant Governor of this State for the year ensuing, of the date of October 16, 1813; which had been [non]concurrred in by the House. When Mr. Edmond had assigned the reasons of the House for their nonconcurrence, he withdrew.¹

Governor & Council adjourned to 9 O'clock A. M. Tomorrow.

¹ Oct. 16, in joint committee of the two houses, Henry Olin proposed a joint resolution to proceed at once to an election of governor and lieutenant governor; which was ruled out of order, when Nathaniel Niles appealed, and the ruling was affirmed by the House, 108 to 102. On the same day the Governor and Council sent to the House a joint resolution for a joint committee for the same purpose, which the House nonconcurrred in, 108 to 100. The real, though not the assigned reason of the nonconcurrence of the House doubtless was that three of the Federal Councillors elect had not then taken their seats. These were all present Oct. 20, and on that day the House communicated its nonconcurrence to the Governor and Council, and adopted a resolution for an election on the 21st. It is hardly necessary to suggest, in case of an election in the absence of three Federal Councillors, that the Jeffersonian Republican candidates would have been elected.

Messrs. Wright & Harrington were accordingly added.

Pursuant to the concurrent resolution of both Houses, the Governor & Council proceeded to the Representatives' room for the purpose of meeting the House of representatives in joint Committee to elect a Governor and Lieutenant Governor of the State for the year ensuing. On meeting the House & the joint resolution being read, His Excellency Jonas Galusha was nominated and appointed to take the chair. The ballots were then taken, sorted & counted for Governor; it appeared that the Honorable Martin Chittenden Esquire had a majority of votes, and was declared duly elected. The ballots were then duly taken, sorted & counted for Lieutenant Governor, when it appeared that the Hon. William Chamberlain Esquire had a majority of votes & was declared duly elected. After which the Council returned to their Chamber, and Adjourned to 9 O'clock A. M. Tomorrow.¹

partizans of Gov. Galusha was 103; the addition of eight Jeffersonian Republican Councillors made 111. The debenture account shows that Lieut. Gov. Brigham was paid for service on the day of the election of Governor, so his vote for Galusha would make 112. The solution of this question lies between the theory of the memorialists, or the withholding of a Republican's vote, as the only alternatives.—See Deming's Catalogue, pp. 11, 12, for a suggestion that a member of Bennington County withheld his vote.

act entitled an act directing the deed of Job & Theoda Wood to be given in evidence passed Oct. 20, 1812," viz. — "To the General Assembly now in session, at Montpelier, Nov. 4, 1813. The Council having nonconcurring in passing of the bill entitled 'an act repealing an act entitled an act directing the deed of Job & Theoda Wood to be given in evidence, passed Oct. 20, 1812,' assign the following reasons, to wit:—First, because the evidence exhibited & the facts proved were in the opinion of the last legislature sufficient reasons for the passing of said act, and the same reasons still existing do, in the opinion of the Council, forbid the repeal of said law. Secondly, because, from a review of the facts in this case, the Council are fully convinced, that the said act is strictly equitable, and the Council have not been able to discover wherein said law is unconstitutional. Thirdly, because, if the Council are incorrect in their views of the constitutionality of this law, the question is still open for the decision of the courts of law." D. 1812, and a committee appointed by said legislature to lay out a road from Tunbridge to Strafford as aforesaid, which said last mentioned committee have laid a road from said Tunbridge to Strafford; and that the same men, who were dissatisfied with the several surveys of said road, have been heard times enough to have been satisfied; and that they ought no longer to be gratified at the expense of the public." ¹This record is erroneous. The Council nonconcurred in passing the bill, and gave reasons, instead of proposing amendment; and Nov. 10, 1813, the House decided that "the governor and council not having returned the same [bill] to this house, with proposals of amendment, within the time limited by the constitution, the same is become a law;" and it appears in the printed Laws of 1813.—See ante, p. 32; printed Assembly Journal of 1813, p. 157; and printed Laws of 1813, p. 79.

²The yeas were of the war party, Lt. Gov. Chamberlain excepted; and the nays were all opponents of the war. The State non-intercourse act of 1812 was rigorous in its provisions, and rigorously executed in several instances. The Council of Censors of 1813, the members all being Federalists, condemned the act as being unconstitutional: first, in violation of the constitution of the United States, which gives to Congress the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and captures by land and water; and second, in violation of the constitution of the State, particularly the provisions on the right of trial by jury, and against unreasonable searches. Therefore, on the 25th of Oct. 1813, the Council sent a rescript to the General Assembly recommending a "speedy and unqualified repeal of said act," and on the same day the Assembly passed a repealing bill by yeas 159 to nays 19. This vote shows that at least fifty of the war party voted for repeal.—See printed Assembly Journal of 1813, pp. 50–53. The courts condemned the act, and military officers who had enforced it were subjected to costs and penalties, which the State refunded.

The Committee appointed on the 21st of October on the memorial of Samuel C. Crafts, Pliny Smith and William Cahoon, against Samuel Fletcher, Gamaliel Painter & Daniel Dana, made the following Report:

To the Honourable Council of the State of Vermont, now in session,—Your Committee, to whom was referred the memorial of Samuel C. Crafts, Pliny Smith and William Cahoon against Samuel Fletcher, Gamaliel Painter & Daniel Dana Esquires, with instructions to collect facts in relation to the votes for Councillors the present year, beg leave to report the following facts and evidence relative to the matters submitted to their enquiry.

First,—The joint [committee] of both Houses appointed on the 14th of this instant October, to receive, sort and count the votes for Governor, Lieut. Governor, Treasurer and Councillors, received, sorted and counted votes for the following candidates in numbers as set against their several names, viz.

W ^m . C. Harrington	16809	Moses Robinson	16741
Mark Richards	16812	Pliny Smith	16699
Horatio Seymour	16805	William Cahoon	16675
Josiah Wright	16768	Samuel C. Crafts	16642

Gamaliel Painter	16755	Charles Bulkley	16576
Daniel Dana	16754	Joseph Woodworth	15301

Secondly—That said Committee of Canvassers did not proceed to open the certificate of votes for Councillors given in by the freemen of the Town of Colchester and County of Chittenden, but rejected the same and not receive, sort or count them.

That your committee have since, to wit, on the 25th day of October instant, applied to the Honorable Elias Keyes Esqr. chairman of said Committee of canvassers, in whose possession said certificate remained after it had been rejected, and who at the request of your committee opened the said certificate in their presence and made his certificate of his so doing on the same.

Your Committee further report the following to be a correct copy of said certificate, viz.

“At a freeman’s meeting legally warned and holden at Colchester in the State of Vermont on the first Tuesday of September A. D. 1813, the votes for Councillors being duly taken, sorted and counted, the following persons had the number of votes annexed to their names respectively :

For Josiah Wright	258 votes.	Samuel Fletcher	38 Votes.
Mark Richards	258 Do.	Chauncey Langdon	38 Do.

AMOS BOARDMAN, first Constable.
HEMAN ALLEN, Town Clerk.”

Your Committee further report, That it appears from the above certificate, and from the proceedings of the Committee of canvassers, that the votes received, sorted & counted for Samuel C. Crafts as Councillor

am^t to 16642
Colchester votes not counted am^t to 258

amounting in the whole to 16900

That the votes sorted & counted as above for Pliny Smith amount to 16699
Colchester votes not counted am^t to 258

amounting in the whole to 16957

That the votes sorted & counted as above for William Cahoon
am^t to 16675
Colchester votes not counted am^t to 257

amounting in the whole to 16932

That the votes sorted & counted as aforesaid for Gamaliel Painter
am^t to 16755
Colchester votes not counted am^t to 38

amounting in the whole to 16793

That the votes sorted & counted as aforesaid for Samuel Fletcher am ^t to	16760
Colchester votes not counted am ^t to	38
amounting in the whole to	16798
That the votes sorted & counted as aforesaid for Daniel Dana amount to	16754
Colchester votes not counted am ^t to	38
amounting in the whole to	16792

From which it appears that the memorialists, Samuel C. Crafts, Pliny Smith & William Cahoon had a greater number of votes for councillors than Samuel Fletcher, Gamaliel Painter & Daniel Dana Esquires, and if said votes of the freemen of the town of Colchester had been received, opened, sorted & counted the said Crafts, Smith & Cahoon would have been returned by the Committee of canvassers as duly and legally elected, as councillors for the year ensuing. And the said Fletcher, Painter & Dana would not have been returned elected as aforesaid.

Your Committee further report that they have examined into the grounds and evidence, which induced said committee of canvassers to neglect to open and to reject the votes of the freemen of the town of Colchester. It appears that they admitted and had read to them the following depositions, to wit,—

“William Munson, of Colchester, testifies and says, that the election for State officers &c. on the first Tuesday of September last, was holden at his house; that he was present during the whole time from the opening of the meeting until after the reception of the soldiers' votes; that he paid attention to all the proceedings of the meeting and particularly to the admission of soldiers to the right of suffrage. Some time previous to the hour appointed for opening the meeting, a large body of soldiers belonging to the United States army, then stationed at Burlington, were marched from camp, and after passing a little north of my house were paraded in a double line. They continued in this situation during the whole time without being permitted to leave the ranks even to procure any refreshment. About 8 or 10 officers, among whom was a man called Major McNeile,¹ and who seemed to have the principal command of the soldiers, accompanied them. The officers were very active in writing votes, which they gave to the noncommissioned officers, and ordered them to see that every soldier had his vote. Previous to voting the officers bought of me four gallons of rum, which I saw distributed and given to the soldiers. Particular exertions were made by the officers to prevent the citizens from having intercourse with the soldiers, and they were intimidated by their threats from making the attempt. Observing that democratic votes, exclusively, were distributed among the soldiers, and being led by some circumstances to believe that some of them would be glad to have votes for the federal ticket, I gave a parcel to some persons present, and desired them to go and give them to such of the soldiers as wished for them. They soon returned and said they dare not offer them, for the soldiers told them there would be difficulty; upon which I went out myself and urged them to go along, telling them the soldiers dare not hurt them, and that they had a right to receive votes, if they pleased. The officers all soon collected together, and Major McNeile, after some other observations, said he hoped the citizens would not go near the soldiers, for that there might be some difficulty, and he should be sorry to have a quarrel between the soldiers and the citizens. I had not observed any misunderstanding on the part of the citizens, nor the least inclination to quarrel with the soldiers, and therefore suppose Major McNeile intended it as a threat to keep the citizens at a distance. There was no examination whatever by the selectmen, and civil authority of the town, whether the soldiers were resident in this State or not; or whether they had previously been made freemen in any town in this State. The law was not read in their hearing, and no enquiry was made as to their names, their residence, or their moral character, and not the least tittle of evidence offered, except the assertion of Major McNeile, to use his own language, "that he would vouch for all his men." They were formed into three circles, and the common oaths administered to them in a body, as they stood in the rank, to each circle alternately, by the Hon. Heman Allen—but no list of their names & no record made of their being sworn. The soldiers were then told by McNeile, that they were freemen of this State, and when marched within less than 20 feet of a table which had been previously placed in front of my house for the convenience of their voting, that he dismissed them for the purpose of putting in their votes, and wished them to use all expedition. They appeared to be all furnished with votes, and there were none others at that time in sight. After their votes had been received, the soldiers were again marched away in military order. There were about one hundred & ninety votes received from the officers and soldiers. McNeile did not vote, stating that he was not a freeman of the State.

¹ Gen. JOHN MCNEIL, of Hillsborough, N. H., who entered the service as Captain in the 11th U. S. regiment March 12 1812, was appointed Major Aug. 15 1813, brevet Lt. Col. for the battle of Chippewa July 5 1814, brevet Col. for the battle of Niagara July 25 1814—in which he was severely wounded,—Lieut. Col. 1st U. S. Infantry Feb. 24 1818, brevet Brig. Gen. July 25 1824, Col. 1st Inf. April 28 1826. He was appointed Surveyor of the port of Boston in 1829, resigned his commission in the army April 23 1830, and died in Washington city Feb. 23 1850.—Drake's Dic. of American Biography.

WM. MUNSON.

"Stephen Austin of Colchester testifies and says, that he came to the House of William Munson at an early hour of the day of election and was present during the day until after the result of the meeting was declared; that he saw the soldiers paraded near Mr. Munson's in a double line, and knows that they continued in this situation until they were drawn up to be sworn. The officers were busy in writing democratic votes exclusively, & I saw no other distributed among the soldiers. I went out toward the soldiers with some votes for the federal ticket, and a young man, who was a nephew to me, who was a soldier in the ranks, and in whom I had confidence, told me it would be of no use, for that his captain told the company before they came from the camp, that if any soldier was known to vote for the federal ticket, he would be clobbered when he got back. Another soldier told me that his officers stated to them after they were paraded at Mr. Munson's, that he did not bring them to vote on the federal ticket, and that he expected all who came with him would vote as he did, and that if they did not they should be punished, when they got back. He further said his officer offered a vote to another soldier and he did not wish to put it in, and that his officer said if he did not he should be punished.

The officers appeared to take great pains to keep the soldiers together and to prevent the citizens going near them. I heard Major McNeile observe, that he did not wish to have the citizens have any thing to do with his men : that he calculated to take care of his men, and did not thank any of the citizens to take any of his soldiers out and converse with them. I saw the soldiers formed into three circles, and was as near them as I could get when the oaths were administered. There was no examination of the soldiers and am sure there was no evidence offered to prove their citizenship, or their moral characters, and no record made of their being sworn, and no list taken of their names, and they were all sworn en masse. I know that the law was not read to the soldiers. Some one of the officers told the soldiers, after they were sworn and while they were near the table, that they were dismissed from the care of any officer, and to vote the same as other citizens.

“STEPHEN AUSTIN.

“William Austin of Colchester testifies and says, that he came to the house of Mr. Munson in Colchester on the first Tuesday of September last before the votes were received from the soldiers. He saw the soldiers paraded and knows they were kept embodied without being permitted to have any intercourse with the citizens. He was present when they were sworn & knows that no examination was made by the selectmen & civil authority of the town, whether the soldiers were freemen of the State or not, or how long they had resided in it, and that no evidence was adduced on that subject. I saw the soldiers when they were brought round to vote, and when near the table they were dismissed, and told that they were at liberty to vote the same as other citizens. I heard one of the soldiers say that his officer told his men, that if any of them voted for the federal ticket, they should be punished when they got back to camp. I also heard another soldier say that his officer told them before they left the camp to the same effect.

“WILLIAM AUSTIN.

“Ebenezer Lyon of Colchester testifies and says, that he came to the house of William Munson in said town on the first Tuesday of September last, previously to any votes being received. When I arrived I saw a large number of soldiers paraded in a double line near Mr. Munson's house, where they were continued until their votes were received. I was present during the whole meeting and saw Judge Allen when he went out with the statute to administer the oaths to them ; but did not hear any examination of them whether they were citizens of the State, or not, or how long they had resided in this State, or whether they were of moral character, or not, nor did I hear any evidence whatever offered on the subject. When near the table, I should say within ten feet, they were dismissed by the Major, and told they might give in their votes, which they did, and went away.

“Colchester Oct^r 11, 1813.

“I Oliver Newell of Colchester testify and say I was present at the freemens' meeting in said Colchester on the first Tuesday of September last, and saw the soldiers paraded in front or near the house where the meeting was held. The officers prepared votes for the soldiers, and directed an under officer (as I supposed him to be) to see that every soldier had his vote and to see that they put them in. I saw the votes, and all which I saw were for Jonas Galusha, Paul Brigham and for the democratic candidates for council, and I do not believe any other were distributed among the soldiers by the officers. The soldiers were marched up in three squads, or parties, and sworn by Esq. Allen. I stood within about 15 or 20 feet of Esq. Allen, when he swore them. I heard no examination by Esq. Allen, or any other person, as to their residence, or other qualifications, nor do I believe there was any except that McNeile, the commanding officer, told the soldiers, if any of them were not old enough to vote to step out. They stood near the boxes, when they were sworn, and after they were sworn the commanding officer said to them, you are now dismissed, and can vote as other citizens, or to that import. They went directly to the boxes, and, I believe, they all voted and put in the tickets which had been distributed among them. I am confident the law was not read to the soldiers, or in their hearing, for the meeting was opened in the chamber and the law read there, and the soldiers were paraded in the streets at the same time, and the votes of the soldiers were taken out of doors in front of the house and no law read to them, as I heard or believe, and further this deponent saith not.

"James L. Sawyer of Burlington deposes and says, that a few days since he heard Lieut. Benja. Smead of the 11th Regt. of U. S. Infantry in conversation observe, that feeling himself injured by the refusal of his vote by the civil authority of Burlington at the September election 1812, he felt determined to avail himself of the advantages, which the law passed the last session of the legislature permitting the soldiers to vote, gave him as an officer in the army. He said that he commanded a company in which there were about thirty federalists, and that at the last election he took particular care that those thirty should be occupied in camp while the remainder of his company furnished with votes for the democratic ticket were permitted to leave camp and vote in Colchester. This deponent is not positive that Lieut. Smead observed that there were thirty federalists in his company detained in camp, but he thinks this number was mentioned by him. He was positive in saying that none of the federalists in his company were allowed by him to leave the camp: and further the deponent saith not. JAMES L. SAWYER.

"George Deming of Burlington in the County of Chittenden testifies and says that he was present in company with Major McNeile on the evening after the election in September last. That many complaints were made by those present of the conduct of the officers with respect to the election in threatening the soldiers and changing their votes. That I heard Major McNeile say in reply that he had not conducted so bad as that, but I can tell you, said he, what I did do, and went on to say that on the morning of the election, after being informed that he might have liberty to conduct a party of troops to Colchester, he addressed the troops when on parade and stated to them that this was the day of freemen's meeting, and that they might have liberty to go to the polls and put in their votes—but that he wished none to go but such as would vote as he did; that after marching the party to Colchester, one of his men came to him and told him he had always voted with the democrats, but that he felt it his duty to act on different principles and should vote for the federal ticket; that he, McNeile, told him he was a damned rascal, that he had told them that he wished none to come with them but such as would vote as he did; that he would mark him, and remember him for it. Burlington, Oct^r. 11, 1813.

"October 11th, 1813. Sworn before John Johnson Just^e Peace."

Your Committee further state that the foregoing depositions appear to have been taken to impeach the doings at the freemen's meeting in Colchester and that, from the certificates of the magistrates, who swore the deponents, it does not appear that either the presiding officer, or civil authority, or any of the freemen of the town of Colchester were cited to appear, or were present at the caption of the depositions. Your committee would farther remark that the Honourable Heman Allen, Town Clerk of said town of Colchester, testified before said canvassing committee and stated the same in substance as is stated in his deposition, which your committee have given at length in the subsequent part of this report.

Your committee further report that in obedience to the order of the Council to collect all the facts in relation to this subject, they have considered it their duty to collect other evidence, that was not before the committee of canvassers; and have taken the following depositions, of persons composing the civil authority of Colchester, the Town Clerk, the magistrate who took most of the foregoing depositions, and who acted as one of the civil authority of said town, and the depositions of the soldiers who voted at said freemen's meeting.

"Heman Allen of Colchester in the County of Chittenden and State of Vermont, testifies and says, that on the first Tuesday of September last he attended freemen's meeting in said Colchester at the dwelling house of William Munson Esquire in said town, that the presiding officer of said meeting opened the same at the usual time, and as town Clerk of said town, this deponent then read publicly all the statutes required by law to be read on such occasions: That previous to the opening of the meeting a number of officers and soldiers came to the place of our meeting with a view, as I understood, of voting for State officers: That soon after the reading of the laws was finished, Captain Wright, belonging to this State, applied to the selectmen and civil authority for permission for the officers and soldiers belonging to this State and freemen thereof, and who were then present, to be admitted to vote for State officers. After some consultation by the selectmen and civil authority of said town, and at the solicitation of the said William Munson, it was agreed to place a table near the door of said Munson's house, and that as the officers and soldiers were some distance from camp, their votes should be taken prior to those of the citizens of said town: That the officers then pledged themselves that they knew of no soldiers then present who were not freemen of this State, or by their residence therein not entitled to take the freemen's oath; but, to render it more certain, the selectmen and civil authority requested this deponent to administer to the said soldiers the oath of allegiance to this State, the freemen's oath, and the oath to support the constitution of the United States: That the soldiers were then drawn up in a circle near the said selectmen and civil authority, in three divisions, that this deponent then went into the circle at three different times, accompanied by one or more of the said selectmen and civil authority;—in every case the question was distinctly asked—Are there any of you who are not freemen of this State, or by your residence in said State not entitled to the freemen's oath? and if so you will step out of the ranks; that a number of the said soldiers did step out of the ranks, and that those who remained then took the aforesaid oaths; that in each case after administering the oaths aforesaid, the said soldiers were dismissed by their officers and informed that they were then at liberty to exercise the rights of freemen; that the soldiers then came to the poll as they pleased and delivered their votes for State officers to the presiding officer of said meeting; during which time I saw no coercion or interference on the part of the officers.—After which was completed, the officers presented themselves to vote, and at the suggestion of Francis Child Esquire, a justice of the peace in said town, the votes of the officers belonging to this State were taken without their being sworn, on the assurance that they had before that time been sworn as freemen of this State : That the ballots for councillors given by said officers and soldiers were kept and counted separate from the citizens' votes, though they were all certified together afterwards, by which it appeared that there was about one hundred & ninety-five ballots for councillors given in by the officers and soldiers, four or five of which were for the federal ticket, so called, headed by Moses Robinson, and the residue of said ballots were for the republican ticket, so called, headed by Josiah Wright. The said selectmen and civil authority were unanimous in the opinion that this was the safest mode they could pursue ; and this deponent believes that at the time the procedure gave general satisfaction. It is true no roll was kept of the names of the officers and soldiers who voted, neither was the law read to them in the main body, though some of the officers and soldiers were present in the house during the reading of said laws. This deponent knew of no law which required the town clerk of any town in this State to keep a roll of the names of voters for State officers : That he considered those men as freemen of the State, formerly admitted in the several towns to which they belonged, and not as freemen of the town of Colchester then newly admitted : That the inkeeper of said house, Mr. Munson, was opposed to the soldiers coming into the house at all, which was perhaps one reason why all the soldiers were not present at the reading of the laws, and why spirits were given them by their officers, they having marched about eight miles from the place of their encampment to the place of voting as aforesaid : That some of the officers informed this deponent that a part of the officers and soldiers had gone to Burlington to vote and they were apprehensive that the whole of the votes could not be taken there, was the reason of their coming to Colchester. And this deponent further says, that when the soldiers delivered their votes to the presiding officer, many of them had certificates of their having been freemen before, and this deponent had no doubt at the time but that the whole of the officers & soldiers, who voted as aforesaid, were either freemen of this State, or entitled to take the freeman's oath : And further says not.

“We Ebenezer M. Farrington, Justice of the peace in & for the County of Chittenden, and Nathan Bryan, one of the selectmen of Colchester and both inhabitants of Colchester in the County of Chittenden, do testify and say that we attended freemen's meeting in said town of Colchester on the first tuesday of September 1813, and that we acted as civil authority by virtue of our respective offices on said day : That Major McNeile with a number of officers and soldiers came to the place where the meeting was held, and some of them came into the room and informed us that they had come for the purpose of voting in said meeting ; as soon after this as it was convenient we set a table out in front of the house, at which the civil authority of the town attended for the purpose of taking said votes ; it was then concluded by the civil authority to examine the soldiers so far as to be convinced that they were inhabitants of the State of Vermont, and either freemen or eligible to be made such. We then requested Major McNeile to parade his men and have them in a situation to be examined, which he did, a part of them by forming them in a circle. We then went into the circle accompanied by Judge Allen, and made a particular inquiry of the officers and soldiers, whether they were freemen of this State, or eligible to become such by taking the necessary oaths, whether any of them were under age, or had not been a sufficient time in the State. After those who could not give sufficient assurances, had left the ranks, the freeman's oath, the oath of allegiance to this State, and to support the constitution of the United States were duly administered by Judge Allen, the town clerk. Major McNeile then informed the soldiers, who were sworn as above, that they were dismissed and at liberty to make use of their privilege as freemen by voting for whom they pleased. The persons sworn then proceeded to give in their votes, and a second circle of the soldiers were proceeded with in the same way, and after that a third. The votes of the said soldiers for councillors were taken in a separate box from those of the Inhabitants of Colchester, and on examination we found that five of the soldiers had voted for the federal ticket, so called, and the remainder for the republican ticket. During the proceedings of the day we saw no unfair conduct, nor any compulsion whatever made use of by the officers towards the soldiers. The officers and soldiers were all entirely without arms.

"The above affidavits subscribed by the above deponents, and sworn to Franklin County, State of New York, October 20th. 1813, before

"GATES HOIT, Clerk of said County."

Your Committee find that the votes returned in the certificate of votes for Councillors from the town of Washington in the County of Orange was varied by the canvassing Committee, as follows, to wit : The number certified for the republican ticket was reduced twelve, and eight added to the number certified for the federal ticket. The facts in relation to these votes are principally detailed in the subjoined affidavit of Daniel Peasley Esq.

"Daniel Peasley of Washington in Orange County testifies and says, That he was present at the freeman's meeting in Washington in September last, and that toward the close of the meeting it was proposed that a list of the names of the twelve men should be made to be voted for as councillors ; that the names of the republican candidates for councillors were accordingly written on a piece of paper, and placed on the table before the authority of the town. In presence of the authority 10 or 12 freemen signed the list. After they had signed, the constable took the ticket & called each man by name, and asked him if the list of names, which he had subscribed, were the names of the persons whom he wished to have for councillors. Each answered separately in the affirmative. The ticket was then put into the boxes. On counting the councillors' votes, it appeared there were 29 for the federal ticket and 69 for the republican ticket. The said Peasley also says he was present before the canvassing committee, when the Washington votes were presented. Objections were made to the counting of these votes and evidence was offered to shew that the certificate of the constable was incorrect. It was stated that he had returned by his certificate 29 federal councillor votes, and 69 republican councillor votes, and it being proved that 12 of the freemen had voted by subscribing a ticket as is above mentioned, for this reason therefore 12 votes were deducted from the republican ticket. Depositions were then produced in which it was attempted to be shewn that 37 persons voted for the federal ticket ; several of the deponents stated that they had received votes of certain other persons, which they put into the box. These certain other persons' depositions were also produced to prove that the votes aforesaid given by them to the aforesaid deponents, were federal, or peace tickets, the same as published in the Washingtonian paper. This testimony by a majority of said committee was deemed sufficient to justify the addition of eight to the federal ticket. The constable, who presided in the freeman's meeting in Washington, (always considered himself a federalist and is reputed an honest, upright man,) was present before the canvassing committee, and swore that he saw or knew of no unfairness in counting the votes, or in any other proceeding in said freeman's meeting. The town clerk and one of the selectmen of the town were present before the canvassing committee, and confirmed by their testimony the statement of the constable relative to the proceedings in said freemen's meeting.

DANIEL PEASLEY.

"Sworn before Josiah Wright, Councillor."

Your Committee farther report That there were several other towns, whose votes were rejected by the canvassing committee, in whole or in part; but your committee having ascertained that their being rejected or counted would not vary the result, your committee have not thought it necessary to give the details in this report; but would state, that whether the other votes, that were rejected by the canvassing committee, had been counted or rejected, the result would still have been, that if the votes of the soldiers, who voted at Colchester and who in their depositions swear that they were freemen of this State & voted without any compulsion, and the votes of freemen, inhabitants of Colchester, had been received, sorted & counted, the said Samuel C. Crafts, Pliny Smith and William Cahoon would have been elected councillors for the year ensuing in the room of the said Samuel Fletcher, Gamaliel Painter, and Daniel Dana.

From an attentive review of the facts above stated, your committee are clearly of opinion that the votes returned from Colchester ought to have been counted by the canvassing Committee, and that provision by law securing the due effects of the rights of suffrage ought to be made. Your Committee therefore beg leave to recommend the adoption of the following resolution, viz. Resolved, that a committee of three be raised to join such committee as may be appointed from the house of representatives to take into consideration the foregoing statement of facts, and to devise suitable rules, by which future canvassing committees shall be governed in receiving, sorting and counting votes for Governor, Lieut. Governor and Councillors, to report by bill or otherwise; & that this resolve be sent to the house of representatives for their concurrence, together with this report.

D. 1813, be instructed," and insert the words, "a committee be raised to join from Council," & that the resolution be adopted with the above amendment.

Mr. Harrington, appointed for that purpose, reported the following as the reasons for nonconcurring in the reference of the petition of Abraham Alger Jun. & others :

"To the General Assembly now in session,—The Council have non-concurred in a reference of the petition of Abraham Alger Jun. Samuel Hildreth, Noah Alger, Stephen Hildreth, and Amos Hallock, for the following reasons : First, because the petitioners have, in their petition, made use of very unbecoming and highly improper language, which in sentiment evinces a spirit of insubordination destructive to military discipline, and which ought never to be sanctioned or in the least degree encouraged by the legislature. Secondly, because the petitioners have departed from the professed object of their petition, that of obtaining relief, and have pursued the unbecoming object of reproaching the motives and conduct not only of their military officers, but of the government. Thirdly, because, if the legislature should grant to the petitioners the relief prayed for, it would be sanctioning the very indecent & unbecoming language contained in their petition, and would, in the opinion of the Council, be declaring to the world that the government of Vermont has unconstitutionally & maliciously oppressed and abused the petitioners."

Which was read & it was Resolved, That the same be adopted & sent to the House.

A bill from the House of representatives entitled "an act directing the mode of taking depositions to be used before the canvassing Committee," being read, on the question, Will the Council concur in passing said bill into a law? it was decided in the negative: and the following reasons for nonconcurrence were adopted to be sent to the House of representatives, viz. "The Council do not concur in passing this bill for the following reasons,—1st. Because the certificates forwarded by the presiding officer of town meetings are the proper & the only proper evidence to be submitted to the canvassing committee; whereas this bill would make the canvassing committee a board for the trial of an unlimited number of matters of fact of a doubtful & disputable character. 2ndly. Because the admission of extraneous evidence before the canvassing Committee would not tend to either a correct result, or one which would be generally satisfactory. 3rdly. Because the examination of fact by the canvassing committee, aside from the certificates, would necessarily take days & probably weeks, during which time the government would remain unorganized, and the good people of this State imminently exposed to the evils of civil dissension from the government's being unorganized, at a period when the excitement of party feeling is generally at its highest pitch."

Adjourned to 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

WEDNESDAY Nov. 17, 1813. 9 O'clock A. M.

The Governor & Council met pursuant to adjournment.

A bill from the House of Representatives entitled "an act in addition to an act directing the mode of detaching the militia," sent up for concurrence, was read, and on the question, will the Council concur in passing the same? it was decided in the negative. And the following, reported by Mr. Harrington, were adopted as the reasons for their non-concurrence: "First, Because the law now in force appears to the Council to be a better and more equitable method for detaching the militia than the mode contemplated in this bill. 2dly, Because, by the law now in force, those who are not enrolled in the militia are made liable to pay their proportion of the expence of such detachment of the militia as may be called into the public service. 3dly, Because the law now provides that the militia while in service shall have added to the wages allowed by the United States the sum of $3.33 per month, which is by the Council considered no more than a reasonable compensation."

An engrossed bill from the House of Representatives [entitled] "an act granting relief to James Austin & others," being called up and read, it was Resolved, That the Council do not concur in passing said bill, and that the following reasons be adopted for nonconcurring in the same to be sent to the House, viz. "First, it appears to the Council that the bond mentioned in the bill was executed for liberating James H. Austin from Jail, who had been guilty of passing counterfeit bank bills, that he is a person of bad fame, and that the granting of the relief contemplated in the bill will, in the opinion of the Council, be a mean of confirming him in an evil course of conduct. 2ndly. The Council consider that the relief contemplated in the bill ought never to be granted without clear evidence of reformation in the person who is to be benefited by the relief prayed for."

An engrossed bill entitled "an act directing the mode of taking depositions to be used before the canvassing Committee," sent up from the House passed a second time, being read, Resolved, To concur in passing the same with the following proposed amendment,—Strike out the whole of the first section. And Mr. Seymour was appointed to assign the reasons for the amendment.

JOHN WINTHROP CHANDLER, born in Newtown, Conn., in 1767, was one of the early settlers of Peacham, in which town he spent the remainder of his life, dying there July 15 1855. The following resolution of the House of representatives was presented to His Excellency and by him communicated to the Council for their advice:

"IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY Oct. 28, 1814.

Resolved, That His Excellency the Governor be requested, by and with the advice of the Council, to appoint Thursday the first day of Deember next to be observed as a day of Public Thanksgiving and Praise throughout this State:" Which being read, Resolved, That the Council do advise to appoint said day for the purpose aforesaid.

The Committee appointed to take into consideration the question proposed by His Excellency on the 25th instant made the following report, viz.

"To His Excellency the Governor, and the Honourable Council now in Session:—Your Committee to whom was referred the following question proposed by His Excellency, "Can the militia when in the actual "service of the United States be lawfully commanded by any officers "but such as are appointed by this State, except by the President of the "United States?" report that the Constitution of the United States, Art. I, Sec. 8, declares—"The Congress shall have power to provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections and repel invasions; To provide for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the States respectively the appointment of the officers, and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress."

In Art. II, Sec. 2, "The President shall be commander in chief of the army and navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several States when called into the actual service of the United States."

It is the opinion of your Committee that the different clauses quoted from the federal constitution should receive a construction so as to render one clause consistent with another. The President may undoubtedly command the army and navy of the United States by officers lawfully commissioned by himself; but he cannot so command the militia of the States, when called into the actual service of the United States; for the appointment of their officers is a right reserved "to the States respectively." If therefore the President would command the militia when in the actual service of the United States, he must do it in person, or exercise his command over them by officers appointed by the State, and not by officers appointed by the President. The Congress have power to provide for organizing and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States. But to construe this into a constitutional right of placing the militia under the command of any officer, not of the militia, except the President, would render nugatory the following reservation, that is—"reserving to the States respectively the appointment of the officers and the authority of training the militia," &c. Your Committee consider this an important reservation in the federal constitution, favoring the sovereignty of the States, and tending to secure the rights of the people. Therefore it is not to be surrendered to the general government. As well might the officers of the militia, appointed by this State, when in the actual service of the United States, claim the right to command the army of the United States, as the officers of the army of the United States to command the militia. There is no constitutional provision for either to claim such right or exercise such command.

Mr. Baylies, appointed for that purpose, reported the following reasons for not concurring in passing the bill entitled "An act for the relief of Laban Cousins," viz. "Reasons assigned why the Governor and Council do not concur with the General Assembly in passing the bill entitled "an act for the relief of Laban Cousins." The Governor and Council have heard the petition of Laban Cousins, which accompanies the bill; also have seen the report of the Committee made thereon. The Governor and Council are of opinion that money in the County Treasury in the County of Addison is property in which each person belonging to the County has a common interest with all other persons belonging to the same County; and that the freemen of the County by electing the representatives to the General Assembly did not delegate power to such representatives to do any act by report or otherwise, which would justify the legislature in passing a law directing money to be paid out of the County Treasury, as a gift to the said Laban Cousins. The Governor and Council are of opinion that, if the legislature have power to pass the law, the power is derived from the constitution and laws of the State, not from the consent of the Representatives of the County; therefore the legislature may pass the law as well without as with their consent, and may direct one sum to be given as well as another. The Governor and Council doubt the existence of a power in the Legislature to pass a law directing money to be paid out of any treasury in this State, by way of gift to any individual, except it be out of the State Treasury. They see not, if the legislature have a right to lay their hand on the money in the treasury of a County, and give it to an individual, why they have not the right to put their hand into the treasury of every corporation in the State to take its money and give it away without any consent on the part of the corporation. Corporations, as well as individual citizens, have their rights, which cannot be infringed by the legislature. Money in a County treasury is corporate property, under the controul of the corporation, to be expended, according to existing laws, in paying its debts, and for objects necessary for the well being of the County. Such money cannot, by a legislative act, be taken from the corporation, and given to an individual person, any more than the property of one citizen can be taken and given to another. It is true that the legislature may by its act empower a corporation to make a donation, but the legislature cannot direct a corporation to make a donation any more than it can a private citizen. The bill in favor of Laban Cousins directs the treasurer to pay him eighty dollars by instalments, as the County Court shall direct. This bill cannot be considered as empowering the County of Addison to make a donation, and then leaving it at the option of the County whether to make it or not. But it directs the money to be paid, as though the legislature had a controul over the treasury of that County. The Governor and Council find no precedent for such a law."

Which being read were adopted. And it is Ordered, That they be sent to the House of Representatives with the bill aforesaid.¹

The resolution introduced by Mr. Baylies on the 1 November, expressing the opinion of the Council respecting the right of the United States Officers to command the militia, being called up, it is Ordered, That the same be amended, so as to read as follows:

"Resolved, That it is the opinion of the Council that it is not made the duty of His Excellency, by the constitution of the United States, to put the detached militia of this State, when in the actual service of the United States, under the command of any officer commissioned by the President; but such militia are to be commanded by officers appointed by the State, or by the President in person."

Whereupon Resolved, That the same be adopted and become a resolution of Council, by yeas and nays, as follows: Yeas, His Hon. the Lt. Governor, Messrs. Painter, Hubbard, Willoby, Dana, Baylies, Butler, Chandler, Stevens, Hall, Miller, and Robinson. Nays, None.

Which being severally read, Resolved, To concur in passing the same into laws.

Mr. Baylies, appointed for that purpose, made the following report:

"The reasons stated why the Governor and Council do not concur with the General Assembly in passing the bill entitled "An act for the relief of Lemuel Buck:"

"The Governor and Council find that Amos Marsh Esquire, administrator on the estate of Angus Nicholson, on the 28th of November 1810, commenced an action of debt against said Buck to be entered on the docket of the County Court then next to be holden at Middlebury in the County of Addison on the last Mouday of February 1811. Said Amos Marsh deceased before that time and the said Nicholson had no other administrator appointed before the entry of said action, which was entered at that term and continued to the next term of said Court in August 1811, when John Marsh as administrator to said Nicholson was entered Plaintiff in said action ; and said Buck was defaulted, and judgment rendered against him for $586.14 debt & damages and the cost taxed at 20 dollars & thirty five cents.

“Provision is made by law, that if the Plaintiff die after the commencement of his suit, and before it is entered, that his executor or administrator may enter and prosecute ; but if the Plaintiff has no executor or administrator there is no provision for the entry of such action.

“As Amos Marsh and the said Nicholson had no executors or administrators, at the time said action was entered, the proceedings may be considered erroneous on account of the entry. But if said Buck would reverse the judgment for said error, he should have complied with the law, which says : “No judgment in any real or personal action shall be reversed or avoided for any error or default therein unless the writ of error be commenced and duly served on the defendants in error within one year next after the rendition of such judgment and not after.” The Governor and Council consider this a beneficial law, which tends to lessen litigation, and give security after one year to those who have erred in legal proceedings.

“The Governor & Council learn, that said Buck brought a writ of error, on the record of said judgment, before the Supreme Court in Bennington County at their session in February 1812, which writ of error was continued to their session in February, 1813. The writ was not brought on account of the death of the said Amos Marsh, but for other errors supposed to appear of record, called errors in law. Bringing the writ for errors in law and no others, may be considered as a waiver of objections to errors in fact, such as were occasioned by the death of the said Amos Marsh. It farther appears to the Governor and Council, that after the statute of limitation had run against bringing a writ of error on account of the death of said Amos Marsh, to wit, in February 1813, the said Buck, finding that the errors in law which he had assigned in his writ did not exist, moved the said Supreme Court for leave to amend, by striking out the errors assigned, and inserting for errors in fact the death of the said Amos Marsh before the entry of the action which he commenced ; also that said Nicholson had no executor or administrator at the time. The said Supreme Court afterwards, at their adjourned session in May 1813, allowed said motion, and directed said amendment to be made : but said Buck, having lost said writ of error, did not make said amendment. It is not pretended that John Marsh administrator occasioned the loss of said writ, or had any thing to do with it. It however appears that he, at the term last aforesaid, moved the Court that the said Buck should produce the writ, and the Court ordered that he should supply the files by the first day of the then next term, which order the said Buck has not complied with, although he attempted to file a new writ of error, which was not sustained by the Court, and which said Buck must have known could not supply the place of the old one.

“When it is considered that the said statute of limitation had run against bringing a writ of error on account of the death of the said Amos Marsh, at the time said Buck moved the Court to amend his writ, the granting of that motion, if it did not amount to leave to make a new writ, was in avoidance of the statute of limitations, and went to the extremity of the law which allows amendment.

"If the said Buck had proceeded to trial on his writ of error without amendment, the Court must have rendered judgment in favor of John Marsh, Administrator, the defendant in error, for just damages for the delay occasioned by the writ, and single or double costs at their discretion. To avoid this the said Buck could not demand the amendment of his writ, as a matter of right; for it was discretionary with the Court, whether to allow it or not; therefore the allowance of the amendment may be considered a favor granted to the said Buck. He now asks another favor of this legislature, and wishes a statutory provision to be made to suspend the operation of the statute of limitations, as it relates to his case, that he may bring another writ of error. The Governor and Council would observe, that by statute it is made the duty of Courts, in all civil actions before them, to give judgment according to the right of the case and matter in law, without regarding imperfections and defects in the writ and declaration unless pointed out by special demurrer. The object of the law is justice, which is not to be prevented, though sometimes delayed, by errors in legal proceedings. After final judgment, only one year is allowed for a party to hunt up errors and bring his writ; and then the writ is not to be favored, but the record is sometimes amended to sustain the judgment, which defeats the writ. In the case of Lemuel Buck the Governor and Council consider that he has had all reasonable indulgence, and see no cause for passing a bill to enable him to bring another writ of error, to reverse the judgment on account of the death of Amos Marsh; especially when it does not appear that the said Buck has been injured by the death of said Marsh, or that the said Buck does not honestly owe the money contained in said judgment to John Marsh, Administrator on the estate of said Nicholson deceased."

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES.

Gen. WILLIAM CAHOON, son of Daniel Cahoon of Providence, R. I., and brother of Daniel Cahoon jr., the first settler of Lyndon, was born in 1774 and first appears in Vermont records as town representative of Lyndon in the General Assembly in 1802, which office he held nine years. He was delegate in the Constitutional Conventions of 1814 and 1828; Presidential Elector in 1808; Judge of Caledonia County Court 1811-1819, eight years; Councillor 1815 till 1820, five years; Lieutenant Governor 1820 till 1822, two years; and Member of Congress 1829-1833, six years. He died May 30 1833.—Vt. Hist. Magazine, Vol. I, title Lyndon.

JOEL DOOLITTLE was graduated at Yale College in 1799 and came to Middlebury in 1800 as the first tutor in Middlebury College. Admitted to the bar in 1801, he was a successful advocate and counsellor until 1817, when he was elected a judge of the Supreme Court. He held that office 1817 till 1823, and again in 1824; was Councillor three years, commencing in 1815; representative in the General Assembly in 1824; and member and president of the Council of Censors in 1834. He died in March 1841, at the age of 68.—Swift's History of Middlebury, in which see portrait.

JAMES TARBOX, born in Merrimac, N. H., in 1759, settled in Randolph about 1794 and engaged successfully in trade. Being held in very high esteem for sound judgment and sterling integrity, he was much employed in public service. He represented his town in the General Assembly six years, first in 1797 and last in 1813; was one of the Council of Censors in 1806, Judge of Orange County Court 1806 until 1812, Councillor in 1815, and Presidential Elector in 1808 and 1832. He died Aug. 25, 1841, aged 82 years. Though he had eight children, all died of consumption, and the last of his descendants at this writing is a granddaughter, the wife of Hon. Charles Dewey of Montpelier. In a sketch of Judge Tarbox, in Vt. Hist. Magazine, Vol. II, p. 1051, it is erroneously stated that he settled in Randolph in 1798, since he represented the town in 1797.—Vt. Hist. Magazine, Vol. II, pp. 1051-2; Deming's Catalogue; and Vt. Legislative Directory for 1876-7.

TRUMAN CHITTENDEN, fourth and youngest son of Gov. Thomas Chittenden, followed the business of his father and settled on a farm adjoining the homestead in Williston. Hon. David Read has thus sketched his public services and character in Vt. Hist. Magazine, Vol. I, p. 907:

He was justice of the peace thirty years, judge of probate eleven years, judge of the county court seven years, state councillor for twelve years, and twenty-six years a member of the corporation of the University of Vermont. He represented the town four years, and was ever employed in some public duties. His principles always aimed at truth and justice, and his example was a public blessing. He possessed a sound judgment and quick, penetrating mind, and sometimes indulged in wit and sarcasm.

TIMOTHY STANLEY, one of the original proprietors of Greensborough, settled his family in that town in 1792, though he had been there two years earlier, and as early as Dec. 1788 had lost a foot by frost in attending a meeting of the proprietors of Greensborough holden at Cabot. Notwithstanding this misfortune, he was one of the most enterprising and energetic of men in that town, and exceedingly serviceable and influential in the county for many years. He represented Greensborough thirteen years, first in 1795 and last in 1813, and was delegate in the Constitutional Convention of 1814. He was Clerk of Orleans County Court in 1801, and Judge from 1802 until 1814 and again 1815 until 1824. He was Presidential elector in 1820, and Councillor 1815 until 1825.—Thompson's Vermont; Deming's Catalogue; and Vt. Legislative Directory for 1876-7.

THOMAS HAMMOND, born in Newton, Mass., Feb. 20, 1762, at the age of four years was taken from his parents and bound to a farmer in Leicester, Mass. In 1778 he enlisted in the continental army, served nine months, and became fifth corporal—a position, he used to say, of which he felt prouder than of any he afterward held. In 1782 he came to Shaftsbury, Vt., and in 1783 to Pittsford. The vicissitudes of his early years were unfavorable to the development of a good character, but on his way to Pittsford he resolved to leave his bad deeds behind him, and strive thenceforth for a noble, sanctified manhood. In this he was successful, becoming "emphatically a soldier of the Cross," and eminently useful in the church and to the public. He represented Pittsford in the General Assembly nine years, 1794 until 1813, and in the Constitutional Convention of 1791; was judge of Rutland County Court seven years, 1812 until 1822; councillor 1816 until 1820; and during the war of 1812-14 was United States assessor. He died April 4 1847, in his 86th year. The late Hon. THOMAS D. HAMMOND of Orwell was one of his sons.—Caverly's History of Pittsford, in which see portrait; and Deming's Catalogue.

THEOPHILUS CRAWFORD, born in Union, Conn., April 25 1764, was brought by his father James to Westminster in 1769. In 1784 he served with the Vermont militia in quelling the disturbances of the Yorkers at Guilford. He was a delegate from Putney in the Constitutional Convention of 1822, and representative in the General Assembly of 1823; Sheriff of Windham County in 1819; and Councillor 1816 until 1820. He died in Jan. 1856.—B. H. Hall's History of Eastern Vermont; and Deming's Catalogue.

The engrossed bill entitled “an act to provide for the State printing,” was rec^d sent up from the House for revision & Concurrence, which being read it was Resolved not to concur in passing the same for the following reasons, which were sent to the house in writing with the bill, Viz.

1. The mode heretofore pursued for the Legislature itself to make the contracts for State printing is believed to be a good one, far preferable to the mode contemplated in the bill.

2. It is deemed inexpedient for the Legislature to vest any individual with the sole power of controlling absolutely the important concern of providing for the State printing for the time & manner contemplated in the bill.

3. The numerous & pressing applications which are from time to time made to the Legislature by persons for obtaining contracts for doing the State printing furnish strong reasons why the Legislature should not divest itself of that power & vest the same in a single individual, altho’ that individual possesses the confidence of the Legislature.

4. The bill provides that the person authorized to procure the State printing to be done may draw orders on the Treasury to an unlimited amount, not subject to examination or allowance of the auditor of accounts; it is believed that contracts so intimately affecting the fiscal concerns of the State & appropriations for making those contracts ought to be made by the Legislature.

to concur in passing the same for the following reasons, which were returned with the bill in writing to the General Assembly:

1. If the charter contains no express or implied condition or clause of defeasance, the present bill does not create any.

2. If the charter does contain any implied or express condition or clause of defeasance, the Supreme Court have cognizance of the same as incident to their powers; & if any forfeiture is alleged to have occurred, said Court have a right to try the question &, as the case may be, decree a forfeiture & vacate said charter, without the aid of a special act.

3^d If, as is suggested, the State's Attorney for Windsor County is from interest or other causes disqualified to become prosecutor, the act of 23^d of October 1797, reciting the mode of taking forfeitures of grants & charters, has provided for such case by giving the right to any other person to become prosecutor on complying with the requisitions of that act.

4. The whole case contemplated in the bill is amply provided for by the general act of 23^d of October 1797.

Rec^d the engrossed bill sent up for revision & concurrence &c. entitled “an act discharging the person of Joseph Carter Jr. from arrest & imprisonment;” which being read, thereupon resolved not to concur in passing the same into a Law, for the following reasons—Viz.

1. No bill of this kind ought to pass unless it shall fully appear that the past conduct of the individual has been such as is justified by the rules of morality & prudence. Should the Legislature deviate from this Rule, imprudence & prodigality would receive encouragement.

2^d. That the individual whose benefit is intended is not shewn to be a proper subject for the relief contemplated in the bill; which reasons were sent to the General Assembly in writing.

The engrossed bill entitled an act in amendment of “an act for regulating & governing the militia of this State,” was sent up from the house for revision & concurrence &c.—which being read Resolved not to concur with the house in passing the same, for the following reasons—Viz.—

1. The act now in force furnishes the militia officers with ample powers to correct the evils, if any exist, intended to be remedied by the bill.

2^d. The defect, if any exist, is not in the laws now in force but in the officers entrusted with the execution of that Law; if the officer entrusted with the execution of a law become remiss & suffers that law to be violated, the remedy in such case is not to be found in the enacting of a new law but in the disposition & faithfulness of the officer to do his duty.

3^d. The law now in force is sufficient, if executed according to the spirit of it.

4. The passing of the present bill would likely & almost inevitably create collisions between the civil & military officers of dangerous tendency.

5. Should the present bill pass into a Law it would be difficult if not impossible to carry it into effect.

6. It is more properly the business of the military than the civil authority to correct the evil, if any exist, contemplated in the bill.

RECORD OF THE GOVERNOR AND COUNCIL

SPECIAL SESSION AT MONTPELIER NOVEMBER 7, 1817.

STATE OF VERMONT SS.—A Journal of the proceedings of the Governor & Council of said State at a Session begun & holden at Montpelier in said State on the 7th day of November A. D. 1817 after the adjournment of the Legislature of said State without day.

His Excellency the Governor was pleased to issue the following notice to the Lt. Governor & the Hon^l the Members of Council—Viz.—

“STATE OF VERMONT SS.—I. Jonas Galusha, Governor in & over the said State of Vermont, to His Honor Paul Brigham, Lt. Gov., Honorable David Fay, Theophilus Crawford, Pliny Smith, Thomas Hammond, Joel Doolittle, Daniel Peaslee, W^m. Cahoon, Ezra Butler, Truman Chittenden, Frederick Bliss, & Timothy Stanley, Councillors in & for said State of Vermont—GREETING:—

“You are hereby notified forthwith to attend in the Council Chamber at Montpelier in said State for the purpose of considering such matters & things as may then & there be submitted for your consideration.

“Montpelier Nov. 7, 1817.

JONAS GALUSHA.

“By His Excellency’s Command, R. C. MALLARY, Secretary.”

Pursuant to the foregoing notice the Hon^l David Fay, Theophilus Crawford, Thomas Hammond, Joel Doolittle, Daniel Peaslee, William Cahoon, Timothy Stanley, Ezra Butler, Truman Chittenden & Frederick Bliss appeared in Council Chamber & a quorum being formed His Excellency the Governor gave information that Robert Temple Esquire, who had been elected to the office of first Side Judge of the Supreme Court, had declined accepting that office.—Therefore Resolved to proceed to fill the vacancy thus occasioned. The ballots being taken, sorted & counted for first side judge of the Supreme Court, it appeared that the Hon^l Joel Doolittle had a majority of the ballots & was declared to be duly elected.

The Hon^l Joel Doolittle appeared in Council Chamber & took the several oaths required by law as first side Judge of the Supreme Court.

The foregoing from page 482 to 483 inclusive [of manuscript Council Journals, Vol. 7.] is a true journal of the proceedings of the Governor & Council at their Special Session begun & holden at Montpelier on the Seventh day of November 1817.

Attest,

R. C. MALLARY, Secretary.

ROBERT TEMPLE was born in Braintree, Mass., in 1783, admitted to the bar of Rutland County in 1804, and settled in Castleton, removing subsequently to Rutland, where he died by his own hand October 7, 1834. He was Clerk of Rutland County Courts 1804 until 1819; Member and Secretary of the Council of Censors of 1813; and Secretary of the Governor and Council 1820 until 1823. He was an admirable Secretary; and the fact that he was elected to a judgeship of the highest class at the age of thirty-four, indicates that he was relied upon for more important qualifications. Henry Hall of Rutland sketched him in 1870 as "the very able Robert Temple, of the same family as Lord Palmerston—like Gen. McClellan, a descendant of Gov. Bradford of the Mayflower—also a descendant of the good Godiva, wife of the Mercian Earl Leofric, the Saxon king-maker, one thousand years ago." The editor of these volumes remembers him as a large, well formed and well dressed gentleman, and a leader among the members of fashionable society at Montpelier, who were accustomed in his day to come annually from the principal towns of the State at the opening of the legislature. Possibly if he had accepted the judgeship, his family and friends would have been spared the terrible shock which the cause and manner of his death occasioned. The family is now ably represented by an estimable officer in the navy, Capt. WILLIAM G. TEMPLE, who should have been honored in the centennial celebration of Rutland.—Vt. Hist. Magazine, Vol. III, titles Castleton and Rutland; Deming's Catalogue; and Vt. Legislative Directory, 1876-7.

FORTY-SECOND COUNCIL.

OCTOBER 1818 TO OCTOBER 1819.

JONAS GALUSHA, Shaftsbury, Governor.

PAUL BRIGHAM, Norwich, Lieut. Governor.

Councillors :

EZRA BUTLER, Waterbury,	DANIEL PEASLEE, Washington,
FREDERICK BLISS, Georgia,	THOMAS HAMMOND, Pittsford,
PLINY SMITH, Orwell,	THEOPHILUS CRAWFORD, Putney,
WILLIAM CAHOON, Lyndon,	DAVID FAX, Bennington,
TRUMAN CHITTENDEN, Williston,	AARON LELAND, Chester,
TIMOTHY STANLEY, Greensboro',	ABEL TOMLINSON, Vergennes.

ROLLIN C. MALLARY, Castleton, Secretary.

CHAPIN KEITH, Barre, Sheriff.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES.

AARON LELAND was pastor of the Baptist church in Chester at its organization in 1788, and he continued pastor until his death in 1833, a period of forty-five years. He was an active and influential politician of the Jeffersonian school, and had great influence in his town, county, and indeed through the State. He represented Chester in the Constitutional Convention of 1814 ; and in the General Assembly 1801 until 1808, 1809, 1810, and 1813, being Speaker of the House 1804 until 1808. He was Councillor 1818 until 1822, Lieut. Governor 1822 until 1827, and Presidential Elector in 1820. "His portly appearance in person overawed some, while his light and airy deportment sometimes displeased others." He was indeed so fat that he could neither put on nor take off his boots, and was as cheerful as fat — "a jolly Governor." But he had sterling qualities of character. Accustomed for many years to use alcoholic liquors freely, he joined in the early temperance movement both by word and deed. Called to administer the rite of baptism, he became chilled, and was urged to protect himself by stimulants. "No," said he, "I will die first." And he did die on the third day thereafter. The editor had this anecdote from the late Doct. Julius Y. Dewey of Montpelier. The famous hotel men of the name of Leland are of the elder's family.—Thompson's Vermont, article Chester; Deming's Catalogue; and Vt. Legislative Directory 1876-7.

ABEL TOMLINSON was High Sheriff of Addison County 1819 until 1824. At the State election a "People's Ticket" was run in opposition to the regular Jeffersonian ticket, and Mr. Tomlinson of the people's prevailed over John Willard of the regular ticket. Mr. Tomlinson was a Republican, and was re-elected in 1819.—Swift's History of Addison County; and Deming's Catalogue.

Resolved that His Honor the Lieutenant Governor be respectfully requested to furnish the Secretary of the Governor & Council with a copy of his Valedictory address this day delivered to the Legislature of this State, & that the Secretary be directed to record the same at large on the journals of Council as a testament of respect to his Honor for his long & faithful services to the State—which was read & adopted. Which address of His Honor the Lt Governor was as follows—

Gentlemen of the Council & of the House of Representatives—I embrace this opportunity to manifest my acceptance of the office to which I have been duly elected. And on this occasion I beg leave to observe that for more than forty years I have been honored by my fellow citizens with various offices both civil & military; some of them of minor grades, others of more importance—all of them honorable. In the discharge of the duties incident to those offices to say that I have never erred would be absurd, but from the repeated elections which I have had it might be charitably hoped that I had invariably meant to discharge the duties which devolved upon me in such a way as would best promote the public welfare.

I have now arrived at the age marked in Holy Writ as a time of labor & sorrow—at a period too in which the world has lost its charms. For several years past I have neglected making a similar communication to this [body] from considerations in some degree aside from my own judgment & feelings—but for a long time I have determined not to let the present occasion pass without manifesting, in this public manner, that it is my wish hereafter not to be considered as a candidate for any office.—I have chosen the present time to make this communication, that the members of the Legislature and others might have the best opportunity to select a citizen whom they could present to the consideration of the freemen at large to fill the office which I now hold.

I cannot refrain, at this time, as it probably is the only one which will ever present itself, to express the deep sense of gratitude which I feel to my fellow citizens for the many unmerited favors which they have so repeatedly bestowed upon me, & to offer up to that being who directs the destinies of worlds & of individuals in the best possible manner, my most fervent supplications for the prosperity & happiness of this State.

And I am now ready, for the last time, to take the necessary oaths of office as required by the Constitution & Laws of this State.

¹This is one of the most remarkable cases in the history of criminal jurisprudence. The testimony was so strong that the jury in one hour agreed upon a verdict that the respondents were guilty of the murder of Russel Colvin of Manchester in 1812: indeed Stephen Boorn confessed the crime, with many circumstances corroborated by the testimony. Jesse Boorn's sentence to death was commuted to imprisonment for life; but in Dec. 1819, about a month before Stephen Boorn was to have been executed, the man Colvin, who was supposed to have been murdered, returned to Manchester from New Jersey, where he had been living subsequent to April 1813.—For the testimony in this remarkable case, see printed Assembly Journal of 1819, pp. 185-196. A complete history of it has recently been published by Hon. LEONARD SARGEANT of Manchester, who was one of the counsel for the respondents. In 1820 the Boorns petitioned the General Assembly for compensation for their imprisonment and trial, which was refused.

"Hon. D. Azro A. Buck, Speaker of the House of Representatives. Sir,—A communication was received from the late Governor, which, together with the papers referred to therein, are herewith transmitted to the General Assembly. I am, Sir, yours respectfully,

RICHARD SKINNER.

State of Vermont, Council Chamber, Oct. 16, 1820."

The communication from the late Governor is as follows, to wit:

"MONTPELIER October 16, 1820.

His Excellency Richard Skinner. Sir,—I submit to you all such communications as have been made to me during the past year, together with such other matters as were connected with my official duty, and now, by me, deemed proper to be laid before the General Assembly for their information. I have therefore to desire that you would communicate them to the legislature, in such manner as you may consider most suitable.

¹Dudley Chase, Joel Doolittle, and William Brayton were elected.

The papers marked A, contain resolutions of several States relating to proposed amendments to the constitution of the United States.

The paper marked B, is a letter from the Secretary of State for the United States, requesting to be furnished with the laws of this State. I would here observe, that I have taken the liberty to forward to him four copies of the acts of the Gen^l Assembly, passed in the years 1817, 1818 and 1819, and also gave encouragement that the Gen^l Assembly would cause an equal number of the bound volumes of our laws to be forwarded to his office—one copy for the use of the Executive, one for each branch of the legislature, and one for the library.

Paper marked C, is a letter from the same relative to certain documents of the United States, which have been received and brought to this place, for the use mentioned in said letter.

I would also inform the General Assembly, that pursuant to an act passed Nov. 4, 1817, entitled “an act for ascertaining the claims of this State against the United States, and for obtaining the same.” I have used all diligence to procure a settlement of the same; but the almost insurmountable obstacles in the way of settling militia accounts of so long standing has been the cause of so long delay.

I have, however, in the month of March last, with the assistance of our delegation in Congress, especially of Mr. Rich, to whom I have made all my communications, obtained a settlement, so far as respects the expense for rations, transportation of baggage, and all other charges in marching the militia detached by order of the United States, in the late war, to their several places of destination, as directed by Gen^l Dearborn, and have received, as Governor of the State of Vermont, a draft from the Treasurer of the United States, on the Branch Bank of the United States at N. York, for the sum allowed, it being four thousand four hundred twenty one dollars & eighteen cents. I have endorsed and delivered the draft to the Treasurer of this State.

All the articles of camp equipage, including the powder & lead furnished by the several towns to the said Militia, were allowed in the settlement and paid for by the United States; they are therefore considered by the Treasury department as the property of the United States; and if any of them are in possession of this State, it is expected they will be turned over to the United States.

The other accounts named in said act were laid out of the settlement, as I had not been able to procure such evidence as would warrant any further proceeding on them.

The laws of the individual States, which have been received during the last year, for the use of the legislature, I have forwarded to this place and deposited them as usual. I have also received from the Secretary of State for the U. States, two hundred and ninety copies of the acts and laws of the U. States, passed the first session of the sixteenth Congress, which copies are at this place, ready for distribution. I have the honor to be, with sentiments of esteem your Excellency's most ob^t serv^t

The resolution introduced yesterday by Mr. Olin was called up and read, and on the question, “Shall the resolution pass?”—it was determined in the negative—so the resolution was rejected.

On motion, Ordered, that the Secretary be directed to prepare & report a form of pardon to persons confined in the State prison.

STATE OF VERMONT, IN COUNCIL Oct. 19, 1820.

The Hon. Jonas Galusha.—Sir,—On your retiring from public employments, and again resuming the pursuits of private life, the Governor & Council cannot refrain from an expression of their feelings. The knowledge which they possess of your character forbids, however, that warmth of expression which on other occasions they can with pleasure indulge. But a recurrence to the principal events of your life excites emotions which they cannot repress. The expression is due to you ; it is due to our fellow citizens. Some of us recollect, and all of us know, the zeal and ardor with which you embraced the cause of Independence ; the cheerful alacrity with which you repaired to the scene of one of our most brilliant victories ; and that heroic firmness with which you, by the side of your gallant friends, met the invaders of our country. Among the various employments to which you have been called by the cheerful voice of your fellow citizens, we notice with peculiar pleasure your labors as an associate of this executive Council. They were exerted at a time when all our institutions, like this Commonwealth, were in their infancy.

A direction was to be given to the moral & political principles of a small & dispersed people. The foundation of all those laws & regulations was to be laid, on which repose the happiness and security of society. In the accomplishment of such great & interesting objects, from which we derive those exalted blessings which now surround us, great is the obligation we are under to your paternal care. To such successful exertions as you have made for the prosperity of this rising State, and the ardent yet steady zeal which urged you forward in your honorable course, your fellow citizens were never strangers. They have, with liberal hands, presented you with their best gifts, the richest honors they could bestow, as the testimonials of their esteem for your private & public character. As a Judge, your conduct and intelligent integrity stands approved. As chief magistrate of the State, the people have decided in unequivocal language the high station you occupy in their respect & veneration. We are sensible that a period to public life must arrive. It has been your fortune to decide that period for yourself, at a time when you enjoyed the fullest flow of public confidence. Under such circumstances, deep and lasting must your virtuous merits be engraved on the hearts of your cotemporaries; and with satisfaction do we entertain the belief that posterity will place you among the best and wisest founders and supporters of this flourishing State. Our earnest wishes and fervent prayers for your happiness will be offered, and our warmest benedictions will attend you in private life; and under the care of a kind, protecting Providence, may you enjoy that pure satisfaction which ever dwells in the bosom of a good, a virtuous & honest man."

"IN COUNCIL OF CENSORS, Oct. 24, 1820.

The following report was read, and the question will the Council concur in the report, and adopt the resolution therein expressed, was decided in the affirmative.

MONTPELIER, Oct. 23, 1820.

To the Council of Censors now sitting.—The committee to whom was recommended the resolution directing and enquiring whether the law directing the select men of each town in this State to assess a tax of one cent on the dollar of the list of their respective towns for the support of schools.

Also, the laws regulating the rate of interest, the laws regulating the retailing of Spirituous liquors, and the laws regulating the licencing of hawkers and pedlars, have been duly executed :

Respectfully offer the following report, viz.

That the law entitled "an act for the support of schools," passed Nov. 3, A. D. 1810, making it the duty of the selectmen of the several towns of this State to assess a tax of one cent on the dollar on the list of the polls and ratable estate of the inhabitants of their respective towns, for the purpose of schooling, has not been duly executed ; but, by the selectmen of very many towns has been totally neglected. Your committee are of opinion that the law itself is defective, in that it imposes no penalty on such towus or selectmen for such neglects, and calls for legislative interference.

Your committee further report, that the law regulating the rate of interest has for the last septenary been grossly and openly violated by a large proportion of our monied citizens throughout the State; that with the pressure of the times, this evil appears to be encreasing, and calls aloud for remedy. Your committee are of opinion that a more faithful attention to their several duties in this respect by the State's Attornies and Grand Juries in the several Counties, though it might in some measure check, yet, owing to the difficulty in obtaining evidence, can never effectually remedy this evil; but that the legislative aid is indispensable.

Your committee further report, that the laws regulating the sale of spirituous liquors have not been strictly executed; but as these laws were principally, or at least in part, intended for the protection of the rights of a particular class of our citizens, and afford a sufficient remedy for their infringement, your committee do not consider any further attention to the subject necessary.

Your committee further report, that the laws providing for licensing hawkers & pedlars have, for aught that has been made to appear to your committee, been duly executed. To conclude, your committee recommend to the Council the adoption of the following resolution:

[Resolved, That the Secretary of this Council, forthwith, transmit a copy of this report and resolution to his Excellency the Governor, and the Honorable Council.]

All which is respectfully submitted.

JOSEPH SCOTT, }
A. CLARK, } Committee.
W^M. NUTTING, }

"The Honorable Paul Brigham, Sir,—At the last session of the Legislature, you expressed a desire to be relieved from the cares of public service, and requested the citizens to select some other person to perform the duties of the office which had so long devolved upon you. On seeing you go into retirement, feelings have been awakened which the Governor & Council should not repress. You are one of the first settlers, and of course among the number of the most aged men in the State. You have ever endeavored to promote its best interests; and your cares have been those of a father and a friend. During a period of more than forty years, in which your labors have been eminently conspicuous, the unrivalled prosperity of the State has erected to your memory, and to those with whom you have been associated, an imperishable monument. The repeated and continued calls of the people, in their annual elections, to perform offices of the highest responsibility, is the best evidence that you have ruled in their hearts and affections. In your active life, a forest and a desert has yielded to the hand of civilization—to arts & sciences—and the wilderness given place to this flourishing State. The change could not have been effected but by active industry and a practical application of those principles which give to virtue its just reward. If, Sir, you "have arrived to the age marked in Holy writ, as a time of labor and sorrow," the promises contained in that same word of life must afford you great consolation. To your counsels the State is much indebted for the liberality of its civil institutions. To your example she owes much in the frugal and plain habits of her citizens; and your moral and Christian life will have a lasting influence on the people. Be assured, Sir, you carry with you into the retirement you have chosen, the warmest affections of the Executive Council."

Whereupon, Resolved unanimously, that the foregoing address be adopted as the address of the Governor & Council, and Ordered, that the Secretary transmit the same to the Honorable Paul Brigham, late Lieut. Governor of this State.

"The Governor & Council assign the following reasons for non concurring in the bill entitled "an act repealing an act therein named," to wit : First, From the short time that the law proposed to be repealed has been in operation, no person can correctly decide whether the same is beneficial to the people or not : and the passing of laws & repealing them, before their good or bad effects even be known, appears improper. Second, The Council are of opinion, that the law, upon a fair experiment, will produce consequences beneficial to the people. That it will prevent, on the one hand, the too frequent giving credit to a class of people who are not able to pay such debts, while on the other, the obtaining such credit by that class of people is more generally injurious than beneficial. Third, The Council are also of opinion, that the continuation of this law, will, in its effects, oblige a certain class of men, who are now, by false pretences of want &c. obtaining credit from the unwary, and thereby maintaining themselves & families in idleness, to commence & follow sober & steady industry, and thereby gain a living in an honorable & commendable manner."

The legislature, by an act passed Nov. 3, 1798, entitled 'an act empowering the selectmen in the several towns in this State to take charge of and lease out the lands granted to the first settled minister, and to the use of the ministry,' conformably with the provisions of the charter, empowered the selectmen of said town to direct the avails of said lands to the use of the ministry in said town. And that the lands might be made productive to the uses originally designed by the charter, the legislature, on the 10th Nov. 1803, passed an additional law respecting the lands. And it is conceived the provisions of the present bill are incompetent to stand with the provisions of the existing laws on the same subject; and that the bill is inconsistent with the provisions of the charter." the following reasons, which were reported by Mr Olin & adopted, to wit: "It appears that the service, for which the payment is claimed, was for pursuing, apprehending and bringing to Justice a horse thief; and that in that pursuit, he went into the province of Canada, & seized the culprit, without the aid of the civil magistrate; and by unauthorized force, brought him over the province line. However useful it may seem to those who reside near the province line, to administer to themselves prompt relief, without awaiting the delays of a legal course; and notwithstanding the consent of the inhabitants the other side of the province line, it is believed that the practice cannot be justified; as the tendency of such a practice is to produce forcible onsets, and violent opposition; the natural consequence of which is so well known to every observer. A recurrence to facts shows that the above view of the case is not imaginary. The case of the unfortunate Gregg, who was smuggled out of Canada about 15 or 16 years past, and who was drowned in the lake on the way to Vermont, in which, but for the laudable exertion of Gov. Tichenor, several respectable citizens of this State must have been given up to take a trial for murder, shews the consequence towards which every transaction of that kind is tending. It is therefore believed that it would be improper in the extreme, for the government to do any act that would encourage a course of proceedings tending to such disagreeable consequences."

The House also sent up for revision &c. an engrossed bill entitled "an act for electing Representatives to the Congress of the United States, and directing the mode of their election," which was read. APPENDIX A.

GOVERNOR'S SPEECHES TO THE LEGISLATURE—1813-1821

SPEECH OF GOV. MARTIN CHITTENDEN—1813.¹

Gentlemen of the Council, and Gentlemen of the House of Representatives,—We meet under prospects not the most flattering. Our political horizon is encircled with clouds somewhat portentous. It is a period peculiarly interesting, as it respects our national and state affairs, and most eventful in the history of the world: a crisis demanding the united wisdom, prudence, and firmness of the whole community. Under these views and prospects, and with a due sense of my own inexperience and imperfections, it is with extreme diffidence that I enter upon the duties assigned me by the constituted authorities of a moral and enlightened people. But I do it cheerfully, relying on that candor and indulgence, which I have often heretofore experienced.

The national constitution having wisely placed our foreign relations in the hands and under the controul of the general government, our attention will principally be directed to the local concerns of the State. To provide for the protection and promote the greatest possible prosperity and happiness of every class of citizens, being the legitimate object of all wise and free governments, will necessarily claim your attention. The peculiar situation, under which I am called to enter upon the duties of the Chief Magistrate, must afford an apology for not laying before you, at this time, so particular a view of the affairs of the State as might be desirable. But I have the satisfaction of believing that the wisdom and intelligence of the legislature, composed of men elected from every portion of the State, and intimately acquainted with the feelings and necessities of their constituents, will furnish all the information necessary to promote the public interest.

The preservation of all free governments principally depending on the virtue and intelligence of the great body of the people, forcibly recommends the propriety of selecting for office men distinguished for virtue and talents; such as will enforce their precepts by moral and virtuous example; disregarding those local and ² party views which stimulate one part of the community to trample on the rights of the other, and to sport with the feelings and happiness of their fellow men. In just ret-tribution, however, for this perversion of reason, this violation of duty, it will generally be found that this spirit is not less destructive to the happiness of the aggressor than of the aggrieved.

The importance of the subject of the militia will not fail to claim your deliberate consideration. I have always considered this force peculiarly adapted and exclusively assigned for the service and protection of the respective States; excepting in cases provided for by the national constitution, viz. to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrection, and repel invasions. It never could have been contemplated by the framers of our excellent constitution, who, it appears, in the most cautious manner, guarded the sovereignty of the States, or by the States, who adopted it, that the whole body of the militia were, by any kind of magic, at once to be transformed into a regular army for the purpose of foreign conquest; and it is to be regretted, that a construction should have been given to the constitution, so peculiarly burdensome and oppressive to that important class of our fellow citizens.

The known spirit and patriotism of the militia forbid the supposition that they will not cheerfully perform their duty, when it shall be clearly defined, and their rights permanently secured; and nothing is now wanting but proper regulations and suitable encouragement to render them an efficient force for all the purposes contemplated by the national and state constitutions. But a recurrence to our present militia system will evince the propriety of many alterations and amendments. The propriety, likewise, of many alterations in our present code of laws may be apparent. But that subject being under the consideration of the Hon. Council of Censors, I would suggest the propriety of waiting the result of their deliberations.

The state of our financial concerns will be derived from the Treasury Department; and the known integrity and ability, with which the duties of that office have been performed, leaves no room to doubt its correctness. And it is to be hoped that no additional burdens will be necessary to meet the current expences of the present year. A consideration of the embarrassed situation of our commerce—the great source of national and individual income in times of prosperity,—and the heavy burdens soon to be imposed in the form of direct and internal taxes, cannot fail to recommend a strict attention to the principles of economy, both public and private.

The national constitution very justly enjoins due obedience to all the laws and regulations which are made in conformity to it. But the same charter of our political rights ensures us the freedom of speech; a right never to be resigned while a single vestige of civil liberty remains. It is, therefore, our unquestionable right, and, at periods like the present, it may be considered our duty, not only to reflect on the state of our public affairs, but with a manly and temperate frankness, becoming freemen, to express our sentiments respecting them; and in the exercise of all fair and constitutional means, endeavour to produce such a state of things as will promote a just, secure and honourable peace, and avert the evils we feel, and the much greater, which we have reason to expect, from a war with one of the most powerful nations of Europe, and from the toils and intrigues, still more dangerous, of another. The war, in which we are engaged, would require the united wisdom and energy of the nation to sustain. It was declared under circumstances which forcibly induced a great proportion of the people to consider it at least doubtful, as to its necessity, expedience, or justice. And its continuance has become still more so, since the removal of the Orders in Council, the principal alledged cause of it. The subject of impressment never having been considered a sufficient cause of war by either of the preceding administrations, and having been once adjusted by two of the present cabinet, Messrs. Monroe and Pinckney, ministers on our part, in such a manner as was by them stated to be both safe and honourable to our country, it would seem that it ought not now to be considered an insuperable obstacle to a fair and honourable peace, or an adequate cause for a protracted, expensive and destructive war. The conquest of the Canadas, of which so much has been said, if desirable under any circumstances, must be considered a poor compensation for the sacrifices, which are and must necessarily be made. Notwithstanding the multiplied embarrassments, and afflictive judgments, with which we are visited, yet as a people, our situation is enviable compared with that of many of our fellow men, who are groaning under the iron hand of despotism and oppression; and we have the highest reason to express, with grateful hearts, our dependence on an indulgent Providence for the bounties of the present season, and other unmerited blessings we still enjoy.

Should the documents of the office furnish matter for your consideration, it will be made the subject of a future communication. In the prosecution of the important business of the session, you may be assured, that every measure calculated to promote the security, prosperity, or happiness of our constituents, shall meet with my cordial co-operation and support. I am sensible, that in times of party heat and general commotion, passion too often usurps the place of reason; which seldom fails to lead to an improper result. But, with a firm reliance on the assistance of Divine Providence, I trust we shall never disregard those duties, which are enforced by the national and state constitutions, and which, if steadily pursued, will not fail to result in the promotion of the public good.

MARTIN CHITTENDEN.

Chauncy Langdon, George Robinson, [federalists] and William A. Griswold [anti-federalist,] were appointed to draft an answer to this speech, and the majority made a report echoing the speech, which was adopted by the House, 96 to 89. Seventy-nine members in the minority entered a protest on the journal, which is an elaborate document, replying to and condemning the political portions of the speech and answer. — See printed Assembly Journal of 1813, pp. 137, 198.

SPEECH OF GOV. MARTIN CHITTENDEN — 1814.¹

Gentlemen of the Council, and Gentlemen of the House of Representatives, — The unsolicited approbation of my conduct the year past, considering the extreme embarrassments under which I entered upon the duties of my office, is highly gratifying, and will not fail to produce renewed exertion to promote the best interests of my fellow citizens. At the same time it affords the pleasing hope that my future services in the discharge of the duties of the office, which I have again undertaken, will be considered with the same indulgence. Without it, I should despair of discharging those duties in a satisfactory manner at this most difficult and eventful period.

The true patriot can submit to no sacrifice of truth or principle, to procure his own advancement, or promote the interests or views of a party. Men may change, and parties may change — but truth, principle and virtue are immutable. It ought, therefore, to be our firm determination to pursue the plain path of duty with steadiness and fidelity.

In declaring my undeviating attachment to the principles of our wise and excellent system of government, independently of any regard, or blind devotion, to those who may have administered it, I am sensible that high sounding professions are not the surest test of sincerity, and shall, therefore, only refer you to the general tenor of my conduct for future expectations.

Our foreign relations and defensive operations being exclusively committed to the management of the general government, excepting in particular cases, in which assistance may be required, our attention is principally confined to the local concerns of the State. And it affords me great pleasure to have it in my power to observe, that the internal quiet, security and prosperity of our fellow citizens, for the year past, has been unexampled for times like the present.

Justice has been promptly, and, I believe, impartially administered, the laws duly respected, and litigation gradually diminishing—the natural and certain consequence of a well placed confidence in an upright and intelligent judiciary. Our fiscal concerns have been conducted with that fidelity and correctness which were to be expected from the acknowledged talents and integrity of the officer at the head of that department.

Our schools and seminaries of learning have not suffered that diminution and depression which might have been expected, excepting that it has been deemed advisable that the operations of one nearest the seat of war¹ should suffer a temporary suspension, that, at a future and more favorable period, they might be resumed, under better prospects and with increased vigor and energy.

The economy and correctness with which that liberal and humane institution, established for the security and correction of state criminals, has been conducted, affords the consoling prospect of its great usefulness to the community, evinces a general improvement in the state of society, and probably will afford some revenue to the State.

Notwithstanding the corrupting and demoralizing tendency of a state of war, our citizens have enjoyed their civil and religious privileges in an unusual degree.

The distinguished talents, integrity, and experience, of which your honorable body is composed, will render my duties less arduous, and afford a sure pledge to our constituents that their best interests will be promoted.

Man never appears in a more responsible and truly dignified station, than when called to act as a representative of a free, sovereign, and independent people. We are selected from among our fellow citizens, not for the base and degrading purpose of securing our own promotion, aggrandizing our particular friends, or to favor the views and interests of a party—but to consider the whole community as one common family, and like faithful guardians of their rights, endeavour to promote the general welfare.

Yours is the duty, and on you, gentlemen, rests the responsibility, of selecting proper persons to fill the various offices in this State for the ensuing year—persons to whom we may safely trust the administration of justice in all its important branches, and on whom we must, in a great measure, depend for the preservation of the peace and internal quiet of the state. It will likewise become your duty to select a suitable person to represent this State in the Senate of the United States from and after the third day of March next.

In the execution of these important duties, the most perfect confidence is entertained, that you will, unbiassed by local or party considerations, be influenced by a single view to the public good.

The great importance of a well organized militia in a free state cannot escape the notice of a wise legislature. The want of precision and energy in our present military system must be apparent to every man who is conversant in military affairs, and demands a revision to adapt it to the exigencies arising from our exposed situation. It would be desirable that the burthen should be equalized, as far as is practicable, that the weight may not rest on those who are least able to bear it.

We have a right to demand from the general government full protection and security. Still it is but too evident from past experience, that much depends upon our own exertions. May not this consideration suggest the expediency of adopting some further measures for arming the militia, and providing field artillery and munitions of war, which may be applicable to sudden emergencies? We have before us the example of many of our sister states for raising a small volunteer corps, which may be relied on, in case of sudden alarm, and serve as a rallying point for other and efficient aid.

As we are authorized by the constitution to look to the general government for that protection which our exposed situation may require, it must be perfectly evident, that the militia were only designed to be called in aid of the regular force in particular cases. Those instances, which have occurred during the last year, have been met by our patriotic and brave citizens with a promptitude, spirit and zeal which are highly honorable to themselves, and which render them worthy of the gratitude of their country.

To meet a request of Gen. MACOMB, for assistance, on the late incursion of the enemy, which terminated so gloriously for the American arms, there being no portion of the militia detached or called for by the President, in conformity to the laws of the United States, it was considered that a call upon our patriotic citizens for their voluntary services was the only mode, by which efficient and timely aid could possibly be afforded.

The result has been such, as many of you, gentlemen, have witnessed. It far exceeded, in extent, our reasonable expectations. By it the enemy have been taught a useful, although mortifying lesson, that the soil of Freemen will not bear the tread of hostile feet with impunity.

At the same time it reflects the highest honor on the patriotism, spirit and valor of our fellow citizens, who, without distinction of age, character, or party, were ready to brave danger, in its most formidable appearance, for the defence of their country. And it would seem, that it ought to palsy the tongue of slander—every desirable object having been secured, and in a manner the least burdensome and offensive to the feelings of a free and enlightened people.

Much is due to Gen. STRONG, and our brave volunteers; and I am requested by the Secretary of War to present them the thanks of the general government "for their prompt succor and gallant conduct in the late critical state of this frontier."

I should do injustice to my own feelings, as well as violence to every correct principle, were I to refrain from testifying the high sense which I entertain of the brilliant achievement of Commodore MACDONOUGH, and his intrepid associates, on Lake Champlain, over a far superior naval force—an achievement which renders all encomium feeble and inadequate.

I should likewise do injustice, if I should neglect to notice the cool, persevering, and brave conduct of Brig. Gen. MACOMB, and his alike brave associates in arms, in the discomfiture of a greatly superior force of veteran troops, commanded by experienced officers.

These glorious achievements are not surpassed in the records of naval and military warfare. New lustre is added to the national character. But the effects are more immediately experienced by the northern sections of the States of Vermont and New York.

This late special interference of the Almighty in our behalf, in completely defeating the hostile designs of the enemy on our northern borders, cannot fail to render it a subject of respectful legislative notice. And although it may not be in our power to add to the laurels of those gallant commanders, and their brave associates, who, under Providence, were the authors of our protection and safety, yet we may express our gratitude to heaven, and to them, for so great a deliverance.

I have received a letter from the governor of the State of Pennsylvania, which enclosed a resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives of that State, proposing an amendment of the constitution of the United States,—by which the term of service of Senators in Congress shall be reduced from six to four years. I have received, likewise, a letter from the governor of the State of Tennessee, enclosing a resolution of the general assembly of that State proposing an amendment of the same import. These papers will be laid before you. And should any thing further of importance come to my knowledge during the present session, of which you are not possessed, it will be made the subject of a special communication.

On the subject of the war, in which our country is most unfortunately engaged, I feel disposed, at this critical period, to say as little as may be consistent with duty. But I consider it due to myself, and more especially to my constituents, explicitly to state, that the events of the war have in no wise altered my opinion of its origin, or its progress. I have conscientiously and uniformly disapproved of it, as unnecessary, unwise and hopeless, in all its offensive operations.—And notwithstanding the few brilliant successes we have met with in our operations of defence, I can see very little in its general complexion, which affords the least consolation.

Many very considerable places on our seaboard are now in the possession of the enemy. The capital of our country, that proud monument of better times, has been possessed and destroyed by him—a humiliating reflection to every real American. And I consider, that we are now suffering the evils which have, from the mistakes and misconduct of rulers, befallen this, as well as most of the nations of the earth.

It therefore becomes us to look calmly and firmly on our dangers, and meet them like men, who are mindful of what they owe to their own characters, and what they owe to their country.

It would have afforded me heartfelt satisfaction to have been able to announce to you the return of peace to an afflicted people. But our reasonable hopes, on this subject, not having been realized, and the particular spirit, with which the war appears to be prosecuted by the enemy, renders defensive measures and operations not only necessary, but righteous and just, in which we may engage with feelings most honorable and praiseworthy, and with a firm reliance on the Almighty, who has never forsaken us in the hour of peril.

I shall now, gentlemen, cheerfully proceed in the discharge of the duties of the office assigned me,—and in the prosecution of the business of the present session, you may be assured of my cordial co-operation in every measure, which has for its object the promotion of the public good.

MARTIN CHITTENDEN.

David Edmond and Charles K. Williams (federalists,) and William A. Griswold (anti-federalist,) were appointed a committee to draft an answer to the foregoing speech, and a report echoing the speech in every particular was the result. Mr. Griswold reported a substitute, modifying such portions as were distasteful to the minority in the House, which was rejected, yeas 85, nays 109. Henry Olin and Nathaniel Niles proposed amendments for the same purpose, which were rejected by like votes; when the answer was adopted, 106 to 85. Eighty-two members subsequently entered a protest on the journal of the House. See printed Assembly Journal of 1814, pp. 44-46, 108-110, 112, 117-121, 172-175.

SPEECH OF GOV. GALUSHA—1815.¹

Gentlemen of the Council, and Gentlemen of the House of Representatives,—We are assembled at a highly interesting period; a period succeeding the most surprising events that ever burst upon the view of an astonished world. The storm of war, which had overspread the whole civilized world, and threatened almost universal ruin, has, by the overruling hand of Omnipotence, been suddenly hushed to silence. The great commotions, by which Europe was shaken to its centre, have, for a moment, subsided. The important contest in which we were deeply engaged with one of the most potent nations of the earth, has been happily terminated; and instead of the horrors of war, we are surrounded with all the rich blessings of peace. While we behold, most conspicuous, the hand of that Being, who “enlargeth the nations, and straiteneth them;” and while our hearts glow with gratitude for the signal displays of His beneficence, in protecting and conducting us safely and triumphantly through our late struggle for the support of our dearest rights and national independence, let us look to Him for wisdom to direct us in our deliberations, and aid to such a discharge of our legislative duties, as shall conduce to the highest interest of our constituents, and the best good of the Union.

A time of peace is a time for cool and deliberate reflection, when all the angry passions, which are too prevalent in war, ought to be quelled, and when the sufferings and dangers to which we have been exposed, together with the causes of those dangers and sufferings, should be carefully sought, and critically examined, for the purpose of avoiding future evils, and ensuring future safety. Notwithstanding the European powers now seem tranquil, yet the unexpected and extraordinary changes, recent in that devoted country, justify our fears that new wars may soon arise from some unseen cause, and put our rights and liberties again in jeopardy. During the calm, then, we ought, by an indissoluble union, to be prepared for any storm that may arise.

I do not design to enter upon an investigation of the causes, progress and termination of the late war with Great Britain. Permit me, however, to observe, that no neutral nation was ever more cautious of giving offence to belligerent powers, than were the United States; and no nation that had the least confidence in its strength to oppose, ever suffered so long, such flagrant abuse of its rights, without resorting to arms. But when the love of peace could no longer restrain its votaries from assuming an attitude to defend their sacred rights, and the nation's honor, the constituted authorities of our country declared a war which has progressed and terminated in such a manner, as has wholly disappointed the proud expectations of our enemy, and, in the view of the world, shed a lustre on our national character, which I hope no future disgrace may tarnish.

The nations of Europe, after suffering an almost incalculable destruction of property, after drenching the earth with blood, and clothing their fields with carnage, have sunk down under governments no less despotic, with immense additional burthens. Aided by protestant powers, the Pope is again restored, and Spain again groans under the terrors of the Inquisition. France is degraded to a state of wretchedness, unparalleled, except in Poland; for, notwithstanding the pledge of kings, that, when Napoleon was secured, France should remain unmolested in the enjoyment of her liberties and independence, yet, when that object was accomplished, royal faith was violated, and the strongholds of the kingdom put in possession of foreign mercenary troops, who stripped the inhabitants of their wealth, and spread devastation and terror through that opulent, polished, and late powerful nation: while their stupid monarch sits quiet on his throne, without the least exertion to preserve his own honor, or any seeming concern for the interests and the happiness of the people over whom he nominally reigns.

If from beholding the unhappy state of Europe, we turn our eyes to ill-fated Asia, there we behold despotism and misery reigning triumphant. Even in that vast and populous territory, which has been subjected to the British government, so far are oppression and superstition from being exterminated by England's boasted love of liberty and religion, that the chains of cruelty, ignorance and idolatry are rivetted by the hand of that nation which is almost worshipped for its professed christianity. Idols and idol priests are supported by the British government of the Indies, and a revenue drawn by that government from the collection of a tax levied on those deluded pilgrims, who go to worship, and frequently to sacrifice themselves in blind devotion to their lifeless gods.

I do not mention these things thinking that they have any immediate connection with the business of this legislature; but, that we, by reviewing the wreck of nations, and the horrors of despotism, may the higher prize, and more carefully guard the rights, and firmly support the principles of a free, equal, and happy government. Of all the nations of the earth, the United States, alone, are left to support a government whose basis is equal liberty, and whose sovereignty is the will of the people. While, then, we behold a world in chains, and consider that we belong to the same mass of being of which other nations are composed, ought we not to be jealous of our rights, and suspicious of usurpers?

From what has already appeared, is it uncharitable to say, that the same restless ambition, which has subverted former republics, and which ever grasps at power regardless of right; now rankles in the very bosom of our country. Then, as faithful guardians of the people's rights, ought we not carefully to watch over our own hearts, check every inordinate desire, and be vigilant and active, lest the subjects of that aspiring ambition should overturn the fair temple of liberty, and ride into unlimited power, over the crumbling monuments of freedom, erected at the expense of the blood of our heroes? Our rights and independence cannot be too well guarded; for though few will openly declaim against a republican form of government, as being the most happy, while the people continue tranquil among themselves, and undisturbed by foreign wars—yet, many have presumed to affirm, that it is too weak, and too tardy in its operations, to protect its citizens against domestic insurgents, or foreign invaders. But we have seen, by experience, the fallacy of such assertions; for in the late contest, the strength of our government has been amply proved, even at a time when party spirit prevailed to as high a degree as an enlightened populace would admit.

Although, in the first stages of the war, owing to a long interval of peace, which it was the interest and happiness of our government to cherish, until safety forbid, we were destitute of such experienced officers and disciplined troops, as seemed requisite to meet the well tutored hosts of one of the most formidable nations in the world, whose perpetual wars keep her in constant readiness for any new military enterprise; and notwithstanding we suffered some disasters through the failure of a few, who did no honor to their commissions, yet, in a short period, was our army so officered and disciplined, that whenever the enemy came in contact with an equal, and often an inferior number of our troops, he was compelled to yield the palm of victory, and either surrender, or retire from the scene of action, confused, disgraced, and abashed. Witness our illustrious victories near the shores of Erie. Even our militia have trampled on the fading laurels of British prowess. What was the state of Proctor in the West? Let Harrison reply. Where is that formidable army that invaded from the North? Let Prevost inform. Where are the boasting legions, flushed with European victories, that assailed the South? Let England answer with a sigh; let Jackson point to their relics; while the faithful page of history records their doom!

Our naval victories have been no less conspicuous. On the ocean, and on the lakes, our flag has waved triumphant over Britain's wounded pride, and expiring naval glory. In the Mediterranean, the brave Decatur, and his gallant fellows, with but a part of their little squadron, have, in the space of a few days, humbled the Dey of Algiers, and compelled him to accept a peace dictated by the victors. This, several of the great naval powers of Europe have frequently attempted in vain.

Who, then, but with a blush can speak of the weakness of our government to withstand foreign invasion.

And has it not proved equally adequate to the suppression of insurrection? Has not every former faction been crushed in its first overt acts of opposition? And where is that most formidable of all factions, which threatened the dismemberment of the Union, or the total subversion of our constitution and government? Although it was long disseminating its poison, and originating its plans, it perished at last in embryo. Happy for its supporters that it ended in resolutions and declamations; for, had their threatened hostilities actually commenced, they would have been trampled in the dust by the very people that they were endeavouring to allure to ruin.¹

I do not make these remarks with a design to revive and strengthen those party prejudices, which unhappily exist among us, but to increase our confidence in that government which we have adopted, and to excite our energies to counteract every attempt to overthrow it, for I well know that a republican government rests, principally, on the union of the people. A union formed and maintained, for the support of rational liberty, both civil and religious, is an object so dear to me, that I have not failed to recommend it on all suitable occasions; and hope ever to recommend it by corresponding example.

I rejoice that we have been so far united, that the constitution of this, as well as that of the United States, has survived the violence of the storm, and defied the threatening surges of the times. When the citizens of this State saw an attempt at such an alteration in their constitution, as would remove the election and accountability of many of their officers, at a greater, and truly dangerous distance from them — without distinction of party, they rallied round the standard of their liberty, and in the exercise of their sovereignty, secured the happy form and principles of a government, whose peculiar blessings they had long enjoyed.¹

I am far from believing that any human government is so refined as to admit of no improvement; yet, amendments should be made in a time of general tranquility; when the passions and prejudices of the people are at rest; when they can enter upon the most cool and deliberate investigation; and then should they proceed with the utmost caution; for, when a right is once surrendered, it is seldom regained but by wading through scenes of blood, and even then, too frequently, the most desperate efforts are in vain. The struggles of France, in her first revolution, to emancipate herself from the galling chains of despotism, are an awful lesson to the world; and should teach us the danger and folly of neglecting our rights, even while in the most quiet possession, lest, by our supineness, we lose those inestimable blessings, which we have been able to obtain through the difficulties and dangers of war — for the aspiring and ambitious are ever ready to grasp the rights and privileges of the people, the moment they are within their reach.

Not having of late been engaged in the business of legislation, and fearing that I have already trespassed upon your patience, I shall not attempt, at this time, to point out such alterations and amendments in our laws as the change of times and other causes may require.

The education of our youth is an object of such importance, that it cannot fail of exciting your attention, and receiving your fostering care.

In the full and prosperous tide of commerce, I trust you will not neglect our infant manufactures, which, if rightly improved, cannot fail to increase our wealth and real independence.

I shall at all times rely on your cordial support, in the faithful discharge of the arduous duties that devolve upon me. And having endeavoured to impress your minds with a due sense of the responsibility, that rests on the representatives of a free people, I entertain the highest confidence in your wisdom and integrity, to perform every legislative duty, and especially to supply the various offices within your jurisdiction, by the appointment of such persons as are lovers of justice, and suitably qualified to fill their several stations so as shall conduce to the safety and happiness of individuals, as well as the honor and interests of the State.

All such communications as I may receive, for your consideration, either from the general government, from sister States, or any other source, will be seasonably laid before you.

I shall, gentlemen, cheerfully concur with you, in every measure calculated to promote the welfare of our constituents; and it is my ardent desire, that a spirit of harmony may prevail among us — and that the blessing of that Supreme Being, who presides over the affairs of states and nations, may attend us in all our deliberations. JONAS GALUSHA.

October, 1815.

¹The allusion here is specially to an amendment proposed by the fifth Council of Censors of 1813-14, (composed of Federalists,) that the Judges of the Supreme Court should hold their office during good behavior, though removable by a concurrent vote of two thirds of each house of the legislature. This, and all the proposed amendments, the Convention of 1814 rejected by a vast majority.—See Thompson's Vermont, Part II, p. 125.

Richard Skinner of Manchester, and Heman Allen of Colchester (anti-federalists,) and George Robinson of Burlington (federalist,) were appointed a committee to draft an answer to the speech, and the majority made a report responding to the sentiments of the governor, which was adopted by the General Assembly, 109 to 86. — See printed Assembly Journal of 1815, pp. 55-57, 114.

SPEECH OF GOV. GALUSHA. — 1816.¹

Gentlemen of the Council, and Gentlemen of the House of Representatives, — We have, through the interposition of an indulgent Providence, the pleasure to meet under the most agreeable circumstances, at this annual session of the General Assembly, to transact the ordinary business of legislation, and deliberate on the most prudent means to secure and advance the prosperity and happiness of our constituents. Our country is at peace with all nations, as also with our savage neighbours; and no appearances of hostility, or internal disturbances, threaten our repose. Let us, therefore, with hearts of gratitude for past and present favours, still look to Him who holds the destinies of all men in his hands, for future blessings, and for wisdom to guide us in all our transactions.

A time of peace is a fit time to correct our errors, to cement our union, to make the necessary reform in our laws, and to recur to, and cherish the fundamental principles of our government. The fall of all former republics, or their existing in name only, ought to be a sufficient caution to us to be watchful of our rights, and guard against every innovation dangerous to liberty.

It is a correct maxim, that virtue is the basis of a republican government; and where vice predominates, tyranny, in some shape, ensues. Virtue, therefore, ought to be the pole star to guide us in all our deliberations; and the whole system of law should be adapted to promote that vital principle. I entertain the highest confidence in you, gentlemen, that in all the appointments of officers, of which you are the electors, you will have regard to men of integrity and virtue as well as of information and talents. Did we possess the best possible system of human laws, yet, should they be disregarded, and remain unenforced by the civil magistrate, it would avail us nothing; vice would soon tyrannize over moral virtue, and destroy the best of human governments.

Education is among the first objects of a free people; for a people who lose the knowledge of their rights will not long enjoy the fruits of liberty. A republican government is a government of the people; and the virtue and intelligence of the people are its security and its strength. It is, therefore, highly necessary that the great body of the people should be well informed, and that each individual should attain to such a degree of literature, as to be able, with proper attention, to secure his property, understand and guard his rights, and, if called to fill a public station, or practice in any professional business, with due attention to his particular calling, to discharge his duty with advantage to himself, and satisfaction to the publick, in order that genius and talents be not smothered in ignorance, and their brightness and utility obscured by poverty. Notwithstanding a Franklin, and others, through indefatigable industry, and the peculiar favour of Providence, have risen from obscurity to eminence, yet, who can say how many men of vigorous talents, and natural capacities, have struggled in vain, and, leaving no testimony of usefulness, their names have passed into oblivion.

The great improvement in the education of youth in this state within a few years past, is truly gratifying. In our common schools, we experience the benefit of instructors from the colleges and academies, by which means numbers of good English scholars are daily emerging from our town schools.

If any further aid to science should be deemed necessary, I doubt not that it will receive all the encouragement that the present circumstances of the state will admit.

Encomiums on the government of our country, at this time, are unnecessary, since its benefits are so generally experienced and acknowledged by every prudent and virtuous citizen, and its strength and liberality, so recently tested. The constant emigration to this country from under the governments of Europe, is an evidence that we possess privileges and blessings, superiour to the other nations of the earth. It, therefore, becomes us to pursue such measures as will tend to strengthen our union, increase harmony and friendship, and perpetuate the blessings of our free, liberal, and happy government.

The cheerfulness with which the citizens of this State have paid their taxes, laid by the general government, in consequence of the expenses of the late war, which has so gloriously terminated in the exaltation of our national character, is a source of peculiar satisfaction. The diminution of taxes at the last session of Congress, and the present prospect of the continuance of peace, give us strong reason to hope that the direct tax will wholly cease after the present year; an object very desirable, considering the extreme scarcity of a circulating medium in this part of the union — but this we must submit to the sound discretion of the national government, while we manage with suitable economy the pecuniary affairs of our own State.

The depressed situation of our infant manufactories, since the return of peace, is a matter of serious concern. Any encouragement that can, consistently be given them, I trust, will not be withheld.

In compliance with a resolution of the General Assembly, passed at their last session, I lost no time in preparing, and sending, by Major Seth Cushman, who was appointed an agent for that purpose, an address to His Excellency Sir Gordon Drummond, then governor of the Province of Lower Canada, requesting the pardon and release of Samuel Hugh, a citizen of this State, who was then suffering punishment in one of the prisons in said Province, under a sentence of the hon. court of King's Bench, for the crime of man-slaughter; and I have the pleasure to inform you that his excellency, in a prompt and honourable manner, granted a pardon to the said Samuel Hugh, and caused him to be immediately released from his confinement, and restored to his family and friends.¹

¹ Hugh was a citizen of Canaan, who, in 1815, on a charge of murdering David Morrill, a citizen of Canada, had been found guilty of man-slaughter, and sentenced to be branded in the hand and to suffer imprisonment for six months. It is apparent that he must have suffered the sentence to a large degree. A committee of the General Assembly of 1815 reported that Hugh had been "wrongfully and unjustly convicted," and consequently lost most of his personal property, whereupon an act was passed granting Mrs. Hugh $1000, and a resolution adopted asking for a pardon to Hugh.—See printed Assembly Journal of 1815, pp. 110, 142; and Laws of 1815, p. 24.

It becomes necessary for the legislature to make provision for, and direct in what manner, electors shall be chosen, on the part of this state, to vote for a President and Vice President of the United States, to serve for the term of four years from and after the third day of March next.

By a law of the United States, approved April 20th, 1816, entitled "an act concerning field officers of the militia," it is provided, that from and after the first day of May then next, instead of one lieutenant colonel commandant to each regiment, and one major to each battalion, there shall be one colonel, one lieutenant colonel, and one major to each regiment of militia, consisting of two battalions; and when there shall be but one battalion it shall be commanded by a major. It, therefore, becomes necessary to pass a law of this State correspondent to the law of the United States, and that the field officers of the militia be commissioned accordingly. Any further improvement that you may deem expedient in the militia system, will meet with my warmest support; as I have ever considered a well disciplined and well furnished militia an object of the first importance in a free government.

I avail myself of this opportunity to inform you, that I have received a deed, executed by the Treasurer of this State, in compliance with an act of the legislature, to Capt. Thomas McDonough, of the navy of the United States, of a tract of land lying at Cumberland Head, in Plattsburgh, State of New York. I have addressed Capt. McDonough on the subject, but have not yet received his answer.

Several communications have been made to me by the executives of our sister States, relative to proposals of amendment to the constitution of the United States.

I have also received a letter from the Hon. DE WITT CLINTON, president of a board of commissioners, appointed by the legislature of the State of New York for the purpose of examining the ground between Lake Champlain and Hudson river, and reporting on the practicability of uniting those important waters by a canal navigation:—an object which, if practicable, would be very interesting to a great portion of the inhabitants of this State.

These communications I shall seasonably submit to your consideration by a special message.

The uncommon failure of some of the most important articles of produce, on which the sustenance of man and beast depends, is so alarming, that I take the liberty to recommend to you, and through you, to the people of this State, the most rigid economy in the early expenditure of those articles of provision most deficient, that by peculiar precaution we may avoid, as far as possible, the foreboded evil of this unparalleled season.¹

On your wisdom and integrity, gentlemen, I shall firmly rely, for the judicious management of those weighty concerns, in which the interest of our constituents is deeply involved. Collected from the several towns throughout this State, you bring with you all the information necessary to legislate for the free and enlightened people you represent. Suffer me to solicit your kind support, while I cheerfully engage, on my part, to co-operate with you in all your endeavours to promote the best good of this State, and the general happiness of mankind. And may our joint efforts be attended with success.

¹ For a brief account of this remarkable season, see Thompson's Vermont, Part I, p. 20.

William Nutting, Levi Barnard, and Daniel Azro A. Buck were appointed to draft an answer to the foregoing speech. Mr. Barnard represented the minority of the House. The answer went far beyond the speech in respect to national politics, though condemning those in Congress who had "unnecessarily increased the public expenditures, in a time of unusual pressure," by greatly increasing the pay of Congressmen. This passage in the answer was due to John Mattocks, who moved an amendment, censuring the members of Congress who voted for, and "the President of the United States who approved" of the censured act. Though this amendment was rejected, 114 to 73, the address was amended so as to condemn the act without specially condemning the President. The answer was adopted, 111 to 82. — See printed Assembly Journal of 1816, pp. 132-136.

SPEECH OF GOV. GALUSHA—1817.¹

Gentlemen of the Council, and Gentlemen of the House of Representatives,—Permit me, on this occasion, with gratitude, to express the satisfaction I feel that the freemen of this State have so far approved my past conduct, as again to honour me with their confidence.

It is a source of peculiar gratification that we are convened under circumstances the most propitious. That universal gloom which fearful apprehensions of extreme want spread over the mind at the close of the last season, and the commencement of the present, has by the extraordinary frugality of the people, succeeded by the blessing of heaven, been happily dispelled, and the dreadful distress but lightly felt. We have abundant cause of gratitude to the Author of all our benefits for the luxuriant harvest of the present year, the unusual degree of health which has prevailed throughout this State, the general harmony existing among us, and above all, for the rich and recent spiritual harvest which, in many places, has been truly great.²

The deficiency of a circulating medium, owing to an increased emigration of our inhabitants to the west, who have converted their property into cash for transportation, and the unfruitfulness of past seasons, in addition to the common causes which uniformly produce a scarcity of money at the close of a war, has caused some serious embarrassments; but the industry and economy it has excited has nearly counterbalanced the evils experienced. By the pursuance of this prudent course, if attended with the ordinary smiles of Providence, we shall soon possess a suitable portion of circulating medium, without resorting to the ruinous system of paper credit. The act of last session making it penal to pass any bill or note of a less sum than one dollar, in lieu of money, has had its desired effect in preventing further impositions, without introducing any material evil.

No important political changes among foreign powers, affecting the interest of this, or the United States, have come to my knowledge since our last session. The nations of Europe remain settled on their lees.

¹From the printed Assembly Journal of 1817, p. 14.

²This is the first, and probably the only instance in which a governor of Vermont has alluded to revivals of religion in the annual message.

Happy would it have been had their contests terminated more favourably to the rights and liberties of the people. But notwithstanding some symptoms which excite fond, yet feeble expectations of amelioration of the condition of that long devoted country, multitudes of her inhabitants, awakened to a sense of their sufferings, and aspiring for liberty, are resorting to the United States, the only present asylum for oppressed and afflicted humanity. These emigrants, with many of our own citizens, are rapidly settling and cultivating the western wilds, where they will soon form a strong barrier against savage barbarities, and foreign encroachments.

The inhabitants of the southern part of this continent are still struggling for freedom and independence, the issue of which must decide the happiness or misery of millions of the present and succeeding generations. It will essentially affect not only our commercial states, but the world at large. Should emancipation be the event, we may rationally hope, ere long, to see arts and science, agriculture, commerce and manufactures flourishing throughout that vast, populous and fertile region, and every rank of its inhabitants in the full fruition of all the blessings of civil and religious liberty, unshackled by superstition, uncircumscribed by the edicts of kings. While we anticipate the prosperity of others, let us critically attend to all the probable means of heightening our own.¹

Improvement in manufacturing is a subject so closely connected with the interest of this State, that it cannot fail of engaging your attention. It should be the policy of a State so remote from the great marts of the world, and not adjacent to the sea-board, to adopt every prudent measure to supply her wants by her own manufacture; by which means she prevents the emigration of many of her valuable citizens to other parts of the country to find employment, makes a neat saving of the expense of transporting that portion of provision consumed by the manufacturers, and turns the balance of exports and imports in her own favour. Little need be said to recommend an object of such apparent importance.

I would suggest for your consideration, the propriety of an early and thorough examination of the affairs of the State prison, to ascertain whether any improvement can be made in the employment of the convicts, or better economy introduced relative to the expense of their subsistence.

If the state of our finances will admit, I am of the opinion, that to purchase a stock of materials, prepare the proper machinery, and employ a part of the prisoners in manufacturing woollen cloth, would be more profitable than to employ so large a portion of the labourers in weaving cotton, especially while the depressed state of factories renders that business so disadvantageous. From the present value of woollen cloth, compared with the price of the raw materials, it is evident that a handsome saving might be made to the State by the manufacture of that article. I would also recommend the purchasing of a small tract of pasture land in the vicinity of the prison, for the purpose of keeping cows, which would be a means of furnishing the prisoners with a cheap and wholesome diet during the warm seasons of the year.

It will be found necessary, even if the present system of labour be continued, to erect additional workshops, unless some other mode of punishment, for crimes of small magnitude, should be deemed preferable to confinement in the state prison.

An elegant map of the state of Newhampshire has been, by that government, presented to the state of Vermont, which, with the laws of several of the sister states, I have caused to be transported to this place, to be deposited as the general assembly shall direct.

Sundry communications, from different departments of the general government, and from individual states, have been made to me during the last year. All those designed for your consideration will be seasonably submitted.

Permit me, gentlemen, before I close, to express the entire confidence I feel, not only in your intelligence and ability, but also in the purity of your intentions, to manage the concerns of your constituents in such a manner as shall tend to ensure their equal rights and promote their highest happiness. The importance of our trust will be realized when we compare our distinguished privileges with those of the people of any other country.

We find ourselves, after the most arduous and threatening conflicts, by the interposition of divine goodness, at peace with all nations, tranquil and happy among ourselves, and in the full participation of every right, whether moral, civil or religious.

It is the imperious duty of the legislature, as the faithful guardians of those sacred rights, under every circumstance, to watch over them with peculiar care, cherish every principle, and employ every means that tends to support and perpetuate them; among which may be ranked general information, industry, frugality, science, morality and pure religion. While these prevail, we may safely rely on the continuance of all the blessings of our free and equitable government.

Under these considerations, our attention will naturally be drawn to the promotion of education, in all its various branches, as the most powerful barrier against those errors of sentiment and practice, which corrupt, misguide, and enslave a people.

My best endeavours will be used to carry into effect such measures as you in your wisdom shall adopt. And may sagacity, prudence, unanimity and firmness characterize the proceedings of our present session.

Montpelier, October 10, 1817.

JONAS GALUSHA.

Oct. 11, 1817, Hon. D. Azro A. Buck, of the House, moved that a committee of three be raised to draft and report an answer to the governor's speech, which was rejected — yeas 77, nays 109. The custom of responding to the annual speech or message of the governor, which had previously prevailed, has never been resumed.

SPEECH OF GOV. GALUSHA — 1818.¹

Gentlemen of the Council, and Gentlemen of the General Assembly, — Having been called by the suffrages of a free people, and permitted by divine providence to assemble agreeable to the provisions of the constitution, to attend to the civil concerns of the State, it behooves us at all times, but more especially when acting under so important a trust, to look up to Him who has the hearts of all men in his hand, and is the disposer of events, for direction and support in attending to all the duties that devolve on us as guardians of the rights and privileges of the people.

It is with peculiar pleasure I congratulate you on the present prosperity of the State and nation. Peace, health, and plenty are among the peculiar blessings with which we are favoured; while an apparent increase of morality, benevolence and piety, presage still happier times.

The recent dangers we have passed will be a sufficient monitor to keep alive in your hearts a sense of the necessity of union, and that watchful care and perseverance which are indispensable to the preservation of the rights and privileges of a free people. It would be folly in us to imagine that the only dangers to which a free people are exposed, exist in times of the most ardent struggles, when assailed by powerful foreign foes. This we have experienced and surmounted; but political experience demonstrates that the more fatal foe lurks in the heart of man; that secret ambition to aggrandize himself and promote his own private ends, chills his generous ardour for the concerns of his country; and his desire for the prosperity of his fellow citizens is too apt to lie dormant or smothered in his bosom; but I am unwilling to believe that the vital spark of patriotism and republican virtue is extinguished in the hearts of Americans. I appeal to you, Gentlemen, who are well versed in ancient and modern history, whether the fall of republics have not oftener happened in consequence of a slow decline of republican virtues and simplicity, and from internal divisions, than from any combination of kings and monarchs to overthrow them. In times of the greatest apparent security, the seeds of dissolution are often sown, and imperceptibly grow, until the roots become too strong to be eradicated.

These remarks, Gentlemen, are not made with a view to any political party, or particular individuals, or to discourage any laudable enterprise, but to check that aspiring ambition to which the human heart is exposed, and to prevent, in times of apparent safety, our lapsing into a state of inattention to our political concerns, through a natural propensity to ease, which sometimes proves dangerous. A people negligent of their rights will not long retain their liberties.

It behooves you, Gentlemen, not only to watch over the exigencies arising within this State, but carefully to guard against any encroachments on the sovereignties of the individual States, or infringements on the privileges reserved to them, or to the people.

A prudent legislature will critically examine every new subject that may be presented for their consideration, compare it with the first principles of our government, and trace it to its most probable effect in its fullest operation, in order to decide on its merits.

In acting on all private bills and petitions, a due regard to justice ought never to be dispensed with; and favors ought only to be granted when they do not interfere with the public good, or the interest and happiness of other individuals. In passing laws which are to have a partial operation, it will be well to keep in view that excellent maxim contained in our bill of rights, that "government is or ought to be instituted for the common benefit, protection and security of the people, nation, or community, and not for the particular emolument or advantage of any single man, family, or set of men, who are a part only of that community."

It would be trespassing on your time, if not on your patience, to attempt to call your attention to the several matters that will naturally fall under your consideration. The attention of former legislatures has been frequently occupied on the subject of education. A subject so interesting to the rising generation, and so necessary to the happiness, safety, and honor of the State, cannot easily escape the notice of this or any future Legislature. The subject of manufacturing, and the regulation of the militia, are matters usually submitted to standing committees, therefore particular remarks on those subjects will be unnecessary.

Many useful improvements have been made in the State, while no considerable attempts have been made to improve our state of agriculture. Although we ought to rely as much as possible on home manufactures for a supply of manufactured articles, yet it must be acknowledged that the main source of our wealth and the subsistence of every class of citizens, must depend on the cultivation of the soil. When our farms were new and unimpaired by tillage, it was profitable to extend our labours and to cast our seed over a large portion of our soil, but as our lands become less productive by the frequency of crops, it is necessary that new modes of husbandry should be resorted to, in order to keep them in a fertile state, and that the different qualities of the soil be improved to the best advantage for tillage or grazing—which in all probability will require more labor and expence in cultivating an equal quantity of land, and of course prevent the too frequent emigration of the laboring class of our citizens. I do not expect that the state of our finances is such as to admit of expenditures on the subject; yet it is possible that something may be done that would prove useful, by authorizing patriotic and enterprising individuals to form into societies, with corporate privileges, for the beneficial purposes of advancing agricultural interests, encouraging manufactures, and improving our breed of domestic animals, within the several counties where it is deemed necessary. I am apprised that an agricultural society was incorporated in the year 1806, but this society being extended over the whole State, the members being so remote from each other, and the field for examination so extensive that it proved ineffectual, and now exists only in name. I am, however, of opinion, that societies formed within proper limits may, by experiments, proper researches, and correspondence with each other, prove highly beneficial; for, notwithstanding the spirit of industry and laudable enterprize that appears among our citizens, yet much remains to be done for the benefit of individuals, and the State, by a wise direction of their labors and expenditures, to the most profitable objects, and in the most useful and economical manner; but a treatise on the subject would, on the present occasion, be improper; a hint only is my design.

In selecting the officers to be appointed by the General Assembly, your own prudence will lead you to seek for men of integrity, and uprightness of conduct, as well as of competent capacity, to discharge the various duties attached to the several offices for which they are to be elected. It will be necessary at this session to elect a Senator from this State to the Senate of the United States, to serve for the term of six years from and after the third day of March next; and also to fill the vacancy in that body occasioned by the resignation of the Hon. James Fisk.

Sundry communications have been made to me since the last session of the General Assembly, for your consideration; all which shall be seasonably submitted.

Your own interest, and that of your constituents, will engage your speedy and faithful attention to the business of the session, and bring the same to a close as early as the nature and extent of the matters you may have under your consideration will admit. My best endeavours to second every measure you may adopt, to promote the public weal, will not be wanting; and it is my anxious desire, that a spirit of harmony and candor may prevail with us, and that the result of our doings may terminate in the best interests of the State, and meet the approbation of our constituents.

JONAS GALUSHA.

Montpelier, October 9, 1818.

SPEECH OF GOV. GALUSHA—1819.¹

Gentlemen of the Council, and Gentlemen of the General Assembly,—It is with pleasure that I meet you on the present occasion, at a time of so general prosperity, when not only our own state and country, but the nations of Europe, share liberally of the blessings of Providence. The last season has been peculiarly propitious, and the earth has yielded her increase in great abundance. It is also a subject of the most pleasing consideration, that our dear bought rights and privileges remain secure, and our labouring citizens yet reap the rewards of their own industry; and that peace and a good understanding continues between us and the nations with whom we have any considerable intercourse. Although some apprehension exists, that the arrangements with Spain, so happily concluded with their minister, will not be ratified on the part of the Spanish government, yet we entertain a hope, that further reflection will enable them to judge more correctly of their own interest, and put an end to the long existing disputes between the two governments, and settle a boundary line, which will prevent all danger of future disturbances.

While we enjoy a rich variety of distinguished favours we ought to reflect on them with gratitude, and render the most unfeigned praise to Him who so liberally bestows on us his richest blessings. Permit me, Gentlemen, to enquire, that while we enjoy all the means of wealth and happiness, so general a complaint of the scarcity of circulating medium, and the consequent distress of individuals, in discharging their private debts, and managing their own concerns, prevails? For a people possessing a rich and extensive territory, abounding with the fruits and productions of almost every clime; with an unshackled commerce throughout the habitable world; possessing genius and enterprise exceeded by no other people on earth, to be in distress for want of a sufficient portion of [circulating] medium, is a subject that calls loudly for investigation and reform. Amongst the various causes, the want of economy, in my opinion, is the most prominent. The unlimited credit given in this country, in almost every branch of business, to say nothing of the banks, proves the ruin of too many valuable citizens, of every class and profession in society. The frequent bankruptcies, suspensions, and commitments to county jails, sufficiently prove the fact. I am sensible that this great and growing evil cannot be wholly remedied by acts of legislation; yet I am persuaded, that every wise and virtuous legislature will study and promote economy, whenever it is consistent with justice, and that benevolence which is due to our fellow creatures.

Suffer me, Gentlemen, to submit for your consideration, the propriety of passing a law freeing the body of debtors from arrest and imprisonment on debts of a small amount, which may be contracted after a given time, in future. I am of opinion, that more property is spent in collecting small debts by law, especially when the body is taken in execution, than the amount of debts saved by such collection. I also believe that it would discourage credit where it ought not to be given, and produce punctuality in those who obtain it; yet the only safe remedy against embarrassment or poverty, is a retrenchment of family expenses, and lessening the consumption of articles of foreign growth and manufacture. Much may be done by encouraging home manufactures by legislative provisions; but the most powerful of all means is that of example. Let but one influential citizen from each town in this state, return from this legislature to his constituents, with a rigid determination to abandon the unnecessary use of foreign articles, and while he enjoys all the real comforts and actual conveniences of life, reject everything that is superfluous; his fellow citizens would soon emulate his example and exhibit an improved state of society. General information is indispensably necessary to the preservation of a free republican government; but this cannot be retained if the great body of the people, through want of economy, indulge their propensities in the use of superfluities, and become poor and unable to educate their children. The patronage of the wealthy will never be extended indiscriminately to the children of the whole community. Even that source will diminish where extravagance prevails.

If I am not mistaken, in those states where the banks are the most numerous, and the means of credit the most easy, the recent cry of scarcity of medium, and its consequent distresses, have been the most heard and felt. This, Gentlemen, deserves some attention, if petitions to increase the number of banks in this state should be preferred. Although I wish equal privileges to be extended to every part of the state, yet I am confident that a multiplicity of incorporated banks in a state will prove injurious to the community if ruinous to each other.

In compliance with the constitution of this state, a Council of Censors must be chosen, on the last Wednesday of March next; it therefore becomes necessary for the General Assembly, at their present session, to pass a law regulating the choice of said Council, and appointing a place for their first meeting.

It will be requisite to elect a number of trustees of the University of Vermont, to fill the vacancies of those whose times [terms] of office will expire on the last day of November next. I would likewise further suggest for your consideration, the propriety of granting some further pecuniary aid to the University, in order to enable its officers to render it eminently useful, and truly honourable to the state; at least until the land granted or sequestered, for that purpose, can be leased and produce that revenue to the University, which was expected, and which, I hope, will soon be realized.

The act for ascertaining certain claims of this state against the United States, and for obtaining the same, has been duly attended to, but has not yet been decided on. It was late in the last session of Congress before all the necessary papers could be forwarded, agreeably to [the] information received from our representatives, relative to the evidence that would be wanted to substantiate the claims. The papers now lie with the third auditor in the treasury department, for adjustment. I expect a settlement soon after our representatives arrive at Washington, at the next session, if it is not before.

I am informed by Lt. Bangs of the U. S. Ordnance department, at Vergennes, that he has been directed by the senior officer of that department to deliver to the executive of this state, six hundred and seventeen stands of arms; being a part of this state's proportion, under the law of the United States approved April 23^d, 1808, making provision for arming the whole body of the militia of the United States. The arms are to be distributed to the militia, under such rules and regulations as shall be, by law, prescribed by the legislature of each state and territory. The General Assembly will, therefore, make such order relative to the disposition of said arms, as they judge most expedient. Lt. Bangs will deliver the arms at any place in this state, where they can be transported by water; but is not authorized to remove them to any place by land carriage.

All communications that have been made to me, during the recess of the legislature, will be the subject of a special message, and seasonably communicated.

I cannot, Gentlemen, close this address without expressing to you, and through you to the freemen of this state, the grateful sense I entertain of the honour bestowed on me in electing me to the office of chief magistrate of this state. The repeated assurance of their confidence has added new obligations to improve my feeble ability in promoting their best interests. Notwithstanding I have laboured under many disadvantages, yet I have the approbation of my conscience, that I have endeavoured to be faithful, and that I have never suffered my private interest to interfere with my public duties. And, if errors have been committed, I entreat my fellow citizens to cast over my failings the mantle of charity, and consider them errors in judgment and not in design. I have always thought it wrong in a republican government, to make too frequent changes of men in office, lest it check that laudable ambition to acquire that knowledge which is necessary to discharge the duties of the office with honour to themselves, and for the best good of the state. But I consider it an equal, if not a greater error, to continue any persons in the most important offices in the state, for such a length of time as to encourage them to conceive that they ought to hold their offices by prescription, and lose that sense of that responsibility to their constituents that every officer in a free government ought at all times to feel; nor until old age imperceptibly steals upon them, and renders them less adequate to perform the duties of their office, than they themselves imagine. From these considerations, and from the great desire I have to spend the residue of my life in domestic retirement, I recommend to the freemen of the state to unite on some other person to perform the duties of chief magistrate, after the expiration of the term for which I have been recently elected. Yet be assured, that my zeal for the public good will never cease but with my reason or my life. I hope thro' the aid of an indulgent Providence and your kind support, to be able to discharge the duties of my office to acceptance during the present year, and, at the close of the same, to have the pleasure of bidding you a friendly farewell.

JONAS GALUSHA.

VALEDICTORY ADDRESS OF GOV. GALUSHA, AND RESPONSE OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY—1820.

On retiring from office, Oct. 13 1820, Gov. Galusha briefly addressed the Joint Assembly, and on the succeeding day, on motion of Joseph D. Farnsworth of Fairfield, a committee consisting of himself, Calvin Sheldon of Manchester, and Charles K. Williams of Rutland, was appointed to request a copy of the valedictory and draft a response. On the 20th, the committee reported the following address, which was adopted and ordered to be presented by Messrs. Farnsworth and the Hon. Elias Keyes of Stockbridge.

STATE OF VERMONT.

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, Oct. 20, 1820.

To the Hon. Jonas Galusha, Sir,—On receiving from you an affectionate farewell, and witnessing your retirement from public employment to the pursuits of private life, The General Assembly cannot forbear to express their feelings. Conscious, however, that to you, sir, it would not be pleasing, they forbear that warmth of expression, which, on other occasions, they would indulge: but, a short review of your past life gives rise to emotions which we cannot suppress. The expression is due, both to you, and to our fellow citizens.

On a review of the events of the memorable struggle of our fathers for Independence, we find you, in early life, on the banks of the Walloom-sack, with your patriotic band, teaching their hands to war, and their fingers to fight.

Most of us recollect, with satisfaction, the period when, by the suffrages of your fellow citizens, you were called to assist in the Council of this state.

In the discharge of the duties of a member of Council, of a Judge, and of a Chief Magistrate of the State, you have ever merited, and often received, in language unequivocal, the approbation of your fellow citizens. Cheerfully, and with liberal hands, have they presented you with their best gifts, the highest honors they could bestow.

And now, sir, at a period, chosen and indicated by yourself, when enjoying the fullest share of public confidence, you retire from your public labors to participate, as a private citizen, in the welfare and prosperity of that commonwealth, over the interests of which you have so long watched with paternal care. May your virtues make a deep and lasting impression on the hearts of your cotemporaries. Our best wish will attend you in your retirement, and our most earnest prayer will be continually offered, that your last may be your best days; and that that beneficent Being, who was the hope of Israel, may be your guardian, God, and friend through life, and your portion forever.

[Signed, by order of the General Assembly,] D. AZRO A. BUCK, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

On the same day the committee reported the answer and valedictory, to wit:

Hon. D. A. A. BUCK, Speaker of the House of Representatives:

SIR,—I have received the resolution of the General Assembly, passed at the present session, requesting a copy of my address to both houses, at the time I retired from the executive chair; it was ex tempore and intended only as a brief expression of my gratitude to my fellow citizens for the numerous favours they have bestowed upon me. I comply with the request, and transmit the remarks I made on that occasion.

Permit me, also, to present my warmest acknowledgments to the General Assembly for the kind and affectionate manner in which they have been pleased to express their approbation of my public conduct and character; and I desire them to be assured, that I shall ever esteem it my highest reward.

I have the honor to be, with great esteem, your most obedient servant,
JONAS GALUSHA.

[VALEDICTORY ADDRESS.]

Gentlemen of the Council, and Gentlemen of the General Assembly,—
The time has arrived when I close my official duties as first magistrate of this State. I should do violence to my feelings were I to retire without expressing a grateful sense of past favours. The frequent assurances of the confidence of my fellow citizens, the support and assistance that I have received from them, at all times, while in the exercise of my official duties, has made such impressions on my mind, that time will not remove them, and I trust that I have not been altogether unmindful of the public good. I am sensible, gentlemen, that it is no longer my duty to point out to you the various subjects that require your attention, but all such communications as have been made to me the past year, and other matters which have transpired and are necessary to come before you, will be communicated through his excellency the governor elect. Permit me to tender to you my best wishes for your prosperity, as well as that of the State at large. And may that being who presides over the destinies of men, and manages the affairs of the universe, direct your steps, and reward all your endeavours to promote the highest happiness of your constituents; and may you finally receive the welcome plaudit of well done good and faithful servants. JONAS GALUSHA.

Montpelier, Oct. 20, 1820.¹

The Governor and Council also adopted, by a unanimous vote, a complimentary address to Gov. GALUSHA, and another to Lieut. Gov. BRIGHAM, for which see ante, pp. 301, 324.

SPEECH OF GOV. SKINNER — 1820.²

Gentlemen of the Council, and Gentlemen of the House of Representatives, — Having been called to that office, the duties of which I have now, in the presence of the General Assembly, sworn faithfully to perform; in conformity to ancient usage, and the requirements of the constitution; as the organ of the Supreme Executive Power; and to prevent unnecessary delay in the business of legislation; I have taken this early opportunity of inviting your attention to some of those subjects, the investigation of which is deemed important, and to present to your consideration, such ideas thereon, as have been suggested to my mind. The faithful services of those practical, able, and venerable politicians, and statesmen, who have preceded me in the office of chief executive magistrate of the State, and upon whom a similar duty has hitherto for many years devolved; forbid the expectation of proposing any measure of moment, which shall be new and useful. My highest ambition will be gratified, in being convinced, that the public interest has not suffered by reason of the trust reposed in me: and be assured, its advancement demands, and shall receive, the unremitted exertion of all my faculties.

The frequent alteration of public statutes is justly considered an evil, seldom counterbalanced by the benefits resulting therefrom. The best evidence the representatives of the people can give, of their faithfulness, and intelligence, is a reluctant and careful approach at innovation. In the practical use of this doctrine, and to resist a false application of the principle, great watchfulness is necessary.

That our laws are susceptible of improvement, is not to be questioned; and that the influence of such as have an interest opposed to that of the community, should be exerted, in preventing salutary amendments to the laws, is as natural, as that it should be exercised, in procuring the passage of such as are unjust.

To provide for the impartial, speedy, and correct administration of justice, ought to be amongst the first objects of a Legislature; for in vain do the people submit to the imposition of taxes, raised to defray the expenses of a government, formed for the protection of their rights; and in vain do the representatives of the freemen enact laws against vice, immorality, and injustice, if adequate means are not provided for carrying them into effect.

Many complaints have been made, of the delay and expense, incident to prosecutions for redress in our Courts of Justice; and a determination has been repeatedly manifested by the Legislature, to suppress every attempt made for increasing costs, by passing useful laws to that end. Yet it is believed the principal evil has not, until the last session, been in any measure removed; and it still remains worthy of serious enquiry, whether a further remedy may not be applied. It is difficult to discover what possible advantage can result, from enabling suitors, to claim as matter of right, on the trial of a question of fact, more than one verdict of a jury. There can be no presumption that a second panel will be more capable, or more disposed to impartiality. The privilege of New Trial, secures against accident, surprise and injustice. The extravagant expense, and great delay, occasioned under the former system, in which a party was required to obtain in his favor, two verdicts in three, before his right was established, has been checked; and it no longer remains an object to succeed in the first trial; consequently the delay, and expense incurred, in requiring a party to commence, and pursue to judgment his suit, in a court where the judgment confers no benefit, appears useless.

The framers of the Constitution contemplated the erection of a Court of Chancery distinct; and there are many who consider it the duty of the Legislature to exercise the power conferred. Yet the necessity, and expediency, of the measure is questionable. That some further provision ought to be made, is apparent. The inconvenience experienced under the existing law, arises from the want of authority in the Judges of the Supreme Court, to perform any duty as Chancellors, excepting at the regular sessions; and the many intermediate steps, requisite to be taken, in a suit in Chancery, necessarily protracts the final hearing and decree to a period unwarrantable.

When it is understood, that the amount actually expended from time to time, in the prosecution of suits in the courts of justice, far exceeds all that is required to sustain every department of the government; and when it is recollected that the Bill of Rights declares that "every person ought to obtain right and justice freely, and without being obliged to purchase it; completely and without any denial, promptly and without delay," the subject cannot fail to excite a deep interest; and any degree of solicitude may be manifested without reproach. The Judiciary is that on which the character of a State vitally depends, and the degree of confidence reposed in a government is measured by the rank it sustains.

The subject of taxation is one to which the attention of the Legislature has been frequently directed, and although it is generally believed, that the intention to equalize the burden, by the act of the last session, is not effected; yet with little amendment, there can be no doubt, the system will have been greatly improved. A standard, by which the relative value of improved lands in the State may be ascertained, and the particular state of improvement which shall render it subject to assessment, seems to be indispensable.

The settlement of the estates of deceased persons, has become a matter of serious concern, inasmuch as the title to the greatest portion of real estate in the State, is bottomed on proceedings in our Courts of Probate; and the rights of widows and orphans are here deposited. A careful attention to the laws, regulating the settlement of testate and intestate estates, that they may be rendered as perfect as possible, is desirable. Much difficulty and embarrassment arises, from the circumstance that the whole system of our law on the subject, is, and ought to be, essentially different, from the laws of that government, whence we derive the common law. Our Judges of Probate ought to be men of ability and integrity; and no inconsiderable evil arises, from a frequent change of officers in that department.

It may perhaps be an useful enquiry, whether the general encouragement, that has been given, to the pursuing, and returning of offenders, who have fled from justice to distant parts of the United States, and who frequently are transient persons, and violators of the laws of other governments as well as our own, is consistent with sound policy. And whether it would not be advisable, that a law should be passed, hereafter requiring the sanction of some of the officers of the government; without which the State will not defray the expense.

The relation in which this State stands to the general government, its welfare being identified with that of the United States, all the important measure adopted by Congress, become highly interesting to us. Justice to ourselves dictates, and a long course of practice sanctions, the propriety of the Legislature's expressing the sentiments, they entertain, on subjects which essentially concern the nation; and more especially, of instructing their Senators, and advising the Representatives in Congress, as to the course they ought to pursue.

The act of the last session of Congress, authorizing the inhabitants of a portion of the territory of the United States, to form a state government, without a provision in its constitution, restricting the power of enslaving a part of the human family, has caused general surprise through the State, and excited feelings of sincere regret. The report of the committee on this subject, which was adopted by the House, and at the close of the last session dismissed, it is presumed, furnishes no evidence of the opinion of that respectable body. Indeed could I entertain a doubt, as to the feelings of the people of Vermont, I should not have troubled you with communicating my own.¹

Whether at this period, it is advisable for the Legislature to adopt any measure on the subject, considering the question at rest; or in view of its being again agitated, on the constitution's being submitted, for the sanction of Congress; or in view of any feature of that constitution, which may be opposed to those equal rights, and privileges, professed to be guaranteed, by the republican principles of the government, is submitted to the wisdom and discretion of the General Assembly.

The period has arrived, in which it becomes our duty to elect a Senator, to represent this State in the Congress of the United States. That we may possess that influence, and weight of character, at the seat of government; and sustain that rank in the Councils of the nation, which is desirable, and to which we are entitled; the first talents and ability ought to be sought to fill the office. It is also to be recollected, that the trust is not only of great moment, but of long duration; the character therefore to be selected, ought to be such, as by a long course of tried patriotism, and inflexible integrity, a pledge is furnished, that public interest will not be bartered to private gain. Electors of President and Vice President are also to be appointed.

In the election of officers to fill the several departments of the State government, we ought not only be guarded against the influence of that aspiring unwarrantable ambition which openly assails; but also of that which may be generated, by a restless, disappointed, envious spirit, which lurks in secret and attacks unawares.

There will probably be received from my predecessor in office, communications from the General and State governments, of a nature which ought to be submitted to the General Assembly, which, together with such other matters, as shall be my duty to lay before you, will be made the subject of a special message.

The hitherto enviable prosperity that has pervaded this State, the wisdom and prudence with which its councils have been distinguishingly marked, the urbanity, and sobriety which characterize the great body of its citizens, has rendered us a truly respectable and happy people; and may we not confidently hope, that by duly regarding the example of our venerable and worthy ancestors, and humbly, and religiously reposing our trust in that SUPREME BEING, who holds the destinies of nations in his hands, and directs their course, who searches all hearts, and without whose agency the most minute act is not performed, we may not only hold fast the favors now enjoyed, but rise in prosperity as our years increase.

RICHARD SKINNER.

Oct. 1820.

SPEECH OF GOV. SKINNER—1821.¹

Gentlemen of the Council, and Gentlemen of the House of Representatives,—Again, under the auspices of an overruling Providence, we have been permitted to convene, as the representatives of the people, invested with the power of legislation delegated by the enlightened freemen of the State; for the purpose of discharging the duties incident to the important trust; and I can but indulge the hope, that [the] improved state of our public statutes—the absence of political dissension and party strife—the spirit of unanimity which generally is manifested; and by a humble reliance upon the guidance and favor of the Supreme Being, by whose peculiar regard we have hitherto been distinguished; we shall be enabled to perform the service with unusual harmony and all that dispatch, which is not inconsistent with temperate deliberation.

From the local situation of the State; the pursuits of the inhabitants being almost exclusively agricultural; and the general prevalence of regular economical industrious habits, but few subjects are presented which require the attention of the legislature.

The recent revision of the act regulating and governing the militia of this State, will, it is presumed, render it unnecessary that much time should be occupied on that subject; my observation, however, in relation to its operation, induces me to suggest the propriety, of adopting some measures, by which the services of the most effective, and useful, of that part of the citizens, who are supposed to constitute the force on which the State depends for its defense, may be secured. I allude to the facility with which commissions and discharges are obtained, by young gentlemen the most promising and who, from their influence, ability, and ambition, if retained, would greatly augment, the number of those, who are the pride and ornament of the militia.

The necessity of having returns of the state of the militia regularly made is apparent; and whether any farther provision in the law, on that head, will tend to remedy the evil, arising from the habitual neglect of this duty, is submitted to your consideration.

The declaration of the Council of Censors, that the law regulating the rate of interest, is "grossly and openly violated," corroborated by the testimony arising from common observation, inspires the hope, that the legislature will, by an early attention to the subject, be enabled to act definitively thereon. Altho' it is the general opinion, and in which I fully concur, that laws calculated to limit the demands of money-lenders, are beneficial to society; I am well persuaded, that if, as the Council of Censors allege, the existing law does not afford an effectual remedy but "is violated by a large proportion of our monied citizens," instead of answering any useful purpose, it is productive of serious evil. As a general principle, it is inexpedient to retain upon the records of the State an inefficient law. The statute referred to, was designed principally for the benefit and protection of the necessitous—to shield against the oppression of the wary capitalist, those who, from embarrassed circumstances, are compelled to apply for pecuniary aid to others, who possess the means. The premium that is now paid, for the supposed risk of incurring the penalty, would not be extorted, if from the provisions of the law, there was no prospect of escape, or if it was wholly repealed; and in either case, the exemplary citizen, who from principle conforms to the law, would enjoy an equal privilege with him whose avarice is restrained only by necessity.

The unhappy effects of ignorance, and its attendants, superstition, and immorality, which we daily witness in other nations, especially in their abortive attempts, and impotent struggles, against the relentless rule of those, whose power is measured by the degrees of disparity, between their attainments in knowledge, and that of their subjects; occasions a frequent recurrence to the approved maxim of freemen, that "a general diffusion of useful knowledge, and improved state of science, afford the best security to civil and religious liberty." As guardians of the State and of the interests of its citizens, it is our duty to adopt such measures, as will most effectually secure to posterity, the peculiar blessings of that free government, which by our ancestors has been wisely established, and faithfully transmitted to us. A diligent and persevering attention to the education of our children, is that without [which], we cannot expect the people will long retain a republican form of government. These remarks have not been elicited by any evidence of a want of regard to the subject on the part of the General Assembly, or from a belief, that in point of learning, the youth of this State are surpassed by any; but by the testimony of the Council of Censors, that the act of A. D. 1810, for the support of schools, has not been duly executed, and that the interference of the Legislature is required.

As the State possesses no public fund from which any portion of the current expenses of the government are defrayed, or to which resort can be had, in times of great pressure upon the pecuniary concerns of the people, and a direct appeal to them in the form of a tax, is resorted to annually; the General Assembly cannot too frequently be reminded of the necessity of a practical and careful attention to economy in public expenditures.

At a period like the present, when the price of every commodity produced in the State, is depressed almost beyond example, it will afford me the highest satisfaction to aid, in every measure calculated to advance the great interest of agriculture.

As remittances for foreign manufactured articles, cannot be made by us, as heretofore, in the usual products of the State; the success of our manufactures is becoming an object of deep interest, not only to those who are more immediately concerned, by an investment of their property, but to the great body of the citizens.

I am not insensible that the subject is one over which the State Legislatures have but little control; and that the proceedings of Congress are necessarily embarrassed, by the great diversity of interest, in the different sections of this extensive country for which they are required to legislate. I am also aware, that a difference of opinion exists, amongst those who are immediately engaged in the business of manufacturing, as to the propriety of any further interference on the part of the government; and that at present, property applied to this object, probably produces an income beyond that of any other. If the citizens engaged in the business, already possess peculiar advantages, and any further encouragement afforded by the government, should operate exclusively to their advantage, the measure would be unjust; but if this encouragement, should have the effect, greatly to increase, not the profits, but the number of manufactures and manufacturing establishments, and thereby produce a competition which does not now exist—to measurably change the course of agricultural pursuits, now so unprofitable, by inviting the growth of, and furnishing a home market for raw materials, as also a market for that surplus produce which has heretofore been exported; and to secure amongst us a specie currency; there can be no doubt of its wisdom and justice.

It will be necessary that the act dividing the State into districts, for electing representatives to Congress, should be repealed, or suspended, at the present session of the legislature; as the ratio of representation, under the late census, will probably be changed before the next session; and the number of representatives, to which we are entitled, may not be the same. It will also be necessary to provide for the second district, in which no election has been made. It may not be improper to observe that the repealing of the statute of A. D. 1818, may perhaps operate as the revival of the former statute.

In obedience to the direction of the Legislature at their last session, I appointed Horace Everett Esq. to revise the laws relating to the probate of wills, and settlement of testate and intestate estates; from whom I have recently received, and will forthwith transmit to you his report.

I have received from the States of Maryland, and New Hampshire, certain resolutions, accompanied by the very able reports of committees of their respective legislatures, upon the subject of appropriating public lands, for the purposes of education; requesting the co-operation of this legislature, and which will be duly transmitted to you. Should the General Assembly approve the principle, they will, it is believed, feel no delicacy in making the claim on behalf of the people of Vermont, for perhaps none in the United States, in proportion to their ability, contributed more to the acquisition of those rights, which were purchased by the toils, distresses, and sacrifices of the revolutionary war. Situated upon the frontier, they constituted a barrier between the enemy and the confederated States. Not having then been acknowledged as a member of the confederation, no part of the expense they incurred in the war, has been assumed by the general government, while they have participated in the burden of the funded debt.

The attention of the legislature of this State, as well as of the several States, has been requested by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, to the report of the committee, and certain resolutions of the General Assembly approved and adopted, at their last session, upon a subject of vital importance to the interests and safety of the Union; and which shall be seasonably laid before you. In complying with my duty, in making this communication, I forbear attempting an investigation of the subject, from a conviction, that any views which would be suggested, as the result of that examination, and consideration, I have been enabled to bestow upon it, have already been fully anticipated by you; inasmuch as the public have long since had their minds directed thereto; and have been favored with the labored expositions of learned jurists, and able statesmen; and more especially, as the important question embraced, occupied the solicitous attention of this legislature at their session in October, A. D. 1799; and upon which their opinions were unequivocally declared.¹ Permit me then to recommend to your dispassionate consideration, the matters contained in the report and resolutions; and to express my belief, that although Vermont would be the last to submit to an encroachment made by either branch of the general government, upon those rights and powers which are reserved to it as a free state, and would be prompt in the exercise of all legal, and constitutional means, to resist every aggression; and whatever may be the opinion, as to the correctness of the decision of the Federal Court, in the case referred to; yet that we shall not readily adopt the opinion, that the several States, which compose the Union, sustain the character of independent sovereignties, in the sense, that no power short of that which is physical, is supposed to exist, by which, a constitutional question, arising from an incongruity in the acts of the general and state governments, can be decided.

The late acquisition of a territory, designed by nature as a constituent part of the Union; and over which the united demands of interest, and security, require the jurisdiction of the government to extend; furnishes evidence of the wisdom, and inspires confidence in the uprightness of the administration.

The favorable issue of this protracted negotiation, with the Spanish Government, has left the United States, in relation to all foreign powers, upon a footing, which promises permanent peace, and friendly intercourse.

While rejoicing in this propitious aspect from abroad, the mind that is duly impressed with a just sense of the value of our civil institutions, that has in any measure surveyed the wretched state of other nations, and is not ignorant of the causes that have dissolved republics, is naturally inclined to enquire, whether there are any grounds of anxiety at home—any recognition of doctrines subversive of the government; and notwithstanding some may imagine, they can discover tokens of dissolution, in the manifestations of increasing jealousy, towards the authorities of the general government; it would be with extreme reluctance, that I could permit myself to believe, that the time had arrived, in which any considerable portion of the citizens, would forget the necessity of restraining unwarrantable suspicion, of smothering the first glimmering of the torch of discord, and the expression of extreme solicitude, for the preservation of a confederacy, which is our only guaranty, against the degradation incident to despotism, and that which alone can secure us, from becoming in the end, the subjects of foreign domination.

BOUNDARY LINE BETWEEN NEW YORK AND VERMONT, FROM THE SOUTH-WEST CORNER OF VERMONT TO POULTNEY RIVER.

By an act of the Legislature of New York passed 8th June 1812, and an act of the Legislature of Vermont passed 6th of November 1812, commissioners were appointed and authorized to designate a permanent boundary line between the two States, who reported as follows:

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME.¹

Be it known, That in pursuance of an act of the Legislature of the State of New York entitled "An Act to designate and establish the boundary line between this State and the State of Vermont," passed 8th June 1812, appointing Smith Thompson, Simeon DeWitt and George Tibbits commissioners for the purpose expressed in the said act on the part of the state of New York, and an act of the Legislature of the State of Vermont, entitled "An Act to designate and establish the boundary line between this state and the state of New York passed November 6th 1812, appointing Joseph Beeman, Junior, Henry Olin and Joel Pratt 2d, commissioners for the purposes expressed in the last mentioned act, on the part of the state of Vermont, The said commissioners so appointed respectively on the part of the state of New York and on the part of the State of Vermont have, as hereinafter described, designated, by permanent monuments, the boundary line between the said states from the south-west corner of the State of Vermont to Poultney river, as nearly as is practicable, according to the description thereof in an instrument bearing date the seventh day of October in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety,² executed by the commissioners empowered to declare the consent of the Legislature of the State of New York to the formation of the territory therein described into a new state by the name of the State of Vermont, to wit: BEGINNING, at a rough stone set up and marked on the west side N. APPENDIX C.

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

PROPOSITION TO REDUCE THE TERM OF OFFICE OF UNITED STATES SENATORS.

By message, dated Oct. 20 1814, Gov. Chittenden transmitted letters from the Governors of Pennsylvania and Tennessee covering proposed amendments to the national constitution which had been agreed to by those States. The papers were referred in the house to a committee consisting of Nathaniel Niles, Chauncey Langdon, David Edmond, and Royal Corbin ; and William Hall jr. was joined from Council. This committee reported the following resolution, which was agreed to by both houses without a division :

Resolved, That the legislature of Vermont, having duly considered the amendment of the constitution of the United States, proposed by the legislatures of Tennessee and Pennsylvania, to reduce the term of service of a Senator in Congress from six to four years, from the time they enter upon the duties of their appointment, deem it inexpedient to adopt the proposed amendment ; and that his excellency the governor be requested to transmit a copy of this resolution to the executives of the several states.¹

AMENDMENTS RECOMMENDED BY THE HARTFORD CONVENTION.

Oct. 20 1815, Gov. Galusha communicated to the House letters from the Governors of Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, and Pennsylvania, covering resolutions on amendments to the national constitution proposed by Massachusetts and Connecticut, which were referred to a committee of the whole with the following result :

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, Nov. 1, 1815.

The order of the day was called for on the communication of his Excellency, of the 20th October last, and the accompanying papers ; and the House went into committee of the whole, Mr. [Elihu] Luce in the chair, and shortly after, the committee rose and reported the following resolutions, viz.

Whereas the Legislature of Massachusetts has proposed the following amendments to the Constitution of the United States: [here followed the seven amendments recommended by the Hartford Convention, copied post, pp. 464, 465:]

Resolved, By the General Assembly of the State of Vermont, That it is inexpedient to concur with the said Legislature in the amendments aforesaid.

Resolved, That the Governor be requested to transmit a copy of the foregoing preamble and resolution to each of the Senators in the Congress of the United States, and to the Executive of each State in the Union, with a request that the same be laid before the Legislature thereof.

Which they recommended to have adopted by the House; and the report was accepted, and the resolutions adopted, ordered to be engrossed, and sent to the Governor & Council for their revision and concurrence and proposals of amendment.

Nov. 7, 1815, these resolutions were concurred in by the Governor and Council.¹

PROPOSALS TO ELECT MEMBERS OF CONGRESS, AND ELECTORS OF PRESIDENT AND VICE PRESIDENT, BY DISTRICTS.

By message dated Oct. 18, 1816, Gov. Galusha transmitted to the General Assembly several letters from Governors of other States, covering resolutions on proposed amendments, on all of which Vermont had previously acted excepting as hereinafter indicated. These papers were referred to a committee consisting of William Strong, Stephen Royce jr. [late Chief Justice, and Governor,] and D. Azro A. Buck. Vermont at that time elected its members of Congress by general ticket, and the General Assembly appointed the Presidential electors. Two members of the committee were of the dominant party in the State, one having just retired from Congress, and the other subsequently serving in that body. In view of these facts, the report of the committee was remarkable. It was as follows:

To the General Assembly, now sitting.—Your committee, to whom was referred the consideration of the communication from the governor of the state of North Carolina, containing proposals by the legislature of said state, for an amendment of the constitution of the United States, relative to the election of representatives to congress, and electors of president and vice president of the United States, therein mentioned, be leave to report—that in our opinion the amendment aforesaid ought to take place, and, therefore, your committee recommend for adoption, the following resolutions, viz.

The legislature of North Carolina² having proposed the following, as an amendment to the constitution of the United States:

² It appears from the Governor's message that Massachusetts had made a similar proposition, for which see post, p. 458.

"That, for the purpose of choosing representatives in the congress of the United States, each state shall, by its legislature, be divided into a number of districts equal to the number of representatives to which such state may be entitled.

"Those districts shall be formed of contiguous territory, and contain, as nearly as may be, an equal number of inhabitants, entitled by the constitution to be represented. In each district, the qualified voters shall elect one representative, and no more.

"That, for the purpose of appointing electors of president and vice president of the United States, each state shall, by its legislature, be divided into a number of districts, equal to the number of electors to which such state may be entitled.

"These districts shall be composed of contiguous territory, and contain, as nearly as may be, an equal number of inhabitants entitled by the constitution to representation. In each district, the persons qualified to vote for representatives, shall appoint one elector and no more.

"The electors when convened, shall have power, in case any of those appointed, as above prescribed, shall fail to attend for the purpose of their said appointment, on the day prescribed for giving their votes for president and vice president of the United States, to appoint another or others to act in the place of him or them so failing to attend.

"Neither the districts for choosing representatives, nor those for appointing electors, shall be altered in any state, until a census and apportionment of representatives under it, made subsequent to the division of the state into districts, shall change the number of representatives and electors to which such state may be entitled.

"The division of states into districts, hereby provided for, shall take place immediately after this amendment shall be adopted and ratified as a part of the constitution of the United States; and successively afterwards, whenever by a census and apportionment of representatives under it, the number of representatives and of electors, to which any state may be entitled, shall be changed.

"The division of such state into districts, for the purposes, both of choosing representatives, and of appointing electors, shall be altered agreeably to the provisions of this amendment, and on no other occasion."

Resolved, by the general assembly of the state of Vermont, That it is expedient to adopt the said amendment.

Resolved also, That the governor be, and he hereby is requested, to forward to the executives of each of the states in the Union, and to each of our senators and representatives in Congress a copy of the above preamble and resolutions; and that our said senators be instructed, and our representatives requested, to use such means as to them may seem expedient, to cause the amendment aforesaid to be proposed by Congress to the legislatures of the several states for their adoption.

Which is submitted.

WILLIAM STRONG, for Committee.

Montpelier, Oct. 30, 1816.

This report was made the order for the afternoon of Nov. 1, but was not reached until Nov. 5, when it was referred to the next session.¹

At the session of 1817 the foregoing report came up as unfinished business and was referred to a committee consisting of David Edmund, Jonas Clark, Elihu Luce, and Samuel Swift of the House, and Pliny Smith of the Council. Oct. 27 this committee reported that the resolution of North Carolina, with another of New Jersey on the same subject, should be referred to the next session, and it was so ordered ; but at the same time they reported in favor of adopting a resolution of Massachusetts, as follows :

Whereas the legislature of the state of Massachusetts did, on the 13th day of February, A. D. 1816, propose to the several other states, an amendment to the constitution of the United States, as follows, to wit :

“That for the purpose of choosing representatives in the congress of the United States, each state shall, by its legislature, be divided into a number of districts, equal to the number of representatives to which such state may be entitled.

“Those districts shall be formed of contiguous territory, and contain, as nearly as may be, an equal number of inhabitants, entitled by the constitution to be represented. In each district, the qualified voters shall elect one representative, and no more.

“That for the purpose of appointing electors of president and vice president of the United States, each state shall, by its legislature, be divided into a number of districts, equal to the number of electors, to which such state may be entitled.—Those districts shall be composed of contiguous territory, and contain, as nearly as may be, an equal number of inhabitants, entitled by the constitution to representation. In each district the persons qualified to vote for representative, shall appoint one elector and no more. The electors, when convened, shall have power, in case any of those appointed, as above prescribed, shall fail to attend, for the purposes of their said appointment, on the day prescribed for giving their votes for president and vice president of the United States, to appoint another, or others, to act in the place of him or them so failing to attend.

“Neither the districts for choosing representatives, nor those for appointing electors shall be altered, in any state, until a census and apportionment of representatives, under it, subsequent to the division of the state into districts, shall be made. The division of such state into districts, for the purposes both of choosing representatives, and of appointing electors, shall be altered agreeably to the provisions of this amendment, and on no other occasion.”

And whereas it appears to be expedient to adopt the said amendment to the constitution of the United States,—Therefore, Resolved, by the General Assembly of the State of Vermont, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives requested, to use their exertions to procure the passage of the foregoing amendment.

Resolved, That his excellency the governor of this state be, and he is hereby requested to transmit a copy &c.

Which was read and made the order for to-morrow forenoon.

This order was not reached until Nov. 4, when the following entry was made on the Assembly journal:

The order of the day was called for, on the report of the committee, upon the amendment of the constitution of the United States, proposed by the state of Massachusetts, the report accepted, and the resolutions reported by the committee adopted.

Nov. 6, 1817, the Governor and Council nonconcurrent in the foregoing resolution of the Assembly, and sent down a resolution declaring it to be inexpedient to adopt the proposed amendment; and in this the General Assembly concurred.¹ That the Assembly voted on both sides of this question, within three days, is explainable by the fact that that body was for the principle embodied in the amendment early in the session, but subsequently became nearly equally divided. Contemporaneous with this amendment was a proposition to divide this State into congressional districts. Oct. 23, 1817, Hon. William Nutting of Randolph introduced a resolution declaring it to be "expedient at this time to divide this state into six districts, for the purpose of electing representatives to the Congress of the United States;" which the Assembly adopted, Oct. 24, by yeas and nays—yeas 120, nays 73. A bill for this purpose was reported, and on the 31st of Oct. Uriel C. Hatch of Cavendish moved that it be referred to the next session, which was defeated by one vote, 88 to 87. And Nov. 1, Mr. Hatch moved to dismiss the bill, which was agreed to, 87 to 72.² The legislature adjourned without day on the 7th of November. It is obvious that the discordant decisions of the Assembly on the 4th and 6th of November were snap judgments, in the usual hurly-burly of a closing session. Probably there was no time for debate, or even to take the yeas and nays. Substantially this amendment of the constitution had been agreed to by Vermont in 1801.—See Vol. IV, p. 432.

IMPORTANT MODIFICATION ORIGINATED AND PROPOSED BY VERMONT.

This subject was further considered by the Legislature of 1818, on the resolutions of North Carolina and of several other states, which were referred on the 10th of October to a committee consisting of Jonathan Robinson,³ Jonas Clark, Daniel Chipman,³ William Strong,³ John Phelps, and Henry Olin of the House, and Thomas Hammond of the Council. This committee reported the following resolutions, Oct. 26, 1818, which were adopted by both houses.

STATE OF VERMONT. The committee to whom was referred the resolutions from the States of New Jersey, North Carolina, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire, proposing an amendment to the constitution of the United States, report the following resolutions.

Resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Vermont, That, for the purpose of choosing representatives in the congress of the United States, each state shall, by its legislature, be divided into a number of districts equal to the number of representatives to which such state may be entitled. The districts shall be formed of contiguous territory, and contain, as nearly as may be, an equal number of inhabitants, entitled by the constitution to be represented. In each district, the qualified voters shall elect one representative, and no more. That, for the purpose of appointing electors of president, and vice president, of the United States, in each district entitled to elect a representative in the congress of the United States, the persons qualified to vote for representatives, shall elect one elector, and no more. The additional two electors, to which each state is entitled, shall be appointed in such manner as the legislature thereof may direct. The electors, when convened, shall have power, in case any of them appointed as above prescribed, shall fail to attend, for the purposes of the said appointment, on the day prescribed for giving their votes for president and vice president of the United States, to appoint another, or others, to act in the place of him or them so failing to attend.

Neither the districts for choosing representatives, nor those for appointing electors shall be altered in any state, until a census and apportionment of representatives under it, subsequent to the division of the states into districts, shall be made. The division of the states into districts hereby provided for, shall take place immediately after this amendment shall be adopted and ratified as a part of the constitution of the United States; and successively, immediately afterwards, whenever a census and apportionment of representatives under it shall be made. The division of each state into districts for the purposes, both of choosing representatives, and of appointing electors, shall be altered agreeable to the provisions of this amendment, and on no other occasion.

Resolved, That our senators in the congress of the United States, be instructed, and our representatives requested, to endeavour to obtain the said amendment to the constitution of the United States.

Resolved, That his excellency the governor of this State be requested to forward a copy of the preceding resolutions to each of our senators and representatives in the congress of the United States; and also to the governors of the several states, with a request that the same may be laid before their respective legislatures, for their consideration and adoption. Respectfully submitted, THOMAS HAMMOND, Chairman.

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, Nov. 10, 1818.

Adopted and ordered to be engrossed and sent to the governor and council for concurrence.

WM. D. SMITH, Clerk.

IN COUNCIL, Nov. 11, 1818.

Resolved to concur in passing these resolutions.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT AS TO COMPENSATION OF MEMBERS OF CONGRESS.

In 1817 Gov. Galusha transmitted to the General Assembly an amendment proposed to the national constitution by Kentucky, which was referred to the committee on the proposition as to the election of representatives in Congress and Presidential electors. The committee reported the following resolutions:

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, Oct. 27, 1817.

Whereas the State of Kentucky has proposed for the consideration of this legislature a certain amendment to the constitution of the United States, viz. That no law varying the compensation of the members of congress of the United States, shall take effect, until the time for which the members of the house of representatives of that Congress by which the law was passed, shall have expired—Therefore,

Resolved by the general assembly of the state of Vermont, That it is inexpedient to adopt said amendment.

Resolved, That the governor of this state be, and he is hereby requested, to transmit &c.

Which were read and adopted.

Nov. 4, 1817, the Governor and Council concurred.¹ This proposition was in substance the second of the twelve amendments to the constitution proposed to the several states by the first Congress. Vermont agreed to it in 1791, but it did not receive the assent of the requisite number of States.—See Vol. IV, p. 426.

PROPOSED LIMITATION OF THE POWER OF CONGRESS TO ERECT OR INCORPORATE A BANK, &c.

At the session of 1820, the Governor transmitted a proposition from Pennsylvania, which was referred to a committee consisting of Phineas White, Jonas Clark, John Roberts, and Elias Keyes of the House, and Lieut. Gov. Calhoun of the Council. The proposed amendment is quoted in the following report of the Committee:

To the Honorable General Assembly now sitting.—Your committee, to whom was referred his excellency's communication marked A, containing communications from the governors of several states, relating to a proposed amendment to the constitution of the United States, proposed by the legislature of the state of Pennsylvania, March, 1819, do respectfully recommend the adoption of the following resolutions, viz.

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, November 7, 1820.

Resolved, The governor and council concurring herein, that it is inexpedient to concur in the amendment to the constitution of the United States, proposed to the consideration of the several states by the state of Pennsylvania, which is as follows, viz. "Congress shall make no law to erect or incorporate any bank, or other monied institution, (except within the district of Columbia,) and every bank, or other monied institution, which shall be established by the authority of Congress, shall, together with its branches and offices of discount and deposit, be confined to the district of Columbia."

Resolved, That the governor of this state be requested to transmit copies &c.

Which report was read and accepted, and the resolution adopted.

The Governor and Council concurred.²

APPENDIX D.

VERMONT OPPOSED TO THE HARTFORD CONVENTION.

Oct. 25, 1814, Gov. Chittenden transmitted to the General Assembly letters from the Governor, and the presiding officers of the Senate and House of Massachusetts, covering resolutions of the Legislature of that State, which invited Vermont, with other New England States, to send delegates to the convention to be holden at Hartford, Conn., in the succeeding December, since styled "The Hartford Convention." These documents were referred to a select committee of six to join from Council, which consisted of William Hall jr., Nicholas Baylies, and John W. Chandler of the Council; and Messrs. Nathaniel Niles of Fairlee, Chauncey Langdon of Castleton, Henry Olin of Leicester, Asa Lyon of Grand Isle, John Phelps of Guilford, and David Edmond of Vergennes, of the House. Both Houses were controlled by the Federalists, and of the foregoing committee six were Federalists, and three, Messrs. Niles, Olin, and Phelps, Jeffersonian Republicans. The committee and both Houses were unanimous in the opinion that it was inexpedient to comply with the invitation from Massachusetts. There seems to have been no discussion in either House, but it is certain that there was full discussion among the Federalists. On the authority of the late Gen. EZEKIEL P. WALTON, who was then editor of the Federal organ at Montpelier, the editor of this volume records the fact that the question was considered and determined by the Federalists in caucus. For this decision the Hon. DANIEL CHIPMAN, who was then Speaker of the House, claimed for the Hon. NATHANIEL CHIPMAN a controlling influence.¹

¹Neither as a politician, nor as a statesman, was the subject of this memoir one of those who are aptly termed difficult men, but was always disposed to compromise by yielding all minor points,—ever considering it his duty to support the best practicable measures. He seemed to be entirely free from that egotistical obstinacy, which is so injurious in public, and so troublesome in private life. But, whenever any measure was proposed which he deemed a departure from settled principles, he seemed to be instinctively opposed to it; especially if he deemed it a violation of constitutional principles, or as establishing a precedent which might prove injurious to the government. In this light he

The report of the committee, and action thereon in both houses, follow.

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, Nov. 2, 1814.

To the honourable General Assembly, now sitting—Your committee to whom was referred the communication from the president of the senate, and the speaker of the house of representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, accompanied by certain resolutions of their general court, inviting the legislature of this state to appoint Delegates, if they should deem it expedient, to meet and confer with such Delegates as may be appointed from other states of New-England, or any of them—unanimously report, that in their opinion, it is inexpedient to appoint delegates, to meet at the time and place and for the purposes expressed in said resolutions.—They therefore recommend the adoption of the accompanying resolutions.

WILLIAM HALL, Jun. for Committee.

Whereas his excellency the governor of this state has communicated to this assembly a circular letter from the legislature of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, with certain resolutions of their general court, requesting this legislature to appoint delegates to meet with delegates from the other states of New-England, or any of them, at Hartford, in the state of Connecticut, on the fifteenth day of December next, to confer on various important subjects, and devise and suggest for adoption, by those respective states, such measures as they may deem expedient: Therefore,

Resolved, That having attentively considered the request of the general court of Massachusetts, it is the opinion of this house that the appointment of Delegates in conformity with that request, is not expedient.

Resolved, That his Excellency be requested to transmit, as soon as may be, a copy of these resolutions to the executive of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Which report was read and accepted, and the resolutions, reported by the committee, adopted, and sent to the governor and council for concurrence.

IN COUNCIL, Nov. 4, 1814.

Resolved, To concur with the House in their said resolution.¹

Notwithstanding Vermont thus declined representation as a State in the most formal manner, Hon. WILLIAM HALL JR., who as chairman of the committee made the foregoing unanimous report, did sit and act in the convention. The Secretary of State, JOSIAH DUNHAM of Windsor, also attended, but was not admitted to a seat. The Vermont Republican of Dec. 1814, published at Windsor, thus explained the case:

A meeting has been got up in Windham County, composed of a few Lawyers, Doctors, and Merchants, at which a delegate [Mr. HALL] has been chosen, contrary to the expressed feelings of the people, declared by the unanimous voice of their representatives. It is, moreover, rather extraordinary that the Honorable Secretary of State * * * has gone as a delegate without being sent by any body.

viewed the proposition for the Hartford Convention. When, therefore, in October 1814, he received information, at his residence in Tinmouth, that a proposition would be made in the legislature, then in session at Montpelier, to appoint delegates to that convention, he immediately set out for Montpelier, arrived there in season, and, by his influence, the measure was suppressed.—Life of Nathaniel Chipman, pp. 110, 111.

A correspondent of the Boston Patriot, writing from Hartford Dec. 19 1814, and the American Mercury [Hartford] of the next day, stated that Mr. DUNHAM had been refused a seat and returned to Vermont.

RESOLUTIONS OF THE HARTFORD CONVENTION.¹

Resolved, That it be and hereby is recommended to the legislatures of the several states represented in this convention, to adopt all such measures that may be necessary effectually to protect the citizens of said states from the operation and effects of all acts which have been or may be passed by the Congress of the United States which shall contain provisions subjecting the militia or other citizens to forcible drafts, conscriptions, or impressments not authorized by the Constitution of the United States.

Resolved, That it be and hereby is recommended to the said legislatures, to authorize an immediate and earnest application to be made to the government of the United States, requesting their consent to some arrangement whereby the said states may, separately or in concert, be empowered to assume upon themselves the defence of their territory against the enemy; and a reasonable portion of the taxes collected within said states may be paid into the respective treasuries thereof and appropriated to the payment of the balance due said states and to the future defence of the same. The amount so paid into the said treasuries to be credited, and the disbursements made as aforesaid to be charged to the United States.

Resolved, That it be and hereby is recommended to the legislatures of the aforesaid states, to pass laws (where it has not already been done) authorizing the governors or commanders-in-chief of their militia to make detachments from the same, or to form voluntary corps, as shall be most convenient and conformable to their constitutions, and to cause the same to be well armed, equipped, disciplined, and held in readiness for service; and upon the request of the governor of either the other states, to employ the whole of such detachment or corps, as well as the regular forces of the states, or such part thereof as may be required and can be spared consistently with the safety of the state, in assisting the state making such request to repel any invasion thereof, which shall be made or attempted by the public enemy.

Resolved, That the following amendments of the Constitution of the United States be recommended to the states represented as aforesaid, to be proposed by them for adoption by the state legislatures, and in such cases as may be deemed expedient by a convention chosen by the people of the states. And it is further recommended, that the states shall persevere in their efforts to obtain such amendments until the same shall be effected:

First. Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states which may be included within this Union, according to their respective numbers of free persons, including those bound to serve for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed and all other persons.

Second. No new state shall be admitted into the Union by Congress, in virtue of the power granted by the Constitution, without the concurrence of two-thirds of both Houses.

Third. Congress shall not have power to lay an embargo on the ships or vessels of the citizens of the United States, in the ports or harbors thereof, for more than sixty days.

Fourth. Congress shall not have power, without the concurrence of two-thirds of both Houses, to interdict the commercial intercourse between the United States and any foreign nation, or the dependencies thereof.

Fifth. Congress shall not make nor declare war, or authorize acts of hostility against any foreign nation, without the concurrence of two-thirds of both Houses, except such acts of hostility be in defence of the territories of the United States when actually invaded.

Sixth. No person who shall hereafter be naturalized, shall be eligible as a member of the Senate or House of Representatives of the United States, nor capable of holding any civil office under the authority of the United States.

Seventh. The same person shall not be elected President of the United States a second time; nor shall the President be elected from the same state two terms in succession.

Resolved, That if the application of these states to the government of the United States, recommended in a foregoing resolution, should be unsuccessful, and peace should not be concluded, and the defence of these states should be neglected, as it has been since the commencement of the war, it will in the opinion of this convention, be expedient for the legislatures of the several states to appoint delegates to another convention to meet at Boston, in the state of Massachusetts, on the third Thursday of June next, with such powers and instructions as the exigency of a crisis so momentous may require.

Resolved, That the Hon. George Cabot, the Hon. Chauncey Goodrich, and the Hon. Daniel Lyman, or any two of them, be authorized to call another meeting of this convention, to be held in Boston, at any time before new delegates shall be chosen as recommended in the above resolution, if in their judgment the situation of the country shall urgently require it.

APPENDIX E.

VERMONT IN THE WAR OF 1812.

DETACHED MILITIA.

War with England was declared by act of Congress of June 18 1812.¹ Two months previous, April 10 1812, Congress authorized the President to detach one hundred thousand militia, to be organized and held in readiness to march at a minute's notice, and to serve six months after arriving at the place of rendezvous.² May 28th 1812, the Secretary of War apportioned three thousand to Vermont;³ and on the 1st of May Gov. Galusha issued the following order:⁴

STATE OF VERMONT.

HEAD-QUARTERS, Shaftsbury, May 1, 1812.

GENERAL ORDERS.

The COMMANDER IN CHIEF of this State is required, by the President of the United States, to take effectual measures for having three thousand of the militia of Vermont detached and duly organized, armed and equipped according to law, and held in readiness to march at a moment's warning.

HIS EXCELLENCY therefore orders and directs that this detachment shall form one brigade to consist of four regiments, to be formed into ten companies each—eight of infantry, one of artillery, and one of cavalry, and to be furnished from the several militia divisions in the following manner, viz.

MAJOR GENERAL [Lewis R.] MORRIS, of the first division, will detach and furnish from his division, four hundred and ninety effective men, including officers: which, with one field officer and four infantry companies, consisting of two hundred and sixty men, including officers, to be taken from the fourth division, will form one entire regiment.

MAJ. GEN. [William] CAHOON, of the fourth division, will detach and furnish from his division, one Major, and two hundred and fifty-nine effective men, including officers, to be taken from the first brigade in said division, and form them into four infantry companies, to be annexed to and form part of the regiment detached from the first division.

He will also further detach from his division, eight hundred and sixty-seven men, including officers, and form them into one entire regiment.

MAJ. GEN. [David] ROBINSON, of the second division, will detach and furnish from his division, six hundred and twenty-seven effective men, including officers, which, with one company of infantry, consisting of sixty-four men, including officers, to be taken from the third division, is to form one entire regiment.

MAJ. GEN. [Hezekiah] BARNES, of the third division, will detach and furnish from his division, sixty-four effective men, including officers, to be taken from the first brigade in said division, and form them into one infantry company, to be annexed to and form part of the regiment detached from the second division.

He will also further detach and furnish from his division, six hundred and ninety effective men, including officers, and form them into one entire regiment.

The several Major-Generals will take special care, that the men detached from their divisions be properly organized, and completely equipped, with arms and accoutrements fit for actual service, including blankets and knapsacks.

They will also cause correct muster rolls and inspection returns to be made, of the regiments and men detached from their respective divisions, and transmit the same to the Adjutant General.¹

When the detachment and organization shall have been completed, the several corps will be exercised under their respective officers, but will not remain embodied, or be considered in actual service, until by subsequent orders they shall be directed to take the field, under the command of JONATHAN ORMS,² General of the second brigade in the second division.

The Commander in Chief views it of the greatest importance, at this momentous crisis, that we should be prepared to defend our sacred rights and dear bought liberties, and protect the honor and independence of the nation, against the invasion of any foreign power: he, at the same time, possesses the highest confidence in the patriotism, zeal and bravery of the officers and soldiers of the militia of this state, and is fully persuaded, that on the present occasion, they will, by a speedy and cheerful compliance with these orders, evince to the world, that they are ready to meet any exigency that may occur, and have but one mind when their country calls.

By order of the Commander in Chief.

This order was responded to promptly. The Vermont Watchman, quoted in The Washingtonian of Sept. 21 1812, stated that "the Vermont Troops are now at Plattsburgh," meaning doubtless the eleventh regiment of the U. S. army, Col. Isaac Clark, and the detached militia of ¹ These rolls and returns are not now in the possession of the State.

² JONATHAN ORMS, a carpenter and mill-wright, came to Pittsfield, Vt., from Northampton, Mass., about 1788; shortly after to Fairhaven, and in 1790 settled in what is now West Haven. He removed shortly to Fairhaven, and from thence to Castleton in 1842, where he died Aug. 8 1850, aged 86 years. "He was General-in-Chief of all the militia in Vermont, in the time of the last war with Great Britain, and had his head-quarters at Burlington."—A. N. Adams's History of Fair Haven.

Vermont; and added that "about 80 of the U. S. Troops from New Hampshire," (probably belonging to the eleventh U. S. regiment,) "and between 4 and 500 of the Drafted Militia of this State, passed through town [Montpelier] the present week, on their way to Plattsburgh." This shows that the detached militia had then been called into service.

VOLUNTEER FORCE IN VERMONT.

The Vermont counties on the northern frontier were sparsely settled in 1812, and of course exposed to attack from their neighbors in Canada. The following is doubtless a specimen of what occurred in other exposed towns: The selectmen of Troy warned a town meeting to be held on the 12th day of May 1812, of course in anticipation of war, "to see what method the town will take in the present important crisis to furnish the Militia of this town with arms and ammunition as is required by law;" the result of which was an order to the selectmen "to borrow twenty muskets and bayonets on the credit of the town," and to "purchase twenty-five pounds of powder and one hundred weight of lead if it can be purchased on six months credit."¹ This indicates how little the people of Vermont were prepared for war.² Immediately after the declaration of war had been promulgated, the selectmen of several towns in northern Vermont furnished and supported a small number of men as guards at the frontier towns of Troy, Derby, and Canaan. These were the selectmen of Irasburgh, Craftsbury, Greensboro', Hardwick, Walden, Cabot, Peacham, Troy, Danville, Sheffield, Barnet, St. Johnsbury, Wheelock, Ryegate, Lyndon, Canaan, Morristown, Kellyville [Lowell,] and Glover; and for services of the men and expense of support the State allowed and paid $1188.80.—See printed Assembly Journal of 1812, pp. 185-187, and printed Laws of Vermont of 1812, pp. 176-178.

² The official return of the militia of Vermont in 1899 showed 15,543 rank and file, with 11,523 muskets, 5,273 bayonets, 6,302 cartridge boxes, and 5,657 steel ramrods. Not a single rifle returned; only 1041 pairs of pistols; and 6 cannon, four of which were three pounders.—American State Papers, Military Affairs Vol. I, pp. 300, 301. In 1812, the U. S. added 2500 muskets.

Nov. 6, 1812, the legislature passed "An act to provide for the raising of a volunteer corps, for the service of the United States," consisting of sixty-four companies of infantry, two of artillery, and two of cavalry, to be divided into two brigades, for which the Governor and Council appointed the necessary officers.¹ The act provided that this force should be holden to take the field at a moment's warning, and to serve in the army of the United States until the first day of May then next; "and in case all or any part of the volunteers shall be called into actual service the pay of the privates shall be made up by this State to the sum of ten dollars per month," &c. "which sums the Treasurer is hereby directed to pay."² It is evident from the Treasurer's reports that no payments were made by Vermont for such a corps. Although the act does not so indicate, it is certain that this corps was to consist of persons who were exempt from military duty.³ The Washingtonian of July 27 1812 said :

Volunteer corps are forming out of the Exempts, in many towns, for the purpose of being ready to suppress insurrection, to repel invasion, and, in short, to prevent any of those wanton acts of riot, personal abuse, and disturbance of the peace, which, too often, disgrace the character of a free people in trying times. These Corps, it seems, are not confined to any party, but are to be made up of such citizens as are friends to their country, and its constitution, to internal peace, quiet, and good order, while we are carrying on a war against our enemies abroad.

This of course had no reference, although it may have suggested, the act of the succeeding November. Whether the corps provided for by the Legislature was ever fully raised does not appear, but The Washingtonian of Nov. 23 1812 said: "We are told, that the corps contemplated by this [the Volunteer] act is fast filling up—and that too by some respectable characters." An act of Congress of Jan. 20 1813 provided that any person might enlist into the army while "performing a tour of military duty," and it is probable that many volunteers, and many of the detached militia also, enlisted into the army of the United States. Indeed it is certain, that several of the officers, appointed by the Governor and Council for the proposed volunteer corps, were officers in the thirtieth and thirty-first regiments of the army, organized Feb. 23 1813.⁴

In 1814, almost the whole population of Vermont capable of bearing arms, including boys and fathers and grandfathers, volunteered on the occasion of the invasion of Plattsburgh, though only those near the point of danger reached it in time to engage in the battle. See account of the battle of Plattsburgh, post.

ACTION OF THE LEGISLATURES OF 1812 AND 1813.

In addition to the act authorizing the organization of a force composed of persons exempted by law from military duty, the Legislature of 1812, which was in harmony with the national government, passed three other acts having special relation to the war. The first was "An act to prevent intercourse with the enemies of this and the United States, on the Northern Frontier." It was discussed, section by section, and passed to be engrossed in the House, 109 to 66.¹ This act forbid, under severe penalties, any person passing from or through Vermont into Canada, or from Canada into Vermont, without a permit from the Governor, or some person authorized; also, the moving of any horses, cattle, or other property into that province; and authorized the inspection of trunks or papers by any justice of the peace without warrant, and the detention of letters and papers at the discretion of the justice. All officers of the State, civil and military, were required to aid in the execution of the act, and it was enforced in some instances so as to provoke complaint and censure. Appeals were made to the United States Court for the district of Vermont, and also to Franklin County Court, when the act was condemned, and officers who had enforced it were mulcted in damages and costs that the State ultimately refunded.² The Council of Censors of 1813 [Federalists] recommended the speedy and unqualified repeal of the act, as violative of the constitution both of the United States and of this State, and it was repealed Nov. 16 1813. Although the House was equally divided politically, the repealing act was passed by a vote of 118 to 27.³

Another act passed Nov. 6 1812, "suspending civil process against the persons and property of the Officers and Soldiers of this State while in service," was also condemned by the Council of Censors, as being un-

² See in printed Laws of Vermont of 1817, p. 53, an act to pay Lt. Col. Edward Fifeild $1112.23, "for losses sustained by him in consequence of his faithful discharge of the duties imposed on him by a law of this state entitled 'an act to prevent intercourse with the enemies of this and the United States on the northern frontier.'" For several other instances, see printed Laws of Vermont of 1818, pp. 123-125, 127, and of 1820, p. 59, Fifeild was Lieut. Colonel commanding a regiment of detached militia stationed at Swanton in the autumn of 1812, and judgments were rendered against him in both the Federal and State Courts. It appears also, from the report in this case, that Col. Isaac Clark, first of the 11th U. S. Regiment of Infantry and afterward of the 26th Rifles, was joined as defendant with Fifeild in the Circuit Court.—For report of the committee on Fifeild's case, see printed Assembly Journal of 1817, pp. 122-124. constitutional; and this act was also repealed, Nov. 15, 1813, except as to non-commissioned officers and soldiers.¹

Another act, Nov. 9 1812, "directing the mode of detaching the Militia" for service in the war, in the second section required the selectmen of each town in the State to furnish the non-commissioned officers, musicians, and privates of their respective towns with arms, and equipments, if unable to arm and equip themselves; also a knapsack and blanket to each; also camp utensils, cartridges, flints, rations sufficient for each detachment to rendezvous, and transportation for their necessary baggage. Sec. 8 provided that each town should pay each non-commissioned officer, musician, and private $3.34 per month,—and sec. 10 allowed the same amount per month to be paid by the State to the militia detached previous to Nov. 9 1812—this of course in addition to the regular monthly pay.² By act of Nov. 13 1813, the Auditor of Accounts against the State was authorized to draw orders on the State Treasurer for the pay provided for in sec. 10 of the above cited act; and also for the expenses of selectmen incurred under sec. 2 of the same act.³

THE VERMONT REGIMENTS IN THE UNITED STATES ARMY— 1812–1815.

The Vermonters, for the most part, who served in the regular army, were in the 11th, 26th, 30th and 31st infantry. The 11th was organized in 1812, and served during the war; the 26th, 30th and 31st in the spring of 1813, to serve one year, but a remnant of the 30th and 31st was in the battle of Plattsburgh in Sept. 1814. The year of the 26th infantry having expired, orders were issued to convert it into a rifle regiment, and in May 1814 a recruiting office was opened in Burlington by Col.

² Printed Laws of Vermont for 1812, pp. 203–211.

³ Printed Laws of Vermont of 1813, pp. 98–100. This seems to have left the towns to raise the extra pay for all militia detached subsequent to Nov. 9 1812, of which doubtless there were few, and possibly none. It does not appear that any order was made for detached militia in Vermont subsequent to that of Gov. Galusha in 1812, except for temporary service. The large additional force raised in 1814 consisted of enlistments in the regular army and volunteers. A report of the Paymaster of the U. S. army shows that between Jan. 27 and Sept. 24 1814, out of $1,944,828.98 disbursed for bounties and premiums to recruits, $109,300 was disbursed in Vermont. Massachusetts (then including Maine,) New York, Pennsylvania, and Virginia were the only States which exceeded Vermont. Out of 8,340 recruits included in one return, Vermont furnished 822.—See American State Papers, Military Affairs, Vol. I. pp. 511–513.

Isaac Clark, originally of the 11th infantry, and in September 292 men had been enlisted, but it is doubtful whether this regiment was engaged in actual service, or indeed ever filled.¹

It was designed to give in this volume complete rolls of the detached militia of Vermont, her volunteers, and her officers, non-commissioned officers and privates in the war of 1812, as a memorial for their descendants and aid in securing pensions. Vermont does not possess these rolls, and application was therefore made in the proper quarter at Washington. The answer was that the pay-rolls are in an exceedingly bad condition, and that it would be impossible to copy them for present use. It is probable that the new pension act will necessitate a correct and complete copy of the rolls, which may hereafter be used.

¹ Col. Clark unfortunately incurred the displeasure of his commanding officer in 1814, and was under arrest in June 1815, when his old 11th regiment was discharged. It is due to his memory to add, that forty-two officers of the 11th, 15th, 26th, 29th, 30th, and 31st regiments, in a letter to the Secretary of War, condemned the treatment he received, and complimented him highly for his military services. This volume contains evidence that he was a brave and very efficient officer. For opinion of the officers here referred to see the Northern Sentinel of June 23 1815. In this connection it must be added, that Adj. Gen. Head of N. H., in his report for 1868, in a note to a roll of the 11th regiment of the war of 1812, greatly disparaged Col. Clark, asserting that "he had no qualifications or love for the life of a soldier," and claimed that the great efficiency of the 11th regiment was due to his Lieut. Colonel and Majors—New Hampshire men. It is true that Col. Clark was best fitted for "fighting on his own hook," and for the most of his service in the war of 1812 he was permitted to do so. A daring Ranger through the revolutionary war, and a participant in the glories of Bennington and Fort Defiance in 1777, Col. Clark was certainly well fitted by experience for like service in the war of 1812, and in just that service he was remarkably successful. The associate of the much lamented Lient. Col. Forsyth, "the best partizan officer in the army" of 1812, and his superior in command, Col. Clark ought to have been better appreciated by Gen. Head. Upham, McNeil, and Bedel of New Hampshire, all of the 11th regiment, were brave men and excellent officers, but doubtless every one of them, if living, would concede that the efficiency of the regiment was due primarily to WINFIELD SCOTT. Col. Clark did not have such an instructor, else doubtless Gen. Head's disparagement would never have been written.

The 26th infantry was organized in May 1813, to serve for one year, and seems to have been consolidated with the 48th in 1814. It was then armed with rifles, and hence was sometimes called the 26th rifle regiment. At this time many Vermonters were appointed officers in the regiment, or transferred from other regiments.

The following is compiled mainly from the Executive Journal of the United States Senate.

1812. — The plan of the campaign was to garrison the coast fortifications with the local militia, assisted by some regulars; while the remainder of the regulars, volunteers, and militia were to be employed in invading Canada, particularly from Detroit, and the Niagara frontier in New York.² The army gathered at Plattsburgh, N. Y., numbering about eight thousand men, of whom nearly one half were Vermonters,³ was of course designed to protect the frontiers of Vermont and north-western New York, and, by threatening the Canadian neighborhood, to prevent the transfer of British troops from Lower to Upper Canada.

During the summer little was done in Vermont beyond organizing the 11th U. S. regiment of infantry, the three thousand detached militia, and volunteers, most of whom were at Plattsburgh on the 1st of September in the army commanded by Gen. Joseph Bloomfield of New Jersey. At this time there were small advance parties at Chazy and Champlain, but the remainder of the army remained in quarters until the 16th of November, when the largest portion moved north under the immediate command of Maj. Gen. Henry Dearborn of Massachusetts, then the senior officer of the army, and on the 18th encamped about half a mile south of the boundary line. The force there assembled numbered three thousand regulars and two thousand militia, while the entire British force on the northern frontier did not exceed three thousand, and of these not more than one thousand were within striking distance of the American army. When Dearborn was prepared to cross the line, the British Major Salaberry also prepared to meet him. Early in the morning of the 20th a detachment of Dearborn's army forded the La Colle river and surrounded a British guard-house, which was occupied by Canadian militia and a few Indians, who broke through the American lines and escaped unhurt. In the meantime a second party of the Americans had advanced, and commenced a sharp fire on those in possession of the ground, mistaking them for the British picket. This fire continued for nearly half an hour, when, being undeceived, ¹The purpose here is to state the part taken by the Vermont troops, and not to give a history of the war, for which see an admirable account in Lossing's Pictorial Field Book of the War of 1812; and for the events in the valley of Lake Champlain and neighborhood, see History of Lake Champlain from 1609 to the close of the year 1814, by Peter S. Palmer.

³Palmer's Lake Champlain, p. 183, fixes the number on the 1st of Sept. at "about eight thousand men, including regulars, volunteers, and militia." Among them was the 11th regiment of regulars, Col. Isaac Clark, of which six companies were from Vermont at that time. These, with most of the three thousand detached militia, and a portion of the volunteers, seem to warrant the above estimate.

both parties hastily retreated, leaving behind five killed and as many wounded. The troops immediately afterwards returned to Champlain, and on the 23d to Plattsburgh, when the militia were disbanded, and the 11th U. S. regiment was sent to Burlington, with the 9th, 21st, and 25th, all under the command of Brig. Gen. John Chandler of Maine.¹ Certainly nothing was gained by this expedition, unless it was to certify to the enemy that a large force of United States troops was hovering on the frontier, of which doubtless they had been previously well informed. A good officer, Col. Zebulon M. Pike, commanded the advance party, and would doubtless have performed his duty creditably had Dearborn persisted in his invasion. From the facts that Pike was appointed Brigadier General in the following March, and selected to command the expedition for the capture of York [now Toronto,] in which he was killed, it is evident that the government did not deem him in any degree deserving of censure.

CAMPAIGN OF 1813.

The Vermont non-intercourse act, passed Nov. 6, 1812, provided "that all officers, civil and military, of this State, shall aid in carrying this act into full force;" and therefore, immediately after the return of the 11th U. S. regiment and militia from Plattsburgh, a vigorous enforcement of the act along the northern boundary line of Vermont was commenced. In this work Col. Isaac Clark of the 11th, and Lieut. Col. Edward Field of the militia, were conspicuous.²

Feb. 10, the Secretary of War ordered Gen. Dearborn to move the two brigades at Plattsburgh (Bloomfield's and Chandler's, numbering 2480 men,) to Sackett's Harbor; and March 14 Dearborn complied, leaving no troops at Plattsburgh, and only Clark's regiment of infantry and a company of artillery at Burlington. Clark's regiment was not full at that time, but was to be filled in a few weeks.³

May 13, five hundred men from Clark's [11th] regiment, being the first battalion, were ordered to Sackett's Harbor, and on the 31st left Burlington under the command of Lieut. Col. Timothy Upham of N. H.⁴

Armstrong, said that this account does not differ materially from that of the American officers. The Vermonters returned in season to vote at the then pending election of Members of Congress.— See ante, p. 11.

CAPTURE OF THE U. S. SLOOPS GROWLER AND EAGLE.

The month of June was marked by the loss of two of the three sloops of war which comprised the U. S. force on Lake Champlain, under the command of Thomas Macdonough, then a Lieutenant in the navy. These vessels were the President, Lieut. Macdonough; the Growler, Lieut. Sidney Smith; and the Eagle, sailing-master Loomis. The following account is from Palmer's Lake Champlain, pp. 188-190:

About the first of June Macdonough received information of an attack, by several British gun-boats, upon some small craft at the lower [northern] end of the lake. In consequence of this intelligence he ordered Lieutenant Smith to move towards Rouses Point, with the Growler and Eagle, in order to attack the gun-boats should they again make their appearance. Lieutenant Smith left Plattsburgh harbor with his vessels, on the morning of the 2d of June, and about dark cast anchor within a mile of the lines. The next morning, about daybreak, he got under way, and proceeded down the Richelieu as far as Ash Island (Isle au Tetes), where he discovered and gave chase to three British gun-boats. The wind was blowing fresh from the south at the time, and soon brought the sloops, the Growler leading, within sight of the works at Isle aux Noix. The sloops now tacked and began to beat back towards the open lake, having the wind against them, with a slight adverse current in the river.

As soon as the British were aware of the advantages these circumstances gave them, three of their row-galleys came out from under the works at Isle aux Noix, and opened a brisk fire upon the sloops. As the galleys carried twenty-fours, while the largest guns on the sloops were eighteens, the former were able to select their own distance, nor could the latter come to close quarters without running within range of the fire of the batteries on the island. To render the situation of the sloops still more critical, the British now lined the woods on each side of the river, and opened upon them with musketry. This fire was returned with constant discharges of grape and canister, and, in this manner, the contest was continued for several hours with great gallantry on both sides. About four hours after the commencement of the action, a shot from one of the galleys struck the Eagle under her starboard quarter and passed out on the other side, ripping off a plank under water. The sloop went down almost immediately, but fortunately in shoal water, and her crew were taken off by boats sent from the shore. Soon after this accident the Growler had her fore stay and main boom shot away, when she became unmanageable and ran ashore.

In this engagement the Growler had one killed and eight wounded, and the Eagle eleven wounded, including the pilot, Mr. Graves. The whole number of men on board both vessels, when they went into action, was one hundred and twelve, including Captain Herrick and thirty-three volunteers from his company.¹ The officers and men were taken prisoners and sent to Canada. The two sloops, having been refitted, were transferred to the British service, their names being changed to the Finch and Chub, and were subsequently recaptured by Macdonough in September 1814. The loss of the British in this engagement was never correctly ascertained. It must have been very severe, however, as their forces advanced to the banks of the river, where, destitute of shelter, they received broadside after broadside of canister and grape. A sergeant of the 11th regiment, who had volunteered on one of the sloops, and who was paroled on account of his wounds, reported that he counted thirty of the enemy dead upon one small spot. The current belief, in the neighborhood of the action, was that the British loss exceeded two hundred, but this was probably an exaggeration.

¹The late Capt. H. A. Sawyer of Burlington was a midshipman on the Eagle in this engagement, and in his biography in Vt. Hist. Magazine, Vol. I, p. 582, it is stated that "the principal part of the crews were Capt. Herrick's company of McCobb's [Massachusetts now] Maine regiment." There were certainly other volunteers, from Clark's 11th U. S. regiment of infantry, as a sergeant is mentioned by Mr. Palmer. In the Adjutant General's Report, New Hampshire, 1868, is a military history

The writer of the biography of H. A. Sawyer states that "artillery was placed, and 300 troops scattered along both shores within musket range of the imprisoned vessels" by the British; that the firing commenced at 7 o'clock in the morning, the Eagle was sunk at half past twelve noon, and the Growler disabled some fifteen minutes later—making the length of the action five hours and three quarters; and that "the court of inquiry, subsequently held, bore testimony to the gallantry of [our] officers and men—to the resolute constancy of a defence which was protracted till further resistance became impossible, and treated leniently the imprudence which led to the disaster."—For these statements, and various interesting items as to Capt. Sawyer, see Vt. Hist. Magazine, Vol. I, pp. 581-590.

VERMONT MILITIA CALLED OUT.

June 10 Col. Clark of the 11th regiment called out two militia companies of Burlington, and on the 11th Col. William Williams's regiment—all of whom responded promptly. Probably this was because of an expected attack immediately on Burlington by the British flotilla. The militia were discharged on the night of the 13th, their place being supplied by five full companies of the 30th U. S. Infantry under Lieut. Col. Martin Norton. In September the third brigade of the third division of militia [Elias Fassett's, though he was then Col. of the 30th U. S. Infantry,] was called out, for three months' service on the frontier. The brigade was reviewed at Burlington by Gov. Chittenden. It served in both Vermont and New York.¹

of New Hampshire covering the war of 1812, and in the roll of Capt. Jonathan Stark's company, doubtless composed mainly of New Hampshire men, are the following entries of soldiers in the 11th regiment who were captured on Lake Champlain 3d June 1813: John L. Sanborn, Sergeant; Joseph S. Danforth and Luther Park, Corporals; Isaac French and John Hunt, Privates.

U. S. NINTH MILITARY DISTRICT.

July 8, Maj. Gen. Dearborn was permitted to retire, and was succeeded in the command for the then time being by Maj. Gen. Wade Hampton, who was to be ordered to push his head quarters to the position held by the army in the previous campaign on Lake Champlain, and a requisition was to be superadded for ten thousand militia from the States of New York and Vermont, in reinforcement of this part of the plan. So wrote the Secretary of War;¹ but Fassett's brigade alone seems to have been called for. Hampton was then at Burlington.²

A BRITISH PLUNDERING EXPEDITION TO PLATTSBURGH, SWANTON, AND OTHER TOWNS.

Tempted by the defenceless condition of Plattsburgh and the entire western side of Lake Champlain, Col. Murray with a British force crossed the line on the 30th of July with two war sloops, three gunboats, and forty-seven longboats, with over fourteen hundred men; landed at Plattsburgh on the afternoon of the 31st without opposition; commenced a work of devastation and plunder, and continued it until ten o'clock of the next day, when he re-embarked. The public property destroyed was valued at twenty-five thousand dollars, and the private property plundered at more than eight thousand. Gen. Hampton was at Burlington, twenty miles distant, with an army of between three and four thousand men, and had twenty-four hours' notice of the intended attack, but did nothing to prevent it. Messengers had been repeatedly sent requesting him to send a regiment to Plattsburgh, but to no effect. While Murray was at Plattsburgh, about three hundred of the New York militia were hastily gathered, who however dared not approach the village until the enemy had retired. Then they entered the town and captured a picket-guard of twenty-one men, who had been left by Murray. These were sent to Burlington as prisoners of war.

The longboats and two of the gunboats proceeded to Swanton, where the men destroyed some old barracks, and plundered several citizens. Like outrages on private property were committed at Cumberland Head, Point au Roche, and Chazy Landing. Two sloops and the other gunboat sailed up the Lake beyond Burlington, destroyed eight or ten longboats engaged in transportation, and captured one Durham Boat loaded with flour. On passing Burlington they fired a few shots at the place, but bore away as soon as the batteries on shore began to play upon them.³

BRITISH DEMONSTRATION AGAINST BURLINGTON, AUG. 2 1813.

The affair before alluded to was more fully described in the following letters, found in the Federal Republican (Georgetown, D. C.,) of Aug. 16 1813.

Extract of a letter from Burlington, dated Aug. 3.

Yesterday afternoon the Eagle and Growler, lately taken by the enemy on the lake, with some armed gallies, were seen advancing. At a quarter before 3 o'clock the gallies commenced firing on the town and battery, which was returned by the vessels in the bay and from the battery. The firing continued brisk on both sides for about half an hour, when the enemy drew off a little, seemingly in expectation that our vessels would leave the bay and give them battle; which they attempted to do, and after sailing, five in number,¹ within a league or four miles from the enemy, expecting in a few minutes the action would commence, our vessels came to anchor, and soon after returned into the bay, under the battery, to the great mortification of thousands who witnessed it. The enemy seems neither to have slumbered or slept, for during the night they cut out and captured four of the best sloops on the lake, with provisions, and burnt one laden with salt. It is also said they have burnt two sets of barracks on the lake [at Plattsburgh and Swanton;] and this morning at four o'clock they were seen with their prizes in triumph sailing to their companions. Not the smallest injury has been done to this city.

From the Albany Register.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Burlington, dated Aug. 5, to his friend in this city.

The news of the day you will obtain from the public papers. The British have landed at Plattsburgh, burnt the barracks, arsenal, and public property, respecting private [incorrect.] Swanton has shared the same fate since. Last Monday, Burlington was cannonaded, shot thrown into buildings, and the people in Water street had to leave their homes. This took place in sight of the camp and of my house. The British came with two sloops (the [late] Growler and Eagle) and one small row-galley with a 24 pounder. We had twice the number of vessels, but in no state of preparation, and no officers but a captain. The British ere long moved still south unmolested, took three merchant vessels with a rich booty, and returned in our sight back to [towards] Plattsburgh. We expect another visit every hour. We have no means of defence. Is this taking Canada? This whole territory lies at the mercy of the British. The enemy has as yet been moderated in victory; nor have individuals been injured materially.

It is obvious that this writer did not approve of the war, and had not heard of the outrageous disregard of the rules of civilized warfare by Col. Murray; yet the incidents within the personal knowledge of the writer were probably given with substantial accuracy. It was true that there were then no sufficient means of defence on the lake, but in Burlington Hampton had a large military force fit for active duty.

U. S. TROOPS AT BURLINGTON, July 1813.

The U. S. Inspector General, under date of Aug. 2 1813, gave the following return of troops at Burlington: ²

¹ Mr. Palmer states that the U. S. naval force on the Lake then consisted of one sloop and six gunboats. Aug. 20 three small sloops were added.

U. S. Naval force on Lake Champlain, Aug. 20 1813—Battle declined by the British.

The American naval force on Lake Champlain consisted, on the 20th of August, of the President, 12 guns; Com. Preble, 11 do.; Montgomery. 11 do.; Frances, 6 do.; two gunboats of one 18 pounder each; and six scows of one 12 pounder each; amounting in all to 48 guns.

In the month of September, Capt. Macdonough sailed from Burlington to the lines, and offered the British battle; this they refused, and sailed out of the lake to the northward.¹

COL. ISAAC CLARK'S INVASIONS OF CANADA.

In October Maj. Gen. Hampton wrote to the Secretary of War as follows :

Oct. 4.—I have directed the commencement of a petty war, or invasion of the lines, at and near Lake Champlain, by Col. Clark, who has some volunteers, and Brigadier General [Elias] Fassett, (our Colonel,³) who has, at my instance, called out his brigade of militia. The latter, I understand, turn out but badly; but they will make, together, I suppose, from six hundred to a thousand men. There has been inculcated by the artifices of the British, a shameful and corrupt neutrality on the lines, for the purpose of gain. I have directed these officers to break the truce. And, should other means fail, to act the part of the mischievous urchin, who, to get two peaceable tabbies at "making the fur fly," held them up together by the tail.⁴ To be serious, it is really time each individual shall take his side, and that traitors to either should meet their due reward. What I am aiming at, however, is tranquility on the road [down the Chateauguay river] by kicking up a dust on the lines. It will also create a division [diversion?] at a proper point. Of Hopkins's [New York] militia, but about two hundred and fifty have arrived, and not more than fifty or sixty of them have consented to pass the line. Such as refused, General Parker was authorized to keep on the lines below, and to excite all the alarm he could, with them and the Vermonters.

Oct. 12.—Colonel Clark is carrying on his small war, on the lines, with all the effect contemplated. The enemy's motley force have everywhere nearly disappeared. He is concentrating, no doubt, in points in my way, or on the river.¹

On the very day Gen. Hampton wrote the last letter above quoted from, Col. Clark made a successful dash at Missisquoi village in St. Armand, Lower Canada, of which the following is the Colonel's report to the Secretary of War :

CAMP, CHAZY-LANDING, October 15 1813.

It is with great pleasure I can inform you of a successful attack upon the enemy at Massesquoi bay, on the morning of the 12th inst. At this time I had only the riflemen with me, the artillery moving slow and the militia protecting their rear. We proceeded to the village (Massesquoi) and arrived within 15 rods of the enemy before we were discovered. We found them drawn up under Major Powell in a manner that would have annoyed us much, had we attacked them by water, but wholly unprepared to defend themselves on the land side. They commenced a fire on the left flank, but in ten minutes after the first attack they laid down their arms and surrendered themselves prisoners of war.

Understanding that a force of 200 men under Col. Lock was marching to attack us, I despatched Capt. Finch with his company to reconnoitre them and ascertain their course. He proceeded with such promptness and ability as to surprise and capture the advanced guard, consisting of cavalry, excepting one man who escaped, and giving the information, the enemy retreated.

The prisoners were then put on board our boats and sent to Burlington. Our whole force engaged was 102—the number of prisoners taken is 101; their killed 9, and wounded 14. I am, sir, with respect, &c. ISAAC CLARKE.²

In November, Clark again visited the same place, as the following shows:

MONTREAL, Nov. 6 [1813.]

The famous Colonel Clarke has again been over to Missisquoi bay and taken about 90 head of cattle, which he had followed from the other side of the line. In this excursion the Colonel is said to have behaved very honorably, and we are glad to give "the devil his due."³

CAMPAIGN AGAINST MONTREAL, OCT. AND NOV. 1813.

July 3 the Secretary of War indicated the plan of a campaign against Kingston, Gen. Hampton co-operating by an advance in force against Montreal. Nov. 17 1813, Wilkinson wrote that "the game [Montreal] was in view," and, had Hampton "performed the junction directed, would have been ours in eight or ten days."—American State Papers, Military Affairs Vol. I, p. 478.

Montreal, and on the 8th orders were transmitted accordingly to Hampton.¹

Aug. 5th the scheme was submitted to Maj. Gen. Wilkinson, who had been put in command of the ninth military district, which covered Vermont, and New York north of the Highlands.²

Aug. 20 Wilkinson reached Sacketts' Harbor, then headquarters ;³ on the 23d issued General Orders ; and on the 26th held a council of officers, to which four questions were proposed, the fourth being this :

4th.—To rendezvous the whole of the troops on the lake [Ontario] in this vicinity, and in co-operation with our squadron, to make a bold feint upon Kingston, slip down the St. Lawrence, lock up the enemy in our rear to starve or surrender, or oblige him to follow us without artillery, baggage or provisions, or eventually to lay down his arms, to sweep the St. Lawrence of armed craft, and in conjunction with the division under Major-general Hampton, to take Montreal.

This proposition met the approval of the Council.⁴ This plan covered the Vermont troops, to wit, the battalion of the 11th U. S. infantry then at Sacketts' Harbor, and all in Vermont under Hampton.

Sept. 1 the Secretary of War warned Hampton that Prevost's "rear [Montreal] is manifestly neglected, and we must not lose the advantage he presents for attacking it."⁵

Sept. 15 Hampton had concentrated most of his army at Cumberland Head. On the 19th at midnight the army landed near Champlain village, and an hour later two detachments of the light corps marched, one against a post a little over the line on the lake shore, and the other against Odletown. The blow was to be struck at dawn, and both parties were then to concentrate at Odletown. Both parties were misled, and nothing resulted but the killing part of a picket and capturing the rest, except two or three, while the main body escaped. A few Indians lurked in the bushes, killed one of our sentries, and wounded two or three others. Hampton's troops soon exhausted the wells and springs of Odletown, the neighboring streams were reported to be dry, the Chateaugay route was adopted, and Oct. 4 Hampton reported the army at Chateaugay, and there and in the neighborhood it remained until Oct. 21, when he entered Canada, and on the 25th made an attack on a small body of British troops, and failed, with a loss of thirty-five men in killed and wounded.⁶ A council of the officers followed, which advised a return to Chateaugay, either for winter quarters, or to be ready to strike below. Nov. 6, Wilkinson advised Hampton to meet him at St. Regis. Nov. 8 Hampton declined St. Regis, and proposed Cognawaga; and on the fifteenth notified the Secretary of War of his disagreement with Wilkinson, and stated that he should make the necessary arrangements for placing his army in winter quarters, and commence his journey to the southward. He went to Washington and resigned April 6 1814.¹

Having traced Gen. Hampton to the close of his inglorious career in the 9th military district, it is but just to add that for the failure of the campaigns of the northern army he shares the responsibility with John Armstrong, the Secretary of War, and Major Generals Dearborn and Wilkinson, the commanders in the ninth military district. With strong probability of truth, it has been asserted that the government never intended a real invasion of Canada, for fear that the reduction of Montreal and other important points on the St. Lawrence might ultimately result in the annexation of Canada to the United States, and a consequent increase of political power in the north.—See Palmer's Champlain, p. 211. A subsequent treaty of reciprocity of trade between the two countries, at a time when annexation to the United States was strongly favored in Canada, which waned after the treaty, goes to confirm this opinion strongly. Wade Hampton was born in South Carolina in 1754; distinguished himself in the revolutionary war under Marion and Sumter; was Member of Congress 1795-7 and 1803-5, Col. U. S. army Oct. 1808, Brig. Gen. Feb. 1809, and Maj. Gen. March 2 1813. In 1809 he was put in command of New Orleans, but quarrelling with his subordinate officers, he was superseded by Wilkinson in 1812. Both were assigned to the ninth military district in 1813, Hampton insisting upon having an independent command. He was subjected, however, to Wilkinson, and the result proved that the two would not co-operate, and hence the failure of the campaign against Montreal when its capture was apparently easy. It is evident from Hampton's correspondence with the Secretary of War, that he had no confidence in the then newly raised regulars and militia, although it is very evident that the troops honored themselves whenever they had a fair opportunity, as at Chippewa, Lundy's Lane, Fort Erie, Chrystler's Farm, St. Armand, and Plattsburgh. Gen. Hampton died at Columbia, S. C., Feb. 4, 1835. Lieut. Gen. Wade Hampton, of the late rebel army and now, 1878, Governor of South Carolina, is a grandson.—Drake's Dict. of Am. Biography.

Having thus briefly noticed Hampton's failure in the projected attack upon Montreal, in which the Vermont troops seem to have had no opportunity to join in battle, it remains to notice the operations of Maj. Gen. Wilkinson, under whom was the battalion of five hundred men detached from Clark's 11th U. S. Infantry.

Oct. 9 1813, Gen. Wilkinson issued orders dividing his army at Sackett's Harbor into four brigades, and a reserve; the fourth brigade consisting of the 11th, 21st, and 14th regiments of U. S. Infantry, under Brig. Gen. Swartwout.¹ The battalion of the 11th consisted probably of three companies from Vermont, and three from New Hampshire, though the soldiers from both States were somewhat mixed in all the companies in the regiment.²

Oct. 21, the army left Sackett's Harbor for the voyage down the St. Lawrence, Wilkinson sick, but accompanying the army, and on the 7th of November entered the rapids below Ogdensburg.³ On the preceding day, anticipating a successful passage, Wilkinson advised Hampton to meet him with his army at St. Regis.⁴ The enemy was neither locked up in Wilkinson's rear, nor forced to follow him without artillery, but on the contrary our sick General was molested by artillery and infantry on the shore, and dogged by gunboats in the rear. Nov. 9th troops were landed under Gen. Brown to clear the coast to the head of the Long Saut, which was accomplished, and on the 10th he continued the work and reached the foot of the Saut. The flotilla reached and remained near the head of the Saut until the 12th, Gen. Boyd in the mean time having landed his troops to prevent an attack from the enemy. On the 11th the enemy attacked, and the severe battle of Chrystler's Farm—sometimes called the battle of Williamsburgh—was fought by Gen. Boyd, aided by Covington and Swartwout. Gen. Wilkinson wrote at the moment that the action "for the numbers engaged was extremely warm and bloody for upwards of two hours, during which time, in open space and fair combat, the raw undisciplined troops of the United States braved, and frequently drove, the best troops of the British army."⁵ Lossing, writing from more complete materials than Wilkinson had when the entry was made in his journal, states that "the conflict lasted about five hours, in the midst of cold, and snow, and sleet, when the Americans were compelled to fall back." Then Lt. Col. Timothy Upham and Major Malcom checked this retreat, attacked the enemy, and drove them back, when both sides suspended further fighting. The Americans retired to their boats during the night, and the British remained upon the field. "Neither party had gained a victory," wrote Lossing,

"but the advantage was with the British." But as the British did not prevent the army from prosecuting its voyage, Wilkinson justly said that they could not claim a victory.¹ The official report of our losses shows 102 killed, and 237 wounded ; missing not included. Of the 11th regiment, Lieut. William S. Heaton of Capt. Benj. F. Edgerton's Vermont company, was wounded, and died two days after the battle. Of the same company, William Briggs, Manson S. Cogswell, O. Hall, Horatio Lord, John McMelly jr., Joseph Orn, Ebenezer Orn, Nathaniel Sias, Christopher Tohn, and Daniel Woodbury were reported missing.² The History of the War, (Hartford, 1815,) states the American loss at 122 killed, 251 wounded, missing 31—and the British loss at 210 killed, 248 wounded, prisoners 17.

Nov. 12 the army passed the Saut and joined Gen. Brown near Cornwall, Wilkinson expecting to find Hampton's army at St. Regis on the opposite shore, but instead received notice that Hampton declined meeting him there, and was marching towards Lake Champlain. A council of war was therefore called, which determined to suspend the attack on Montreal, and to remove to French Mills ; and accordingly the army went into winter quarters there.³ According to the report of his Adj't. General, Wilkinson's army numbered 8,143, and the battalion of the 11th regiment 454, Dec. 1 1813, showing a loss to that battalion of 74 since the 23d of the preceding August.

THE BRITISH ON LAKE CHAMPLAIN DECLINE A BATTLE.

About the 1st of December Macdonough sailed to King's Bay and anchored under Point au Fer. On the 4th Capt. Pring entered the lake with six British galleys, landed at Rouse's Point, and burned a small shed there, which had been used as a public storehouse. Macdonough at once weighed anchor, and, it being calm at the time, attempted to work out of the bay with sweeps. At the same time he sent Lieut. Cassin forward with four row galleys with orders to bring the enemy into action and thus detain them until the sloops could come up. The British, however, refused to engage.⁴

BRITISH RAID ON DERBY VT.

December 27, a detachment of British troops, under Capt. Barker of the frontier light infantry, crossed the line into Vermont and destroyed some public storehouses and barracks which had been erected at Derby. In consequence of this, and threatening movements of the British on the Richelieu, Wilkinson broke up the camp at French Mills [February 1814,] and the troops, magazines, and provisions were removed to Lake Champlain.¹

The British official account of the raid upon Derby was as follows :

H. Q. QUEBEC, Jan. 9. 1814.

O. G. [GENERAL ORDER.]

His Excellency the Governor in chief and commander of the forces has received from Col. Sir Sidney Beckwith a report from Capt. Barker of the Frontier Light Infantry, stating the complete success of an expedition committed to the charge of that officer, against the enemy's post and depots at Derby in the State of Vermont, which were taken possession of at daybreak on the 27th December; extensive barracks for 1200 men, lately erected, were destroyed, together with the stables and storehouses, and a considerable quantity of valuable military stores have been brought away.

Captain Barker mentions Captains Curtis and Taylin, Lieuts. Massa and Bodwell, and Ensign Baynton of the Township Battalions of Militia, as having been most active with the volunteers of the Militia, in the execution of this judicious and spirited enterprise.

GOV. CHITTENDEN AND VT. MILITIA AT VARIANCE.

Pending the abortive movements of Wilkinson and Hampton in Nov. 1813, a portion of the militia of the third brigade and third division of Vermont militia, under Lieut. Col. Luther Dixon, crossed the lake into New York and put themselves under the command of Hampton. This was contrary to the views of Gov. Chittenden, who believed the militia to be "peculiarly adapted and exclusively assigned for the service and protection of the respective states, excepting in the cases provided for by the national constitution, viz. "to execute the laws of the union, suppress insurrections and repel invasions."—See ante, p. 420. In October 1813, at the request of Hampton, Col. Fassett of the U. S. Infantry, who was also at that date General of the third brigade of the third division of the Vermont militia, called out the brigade. On the 6th of Nov. Gov. Chittenden notified the General Assembly that there was a vacancy in that brigade "in consequence of the actual removal of Gen. Elias Fassett from the district of his command," and on the same day Col. Jacob Davis of Milton was elected Brigadier General vice Fassett.² The brigade had been called out by Fassett in October in view of the removal of Hampton's army to the Cognawaga to join Wilkinson, of course leaving the Champlain valley defenceless; but in November Hampton returned, being himself at Plattsburgh on the 12th and reporting his army at Chazy.³ The necessity then for retaining the Vermont Militia at Plattsburgh had passed, Vermont was exposed, and there was much discontent at their absence from the State. Under these circumstances Gov. Chittenden issued the following proclamation:

³ American State Papers, Mil. Aff. Vol. I, p. 462.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY MARTIN CHITTENDEN, ESQUIRE,

Governor, Captain General, and Commander in Chief, in and over the State of Vermont,
A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, it appears that the Third Brigade of the Third Division of the Militia of this State has been ordered from our frontiers to the defence of a neighbouring State : And whereas it further appears, to the extreme regret of the Captain General, that a part of the Militia of said Brigade have been placed under the command and at the disposal of an officer of the United States, out of the jurisdiction or control of the Executive of this State, and have been actually marched to the defence of a sister State, fully competent to all the purposes of self defence, whereby an extensive section of our own Frontier is left, in a measure, unprotected, and the peaceable good citizens thereof are put in great jeopardy, and exposed to the retaliatory incursions and ravages of an exasperated enemy : And whereas, disturbances of a very serious nature are believed to exist in consequence of a portion of the Militia having thus been ordered out of the State :

Therefore, to the end that these great evils may be provided against, and, as far as may be, prevented for the future :

Be it known—that such portion of the Militia of said Third Division, as may be now doing duty in the State of New York or elsewhere, beyond the limits of this State, both officers and men, are hereby ordered and directed, by the Captain General and Commander in Chief of the Militia of the State of Vermont, forthwith to return to the respective places of their usual residence, within the territorial limits of said Brigade, and there to hold themselves in constant readiness to act in obedience to the orders of Brigadier General JACOB DAVIS, who is appointed by the Legislature of this State, to command said Brigade.

And the said Brigadier General Davis is hereby ordered and directed, forthwith, to see that the Militia of his said Brigade be completely armed and equipped as the Law directs, and holden in constant readiness to march on the shortest notice to the defence of the Frontier ; and, in case of actual invasion, without further orders, to march with his said Brigade, to act, either in co-operation with the troops of the United States, or separately, as circumstances may require, in repelling the enemy from our territory, and in protecting the good citizens of this State from their ravages or hostile incursions.

And in case of an event, so seriously to be deprecated, it is hoped and expected, that every citizen, without distinction of party, will fly at once to the nearest post of danger, and that the only rallying words will be—OUR COUNTRY.

Feeling, as the Captain General does, the weight of responsibility which rests upon him with regard to the constitutional duties of the Militia, and the sacred rights of our citizens to protection from this great class of community, so essentially necessary to all free countries—at a moment, too, when they are so imminently exposed to the dangers of hostile incursions, and domestic difficulties—he cannot conscientiously discharge the trust reposed in him by the voice of his fellow citizens, and by the Constitution of this and the United States, without an unequivocal declaration, that, in his opinion, the Military strength and resources of this State must be reserved for its own defence and protection, exclusively—excepting in cases provided for by the Constitution of the U. States ; and then, under orders derived only from the Commander in Chief [i. e. the President of the United States.]

Given under my hand at Montpelier this 10th day of November in the year of our Lord One thousand Eight hundred and thirteen ; and of the Independence of the United States the Thirty eight.

MARTIN CHITTENDEN.

By His Exy's Command, SAMUEL SWIFT, Sec'y.¹

This order was not well received by the Vermont troops at Plattsburgh. On the contrary, the Governor's messenger was helped out of camp, and the officers met and signed the following reply, which was drawn up by Capt. Sanford Gadcomb.

CANTONMENT, PLATTSBURGH, NOV. 15, 1815.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY, MARTIN CHITTENDEN, ESQ., Governor, Captain General, Commander in Chief, in and over the State of Vermont.

SIR: A most novel and extraordinary Proclamation from your Excellency, "ordering and directing such portion of the Militia of the Third Brigade of the Third Division of the Militia of Vermont, now doing duty in the State of New York, both officers and men, forthwith to return to the respective places of their residence," has just been communicated to the undersigned officers of said Brigade. A measure so unexampled requires that we should state to your Excellency the reasons which induce us, and absolutely and positively, to refuse obedience to the order contained in your Excellency's Proclamation. With due deference to your Excellency's opinion, we humbly conceive, that when we are ordered into the service of the United States, it becomes our duty, when required, to march to the defence of any section of the Union. We are not of that class who believe that our duties as citizens or soldiers are circumscribed within the narrow limits of the Town or State in which we reside; but that we are under a paramount obligation to our common country, to the great confederation of States. We further conceive that, while we are in actual service, and during the period for which we were ordered into service, your Excellency's power over us, as Governor of the State of Vermont, is suspended.

If it is true, as your Excellency states, that we "are out of the jurisdiction or control of the Executive of Vermont," we would ask from whence your Excellency derives the right or presumes to exercise the power of ordering us to return from the service in which we are now engaged? If we were legally ordered into the service of the United States, your Excellency must be sensible that you have no authority to order us out of that service. If we were illegally ordered into the service, our continuance in it is either voluntary or compulsory. If voluntary, it gives no one a right to remonstrate or complain; if compulsory we can appeal to the laws of our country for redress against those who illegally restrain us of our liberty. In either case we cannot conceive the right your Excellency has to interfere in the business. Viewing the subject in this light, we conceive it our duty to declare unequivocally to your Excellency, that we shall not obey your Excellency's order for returning; but shall continue in the service of our country until we are legally and honorably discharged. An invitation or order to desert the standard of our country will never be obeyed by us, although it proceeds from the Governor and Captain General of Vermont.

Perhaps it is proper that we should content ourselves with merely giving your Excellency the reasons which prevail upon us to disregard your proclamation; but we are impressed with the belief that our duty to ourselves, to the soldiers under our command, and to the public, require that we should expose to the world the motives which produced and the objects which were intended to be accomplished by such extraordinary proclamation. We shall take the liberty to state to your Excellency, plainly, our sentiments on this subject. We consider your proclamation as a gross insult to the officers and soldiers in service, inasmuch as it implies that they are so ignorant of their rights as to believe that you have authority to command them in their present situation, or so abandoned as to follow your insidious advice. We cannot regard your proclamation in any other light than as an unwarrantable stretch of executive authority, issued from the worst motives, to effect the basest purposes. It is, in our opinion, a renewed instance of that spirit of disorganization and anarchy which is carried on by a faction to overwhelm our country with ruin and disgrace. We cannot perceive what other object your Excellency could have in view than to embarrass the operations of the army, to excite mutiny and sedition among the soldiers and induce them to desert, that they might forfeit the wages to which they are entitled for their patriotic services.

We have, however, the satisfaction to inform your Excellency, that although your proclamations have been distributed among the soldiers by your agent delegated for that purpose, they have failed to produce the intended effect—and although it may appear incredible to your Excellency, even soldiers have discernment sufficient to perceive that the proclamation of a Governor when offered out of the line of his duty, is a harmless, inoffensive and nugatory document. They regard it with mingled emotions of pity and contempt for its author, and as a striking monument of his folly.

Before we conclude, we feel ourselves in justice to your Excellency bound to declare that a knowledge of your Excellency's character induces us to believe that the folly and infamy of the proclamation, to which your Excellency has put your signature, is not wholly to be ascribed to your Excellency, but chiefly to the evil advisers with whom we believe your Excellency is encompassed.

We are, with due respect, your Excellency's obedient servants,

Zadock Thompson records that "the militia, however, returned before their time of service was expired, and no further notice was taken of the transaction. GOV. CHITTENDEN'S PROCLAMATION IN CONGRESS.

IN HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, Jan. 6, 1814.

Mr. Sharp [of Kentucky,] after a number of introductory remarks, explanatory of the laws relating to the militia, which subject them, when in actual service, to the rules and articles of war, and place them, during such time, in all respects on the footing of regular troops, adverted to the recent proclamation of Governor Chittenden, of Vermont, calling the militia of that State from the position assigned them by military orders. This act, he said, was in direct violation of the statute, which makes it penal to entice the soldiers in the service of the United States to desert. This act was done, too, at a critical time, and by a person standing in so conspicuous a station as to require particularly the punishment due to his offence. Mr. S. adverted to the peculiar station of the militia thus ordered home, on a frontier requiring their presence for its protection; and whereas, he said, from their character, they might, indeed, be expected, being the descendants of the Green Mountain Boys who so much distinguished themselves during our Revolution under the illustrious Allen, to have voluntarily aided in the invasion of the territory of the enemy. Under these circumstances, and when their services were most needed, they were invited by Governor Chittenden to desert their position. His conduct in this respect must meet the decided reprehension not only of every member of this House, but of every good citizen of the union. It ought then to receive legal scrutiny. His offence ought to be punished, lest our laws should be subject to the remark which was applied to Solon's: that they were like cobwebs, which entangled the weak, but which the strong could break through. To bring this subject directly before the House, he offered the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the militia of any of these United States, or the Territories thereof, when lawfully employed in the service of the United States, are subject to the same rules and articles as the troops of the United States.

Resolved, That every person not subject to the rules and articles of war, who shall procure or entice a soldier in the service of the United States to desert, is guilty of an infraction of the laws of the United States and subject to punishment.

Resolved, That His Excellency Martin Chittenden, Governor of the State of Vermont, by issuing his proclamation, dated at Montpelier, on the 10th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1813, did entice soldiers in the service of the United States to desert. Therefore,

Resolved, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, requested to instruct the Attorney General of the United States to institute a prosecution against the said Martin Chittenden.

² Thompson's Vermont, Part II, p. 96.

Mr. Fisk, of Vermont, said he had hoped, and in so saying he believed he expressed the sense of the whole delegation from the State of Vermont, that these resolutions would not have made their appearance. He believed that very few persons in Vermont approved of that proclamation. He was certain there were none of the delegation from that State who approved it. The act was unjustifiable, but it was the act of the Governor of a State. The resolutions were objectionable in several points of view, of which he would briefly notice only one or two. If Gov. Chittenden had committed an offence against the laws, he was liable to the proper tribunal. It was not proper that the House of Representatives should turn informers. The courts of justice should be as clear from any improper influence as possible. If the resolutions should be adopted, and the weight of the opinion of the House of Representatives were such as it ought to be, it would be conclusive against the individual concerned: if, however, they failed in convicting him, and merely excited public sympathy in his favor by their accusation, it would place this body in an unpleasant, if not ridiculous point of view. In such case the House had no constitutional power; and all resolutions on the subject must be improper. As well as for another reason: these resolutions declare the law to be so and so, and then declare the Governor to have violated the law. Now, said Mr. F., our resolutions neither make or strengthen laws, and therefore can be of no use. Viewing the resolutions as objectionable in every point of view, he moved that they lie on the table.¹

Mr. Sharp said, as the delegation from Vermont appeared to object to the form or principle of these resolves, he had no objection to let them lie for consideration.

Mr. Grosvenor [of New York] said, if, without expressing any opinion on the part of this House, the resolutions merely directed the Attorney General to institute a prosecution against Governor Chittenden, he, for his own part, would not object to them. He had no objection to let the Judiciary, under the constitution and law, decide the question at once, whether the Governors who had acted with Governor Chittenden had or had not acted constitutionally.² Without knowing what was the opinion of others, if that part was expunged which threw the opinion of this House in the scale against the gentleman implicated, he should not object to a resolution which should place the question properly before a judicial tribunal, where alone it could be correctly decided.

Mr. Wright [of Maryland] said he was of the same opinion with the gentleman last up, but for a different reason. He did not wish the crime in question to be considered as the mere breach of a penal law. He held in his hand the constitution of the United States, which defined the crime of treason to be levying war, &c. and affording aid and comfort to the enemy. He had no idea of confining the offence of Governor Chittenden either expressly or by inference to the mere peccadillo of violating a law, when he appeared to have violated so much more important and authoritative an instrument.

Mr. Findley [of Penn.] said he had no objections to the resolutions lying on the table; but was totally opposed to this House giving its opinion on the law, or directing the prosecution of any one. He was opposed to the whole resolutions, because he believed no good could come of them, though he should, for the present, vote for their lying on the table.¹

The resolutions were never considered again.

CAMPAIGN OF 1814.

It was determined by the cabinet that the campaign of 1814 in the north should be the same as the preceding campaigns, to wit, an invasion of Canada. Croghan was to move against the British on the upper lakes; Brown on the Niagara frontier; and Gen. Izard, in the Champlain region, was to cut the connection on the St. Lawrence between Montreal and Kingston.² The Vermont troops were employed in two of the three parts of this scheme — part of the 11th [Clark's] U. S. regiment on the Niagara frontier; and the remainder of the 11th, the 30th [Fassett's,] the 31st [Dana's,] and the Vermont militia and volunteers in the vicinity of Lake Champlain. Subsidiary to these general movements was a continuation of the war upon the smugglers, and the harrassing of the Canadians in the vicinity of the Vermont and New York lines — business in which Col. Clark continued to be very efficient.

Jan. 14, a detachment of thirteen mounted infantry was ordered to the line near Highgate, which, after crossing and recrossing the lines, found no smuggled property, and returned to supper at Mr. Dibbles. After supper and when prepared to remount, they were met by a party of thirty armed smugglers, who commenced firing upon them, which was returned with spirit until the smugglers charged, and then the door was defended until seven of the infantry escaped, the rest being taken prisoners except sergeant Butler commanding, who being badly wounded was left, and subsequently died.³

Feb. 13, pursuant to orders from the War Department, Gen. Wilkinson broke up the cantonment; seven regiments of infantry (part of the 11th included) and one company of artillery marched for Sackett's Harbor under Gen. Brown; six regiments of infantry, one of heavy and one of light artillery, marched to Plattsburgh; and one brigade (including the 30th and 31st regiments,) marched to Burlington under Gen. Macomb.

Feb. 19th, having learned that our army had left, the British made a raid for plunder at French Mills and vicinity, and on the 21st Gen. Wilkinson marched with three thousand men, but on proceeding ten miles from Plattsburgh, he learned that the enemy had left for Canada. In this expedition the British gained a considerable amount of plunder, but lost more than one hundred regulars by desertion, fifty of whom came to Plattsburgh, and the remainder went to Sackett's Harbor.

REGIMENTAL ORDERS.

BURLINGTON, Feb. 24th, 1814.

All noncommissioned officers and soldiers belonging to the Eleventh Regiment of Infantry, who are absent from said regiment, either on furlough or otherwise, are hereby ordered to return to their duty or they will be considered as Deserters, unless they report themselves to the commanding officer of said Regiment, at this post, immediately on the expiration of their furloughs.

ISAAC CLARK, Col. 11th Infantry.

PLATTSBURGH, March 12 [1814.]

It is with pleasure we inform our readers, that General Wilkinson seems determined to destroy the traitorous intercourse kept up by men who call themselves Americans, with our enemies in Canada. Small detachments have been tried without effect, and now strong ones are put in motion. Colonel Clark marched the 8th inst. with Major Bailey, and a detachment of one thousand infantry and one hundred mounted riflemen, all Green Mountain Boys, to take possession of the frontier, from the lake east to Connecticut river; and on the 10th inst. another detachment of 300 prime riflemen and sixty dragoons marched under Major Forsyth, whose name carries terror to the enemy, to guard the lines west of the Lake.

We understand the orders of those officers are to make prisoners of every British subject detected within the limits of the United States, and to apprehend and deliver to the civil authority, for trial and punishment, every American citizen found in Canada.²

BURLINGTON, March 25, 1814.

AMERICAN STANDARD PLANTED AT MISSISQUOI BAY.

On Thursday of last week, [March 17,] Colonel Clark advanced with his detachment into the enemies' country as far as South river (within sixty [six?] miles of Isle-aux-Noix,) captured the enemies' picket or advance guard, took sixty stand of arms, four oxen and six horses, after which he returned to Missisquoi bay, planted the American Standard and has there taken up his quarters. The Colonel has been joined by General Macomb with most of the Infantry from this post, and several detachments of artillery from Plattsburgh.

Previous to Col. Clark's invasion of the enemies' country, he gave positive orders to his detachment in all instances to respect private property, under the pains and penalties of the rules and articles of War.

Major Forsyth has advanced on the other side of the lake, within three miles of the Island, and has now made his quarters at Chazy or Champlain. We understand that a large reinforcement is to join him today from Plattsburgh.

BURLINGTON, April 1, 1814.

We understand that the lake north of the lines is broken up, and that the enemies' fleet has been out south of Ash Island.

Colonel Clark and his infantry, lately stationed at Missisquoi Bay, have crossed the lake and formed a junction with the forces on the western side, under the command of Major General Wilkinson. On Wednesday last, [March 29,] we learn that our army had advanced within six miles of the enemy, who were posted and fortifying at the River La Cole. Colonel Clark and Major Forsyth were in the advance.³

BATTLE AT LA COLLE MILL.

BURLINGTON, April 4, 1814.

The following account of the movements of our Army is received from a source which may be relied on.

The Army has been in motion on various parts of our frontier. Some time since, a detachment was moved towards Missisquoi Bay, under command of Colonel Clark of the 11th Regiment, with a view to cut up by the roots the smuggling intercourse which had been carried on to a great extent; besides it was necessary to prevent the constant supply of provisions which were daily passing to the enemy from this state. This business was executed by Col. Clark with great zeal and promptness, and it is believed that the smuggling for the present is completely put down. The enemy having threatened Col. Clark's detachment, General Macomb was ordered by Major General Wilkinson to support him, and cut up any detachments of the enemy that might appear in our vicinity. The whole force of the American army on this side of the lake took post at St. Armands and remained there until it was ordered across the lake to join the main body under General Wilkinson at Champlain, where the Gen. had collected about 3000 men with a view of making a diversion in favour of the corps under Major Gen. Brown, who had marched for the Niagara Frontier. To give a more serious aspect to the movements of the army and to produce the contemplated diversion, an attack on the enemy's force at La Cole was contemplated, and on the 29th of last month the whole army moved on the Odletown road, with a view of attacking at La Cole Mills. The army unfortunately missed the road and proceeded about two miles beyond the small passage that led to the Mills, and after some trifling skirmishes with the enemy beyond Odletown, the army entered the proper route and drove the enemy's light troops before them and reached the Mills about half past three in the afternoon. General Wilkinson so disposed the troops as nearly to encircle the mill and brought up a howitzer and one 12 pounder to batter the walls, but after considerable time it was found little effect was produced. The enemy kept up a galling fire during the whole time our troops lay before the place from the loop holes cut in the Mill, and directed a great portion of his fire on the two pieces of artillery; our troops returned the fire with great coolness and with deliberate aim. The enemy made two sallies and charged Brig. General Smith's left in the first, but were repulsed with considerable loss. Towards the evening a British regiment arrived and made a charge on part of Brig. Gen. Bissell's brigade, but was so warmly received that they instantly fell back, leaving twelve men dead on the field, and suffered severely in wounded, (from their own accounts.) The American troops behaved with the utmost coolness and suffered less than the enemy, notwithstanding the advantage he had in point of position. Our loss was six officers wounded, 8 men killed, and 60 wounded. The officers wounded are Captain McPherson and Lt. Larabee of the Lt. Artillery, Lt. Can [Kerr] of the Riflemen, Lt. Green of the 24th, Lt. ——— of the 12th, and Ensign Parker of the 14th, who is since dead. The enemy's force was not ascertained, but computed at 1500; our force was double that number, but not more than one half was brought into the action. The whole of Brigadier Gen. Macomb's command was in the reserve and not at all engaged. Maj. Forsyth's Riflemen and Clark's detachments formed the line round the Mill. The American army returned to their camp late in the evening, without leaving a single man behind, or even a single article for the enemy to claim as a trophy.¹

The advance guard consisted of the rifles under Maj. Forsyth, and the 30th, 31st and part of the 11th infantry [Vermont regiments,] under Col. Clark; in all about 600 men. These were followed by two corps of infantry under Brig. Generals Bissell and Smith; and a reserve of 800 under Gen. Macomb brought up the rear. The loss of the Americans was 104 killed and wounded, and of the British, according to their report, 10 killed and 46 wounded.²

Lossing states that the mill was a heavy stone structure, with walls eighteen inches in thickness, and its windows barricaded with heavy timbers, through which were loop-holes for muskets. The British also occupied a block-house and a strong barn, around which were intrenchments. On the other hand the Americans were in the open fields, exposed to the galling fire from the protected enemy, who repeatedly charged upon them but in vain. Hence the disparity in the losses, which Lossing states as follows: Americans, 13 killed, 128 wounded, 13 missing; British, 11 killed, 2 officers and 44 men wounded, and 4 missing.¹

In the trial of Gen. Wilkinson by a court martial, in 1815, this affair was fully investigated and Wilkinson was honorably acquitted, it being evident that he failed on account of the mill being impervious to the artillery. Col. Clark was one of the witnesses on the part of the prosecution, and as he commanded the Vermont troops, who constituted most of the advanced party and were nearest to the enemy in the action, his testimony is here given, as follows:

Isaac Clark, Colonel of the 26th regiment of U. S. Riflemen,² being sworn and examined, as a witness on the part of the prosecution, testified that in March, 1814, (he thinks on the 29th of the month,) he accompanied Major General Wilkinson in the expedition against the Mill of La Cole in the province of Lower Canada. He commanded the advance guard of the army, consisting of the riflemen under Major Forsyth, the 30th and 31st [Vermont] regiments of infantry, and part of a company of the 11th, [Vermont and New Hampshire,] in all amounting to about six hundred men. He could not state exactly what was the whole effective force employed in the expedition, but from observation he should say it was between three and four thousand men. His first orders were given to him by General Wilkinson, who informed him he was to command the van, and designated the corps which were to compose it. Subsequently he received orders from Colonel Cummings, adjutant-general. He could not tell what time the army left Plattsburgh, as he was ordered from Missisquoi Bay and joined it at Champlain, about eight miles from La Cole Mill. The distance of the latter from Plattsburgh is about thirty miles. The roads were bad, and the season unfavourable; but the day on which they marched was pleasant.

The van marched from Champlain about 10 o'clock in the morning; and according to his impression, though he cannot be precise, it arrived before La Cole about 1 or 2 o'clock P. M. In their approach to it they had to turn off from the main road and proceed nearly four miles through the woods; they had nothing but a sleigh path, not wide enough for artillery, and in many places obstructed by trees cut down for the purpose; axe-men were employed to clear away these obstacles and in some parts to straighten the road. Parties of the enemy also occasionally appeared, but did not much impede their march. The witness further stated that he does not know of there being a better road than the one they took. What pieces of artillery accompanied the army, and of what calibre, it is impossible for him to tell, but it was said there was an eighteen, a twelve, and a six pounder.³ They had draft

² June 13 1814 a recruiting office was opened at Burlington for a regiment of riflemen, but styled the 26th U. S. Infantry, of which Isaac Clark [formerly of the 11th but then of the 48th regt.] was Colonel, Benjamin Forsyth Lieutenant Colonel, and Orsamus C. Merrill Major. These appointments were made April 5.—Northern Sentinel of June 17 1814.

³ The eighteen pounder broke down on the march, and could not be brought on to the field. There was no six pounder, but a five and a half inch mortar, which with the twelve pounder was placed in battery at the distance of two hundred and fifty yards from the mill, under com-horses with them, but what number of them he does not know, nor whether any oxen accompanied the expedition. The mill he should judge is about fifty or sixty feet long and forty feet broad. It is a strong building, and the stones which form the walls are principally large and heavy. The walls must be from two and a half to three feet thick, and resisted what were called twelve pound ball for two hours, and no visible impression was made on them. There were several log buildings adjacent to the mill which appeared to be occupied by the enemy and from which there was firing. There was also a building called a block house, but he did not conceive it was built purposely for that use. He thought the enemy had one piece of artillery; but whether the shot proceeded from the mill or from a gun-boat adjacent he could not say. It was impossible to ascertain the number of the enemy from appearance, as they were under cover. But from information given by deserters and prisoners there must have been six or seven hundred men in and about the mill, consisting of four companies of the 13th regiment and forty or fifty incorporated militia. In addition to these, two companies of voltigeurs came up, an hour and a half after the commencement of the action, attacked our line, and on being repulsed also retired into the mill. The walls of the mill are three stories high, and in every direction were loopholes and apertures for musketry, and some through the roof. The mill had one door on the east side, but none was visible in the south, where we made our approaches. Half an hour after the attack commenced, two pieces of artillery, a twelve and a six pounder [mortar,] were brought up and opened a fire upon the mill, but the eighteen pounder did not approach the scene of action within a number of miles. Why it remained behind he could not say; but after finding that no impression was made by the two pieces employed, he rode to General Wilkinson and asked if he had not some heavier artillery. The adjutant-general, or some other officer near him, replied that the carriage of the eighteen pounder was broken. He also deposed, that the roof of the mill was of wood, but that no red hot shot was used to set fire to it as they had no furnaces. During the attack two companies, who he understood from deserters were part of the 13th regiment, sallied from the mill upon the centre of our line, apparently to take the field pieces. They were defeated with great loss, very much cut to pieces, and after their repulse re-entered the mill. It would have been rather difficult for our troops to have followed them up and entered the place with the enemy, as the mill was very well guarded, and he heard no proposition of that effect at the time. He does not know whether the surrender of the place was demanded, but was confident there was no flag sent out.

The mill was on the north side of a stream frozen over; our attack was against the south side. The advance was regularly posted, and the fire of the artillery was kept up about two hours; there was perhaps a short cessation for want of cartridges. The firing of musketry, on both sides, continued until our artillery was moved out of danger, and the whole ceased near sundown. Our army remained near the scene of action not exceeding half an hour longer. The witness then, by order of General Wilkinson, withdrew a party of four hundred men (consisting of Major Forsyth's riflemen and 200 men of General Bissell's brigade,) who had been detached to the rear of the mill to cut off the retreat of the enemy in case our artillery had effected a breach and battered down the wall. The whole army shortly after marched back to Odletown, about six miles distant, where they remained during the night. There was nothing hasty or precipitate in this retreat. Orders were given to collect all the dead and wounded before the army retired, which was accomplished as far as related to the corps which he commanded, and the wounded were principally sent to Champlain. The day following, the army commenced its retrograde march to Plattsburgh.

The witness also stated that the artillery pointed against the south side of the mill were not in an oblique position: the shot struck square and there was no mand of Capt. Mc Pherson, who was wounded and compelled to retire. Lieut. Larabee succeeded in command of the battery and was also wounded and retired, when Lt. Sheldon commanded and continued to ply his artillery vigorously until he was ordered to withdraw with the army. Sheldon was a perfect "dare-devil." — See Vt. Hist. Magazine, Vol. I, p. 579.

glancing.¹ He could not undertake to say whether the place ought to have been carried by the force under General Wilkinsou's command, nor whether the retreat was disapproved of by the officers generally, as he immediately left the main body [to return to Missisquoi Bay.] General Wilkinson was several times on the field during the attack, and the witness recollects having received orders from him, and having seen him come up to the rear of the line when the voltigeurs made their charge. The orders then given he could not hear, but presumed General Wilkinson directed all the operations of the day. The troops appeared to be very well disciplined and kept their stations. Nine or ten were killed and thirty or forty wounded of the corps commanded by the witness;² but he does not know the loss of the other corps, nor why a retreat was ordered. But at the time it occurred, he observed the enemies' fire slackened, and concluded from it they must have been short of ammunition. Our line was then distant from the enemy between one hundred and one hundred and fifty yards, within fair musket shot.

In the early part of the affair the advance, by order of the witness, had been drawn up a few rods nearer the enemies' work, in part covered; but finding this position too much exposed, he caused the troops to retire and form four or five rods in the rear. He also stated that he does not know that any of the troops were uselessly employed or unnecessarily exposed during the day.³

The failure to capture the mill was charged to the want of artillery sufficiently powerful for the work; not to the army, which was sufficiently large and composed of men who stood firmly to their work until they were ordered to withdraw. On the morning after the battle Gen. Wilkinson issued the following:

HEAD-QUARTERS, ODLE TOWN, Province of }
Lower Canada, March 31st 1814. }

GENERAL ORDER.

The affair of yesterday is honorable to the Troops, and gives them a title to the thanks of the General and their Country. The constancy and courage exhibited under a tedious and galling fire of the enemy was exemplary, and would have done credit to the oldest troops in the world. Where every officer and every man evinces the same firmness and intrepidity, the General feels that it would be invidious to particularize. The advance under Colonel Clark and Major Forsyth, the corps under Brig. Generals Smith and Bissell, beat the enemy at every point of attack, and repulsed several desperate charges on our artillery. And the select corps under Brig. General Macomb, who were panting for the combat, if there had been occasion for their services, would have displayed equal valor. Every man and officer, every member of General's staff, manifested the utmost promptitude and decision. The conduct of Captain McPherson and his seconds, Lieuts. Larabee and Sheldon, who commanded the battery, was so conspicuously gallant that the army will excuse the General for designating them. The first kept his post until brought to the ground by a second shot; the second until grievously wounded, and the third behaved with the utmost intrepidity and maintained his ground until ordered to bring off the pieces.

² This is a large majority of the killed on the American side, and nearly one third of the whole number of the wounded—thus indicating that the Vermont troops bore their full share in the fight.

³ Memoirs by Gen. Wilkinson, Vol. 3, pp. 155-159. See same Vol. for council and general order as to the expedition, and the order of march, appendix x, and xi. It appears that the council expected he would bring 2300 men into the action.

Let the meritorious dead be collected and buried with the honors of war in the same grave. Let the wounded be cherished with the utmost tenderness, and removed to hospitals in the rear. And let the troops be immediately completed to sixty rounds of ammunition, and held perfectly ready to meet the enemy should he venture to advance.¹

VERMONT MILITIA CALLED OUT.

April 5, Gen. Wilkinson at Champlain informed Commodore Macdonough at Vergennes that the vessels of the enemy on Lake Champlain would soon be ready to sail, and probably would attempt to land a force for the purpose of destroying Macdonough's vessels, a part of which were in Otter Creek and others on the stocks. Wilkinson added that he could not, for the want of cannon, erect batteries at Rouse's Point to command the Lake. On application, Gov. Chittenden ordered out the militia in Franklin, Chittenden and Addison Counties, 500 men to be stationed at Burlington and 1000 at Vergennes, to guard the shipping and public property on the Lake; and on the 11th Wilkinson advised Macdonough to erect a strong battery at the mouth of Otter Creek, promising the co-operation of Gen. Macomb. From the 16th to the 20th Gen. Wilkinson and Gov. Chittenden were both at Vergennes, and the site of the proposed battery was agreed upon; the Vermont Militia, except the company of Capt. Wm. C. Munson of Panton, was discharged, on condition that they should rally on the firing of alarm signals, and Macomb was ordered to send a force of 500 men to Vergennes. On the 22d, in consequence of Wilkinson's order to Macomb, the Governor discharged the Militia.²

ATTACK ON MACDONOUGH AT OTTER CREEK.

May 14, a little before sunrise, the British fleet, consisting of a bomb-sloop and eighteen galleys, commenced a heavy and spirited fire on the battery at the mouth of Otter Creek, which was returned by the battery, in which some of the militia from the town of Addison, and other towns in the neighborhood, aided. Commodore Macdonough promptly came down the river with his new sloop of war and several galleys, and in an hour and a half the enemy were forced to retreat without our losing a man or suffering any injury. The British lost two fine row-boats. After this repulse their galleys entered the river Bouquet to seize some government stores, and on returning these were fired upon by a body of New York militia hastily gathered, and nearly all the men in the last galley were killed or wounded. A few days afterward Macdonough entered the Lake with his fleet and anchored in Cumberland bay, the scene subsequently of his great victory.³

DEATH OF LIEUT. COL. FORSYTH.

The affair at La Colle mill closed Wilkinson's career in the Lake Champlain valley, he having been recalled and subjected to a court of inquiry, by which he was honorably discharged. Major General Jacob Brown succeeded to the command of the ninth military district, and Maj. Gen. George Izard, a native of South Carolina, was left in command of the right wing of the northern army. Both armies in the Champlain valley had been largely increased, the British concentrating at La Colle and other points near the line, and having their fleet at hand. From the 11th to the 31st June, our army in strong force advanced from Plattsburgh to Champlain and Chazy, the 30th and 31st U. S. regiments with this army, in Brig. Gen. Daniel Bissell's brigade. Macdonough co-operated by anchoring his fleet in King's Bay, north of the mouth of the Big Chazy river. June 24th, Major Forsyth, then promoted to a Lieutenant Colonelcy, advanced to Odletown with 70 riflemen, where he was attacked by a detachment of 200 light armed British troops. Forsyth repulsed them and returned to Champlain with a loss of one killed and five wounded, the British losing three killed and five wounded. On the 28th he was ordered to enter Canada again, for the purpose of drawing the British across the line into an ambuscade. This he accomplished, drawing out Capt. Mayhew with about one hundred and fifty Indians. As the enemy approached the ambuscade, Forsyth stepped upon a log to watch their movements, when he was shot through the breast by an Indian. The rifles immediately uncovered and fired upon the enemy, who retreated in great haste, leaving seventeen of their number dead upon the field.¹

BENJAMIN FORSYTH was appointed to the army from North Carolina in 1808, and distinguished himself on various occasions in 1812, '13, and '14. Mr. Palmer says he was the best partizan officer in the army, and that his men declared they would avenge his death, and did so by killing Capt. Mayhew, who, with Forsyth, was buried at Champlain. Lt. Col. Forsyth was succeeded by Major Daniel Appling of Georgia, who had distinguished himself on various occasions, and subsequently at the battle of Plattsburgh. Forsyth and Col. Isaac Clark of the 11th U. S. Infantry had been associated in effective service on the frontier, and in April 1814 they were transferred to the 26th Infantry, consisting of riflemen. On the 30th of June Col. Clark issued the following regimental order:

Col. Clark having received intelligence of the death of Lieutenant Benjamin Forsyth, of the 26th Infantry, who bravely fell at Odletown on the 28th instant, fighting in defence of the rights and liberties of his country: The officers of the regiment will wear crape on the left arm thirty days, in testimony of their regret for the loss of that valuable and distinguished officer.

Maj. Orsamus C. Merrill of Bennington, of the 11th infantry, was appointed Lieut. Col. of the 26th regiment vice Forsyth killed, and Capt. Z. Taylor, of the 7th infantry, was appointed Major vice Merrill promoted. "Capt. Z. Taylor" was, in 1849, President of the United States.

THE CAMPAIGN OF 1814 ON THE NIAGARA FRONTIER.

As the purpose here is to record only the services of the Vermonters in the 11th U. S. Infantry, who were in some of the severest battles of the war, it is not deemed necessary to give all the details of those battles, but rather the part touching particularly the 11th regiment. Col. Clark testified that only part of a company of the 11th regiment was under his command at the attack on La Colle Mill in March 1814, hence it is probable that the largest part of the regiment left the cantonment at French Mills, in the preceding February, for the Niagara frontier. It appears that, without any serious engagement with the enemy, it was near Buffalo at the close of June, in the brigade under the immediate command of Gen. Winfield Scott, who had taken special pains to discipline his men, so that in battle and under fire they manœuvered with the accuracy of parade.¹

CAPTURE OF FORT ERIE.

July 2 1814, in response to orders from head quarters, Maj. Gen. Brown ordered an attack on Fort Erie, directing Scott to cross through a difficult pass in Black Rock rapids and land a mile below the fort, while Gen. Ripley was to cross from Buffalo and land about the same distance above the fort, and the two were then to invest it. Scott crossed before daylight, with the 9th, 11th, part of the 22d, and the 25th regiments, and a corps of artillery, and landed unmolested. Ripley delayed, but Scott pushed forward, and Brown resolved to attack without waiting for Ripley, and invested the fort before Ripley arrived, who however reached the ground in time to take his investing position. At six o'clock in the evening the British, about two hundred in number, surrendered. The Americans lost four killed, and two or three wounded, and the British one killed.¹ While this work was going on, the British General Riall ordered up troops for the relief of the fort, who were met and checked in front of Chippewa by intelligence of the surrender. Riall then determined to attack the Americans at once, but was persuaded to wait until the next morning, for the arrival of a reinforcement.

July 4, morning. Scott marched his brigade toward Chippewa. Ripley was not ready until late in the afternoon, and Scott again advanced without Ripley's support. For sixteen miles this march was a continual and successful skirmish, chiefly with the British one hundredth regiment, whose commander, the Marquis of Tweeddale, supposed Scott's men were the Buffalo militia, and accounted for their bravery on the impression that Independence day inspired them with unusual courage. Scott reached Chippewa plain and encamped for the night behind Street's creek, not far from which, across Chippewa creek, the British were encamped. The main body of Brown's army did not join Scott until midnight; so all the credit of that day's work belonged to Scott's brigade and Towson's corps of artillery accompanying it.¹

BATTLE OF CHIPPEWA PLAIN.

The scene of the fierce battle of the 5th of July was a plain, about two miles in length, lying between Street's and Chippewa creeks, and bounded on the east by Niagara river, and on the west by a forest. The plain admitted of close work, face to face, and the day was clear and hot. For several hours, beginning in the morning, the scouts and pickets of both armies tried each other. Finally at 4 o'clock p. m. the American pickets on the extreme left of Scott's line were so annoyed by a heavy body of British troops and Indians in the woods, that Gen. Porter was sent with three hundred Pennsylvania volunteers and four hundred Indians to dislodge them. This was done effectively, the enemy flying in affright toward Chippewa, dreadfully smitten by the pursuers. Porter then found himself in front of the entire British force advancing in battle order, who charged him furiously and in turn compelled him to retreat in a tumultuous rout, and re-form on Scott's left. The entire British force was then upon the plain, when Ripley was ordered to proceed through the woods and fall upon the British right to make a diversion in favor of Scott, while the latter was directed to cross Street's creek and meet the enemy in front. Scott crossed the bridge over the creek with the greatest coolness, in the face of a heavy cannonade from the enemy, and formed his line of battle with the 9th and part of the 22d regiment under Maj. Leavenworth (who had served in the 11th.) covered by Towson's artillery, on his extreme right—the 11th regiment in the centre, under Maj. McNeil of N. H., Col. J. B. Campbell having been fatally wounded early in the day—and the 25th regiment under Maj. Jesup on the left. When Porter's men retreated, Jesup, joined by Porter, held the enemy's right wing in check, while Ripley was vainly endeavoring to get a position for the same service against the British left wing.

The battle raged with fury along the entire line of both armies. Several times the British line was broken, and then closed up again; and it often exposed as many flanks as it had regiments in the field. This unskillful manœuvring had been observed by Scott, who had advanced, halted, and fired alternately, until he was within eighty paces of the foe. Observing a gap in his lines which made a new flank, he ordered a quick movement in that direction by McNeil's Eleventh Regiment. He shouted with a voice that was heard above the din of battle, "the enemy say we are good at long shot, but cannot stand the cold iron; I call upon the Eleventh instantly to give the lie to that slander. Charge!"* This movement was immediately made, with the most decisive effect. A similar charge was made by Leavenworth, who held an oblique position on the American right. At the same time Towson's battery poured in an oblique fire of murderous canister-shot, after silencing the enemies' most effective battery by blowing up an ammunition wagon; and presently the whole left and centre of the British broke and fled in confusion.. That effective flank movement by McNeil was the one, there can be no doubt, which gave the victory to the Americans."¹ "He deserved," said General Scott in his report, "every thing which conspicuous skill and gallantry can win from a grateful country."²

GENERAL ORDERS, July 6, 1814. — Extract.

Maj. General Brown has the gratification to say that the soldiers of the 2d division, west of the Niagara, merit greater applause than he is able to bestow in general orders—they merit the highest approbation of their country. The conduct of Brig. General Scott's brigade, which had the opportunity to engage the whole force of the enemy, the greater part it is believed of all in the peninsula, removed on the day of battle the reflection on our country, that its reputation in arms is yet to be established.³

MAJ. GEN BROWN'S REPORT TO THE SECRETARY OF WAR, July 7, 1814.—
Extract.

Brig. Gen. Scott is entitled to the highest praises our country can bestow—to him more than to any other man am I indebted for the victory of the 5th of July. His brigade has covered itself with glory. Every officer and every man of the 9th and 22d, 11th and 25th regiments, did his duty, with a zeal and energy worthy of the American character. When every officer stands so pre-eminently high in the path of duty and honor, it is impossible to discriminate, but I cannot deprive myself of the pleasure of saying that Major Leavenworth commanded the 9th and 22d, and Major McNeil the 11th. Col. Campbell [of the 11th] was wounded early in the action, gallantly leading on his regiment.⁴

Gen. Scott stated, in his report, that in the crisis of the battle the fire of the 11th was most effective, from the oblique position which it judiciously occupied. Of the commanding officers in his brigade he wrote :

* Mansfield's Life of Scott, p. 107. Quoted by Scott in his Autobiography, Vol. 1, p. 134.

Maj. Gen. Wilkinson, who was far from being partial to Scott, thus wrote of this battle :

This was an obstinate contest, fought on a plain and in direct order, the simplicity of which presents few occasions for the display of tactical skill ; it was literally a trial of strength and courage, breast to breast, in which the American arms triumphed.

Wilkinson stated that the total American loss, killed, wounded, and missing, was 308—British loss 468. The losses in the 11th regiment are stated at 1 sergeant, and 14 rank and file killed ; 1 Colonel, 1 Subaltern, 6 Sergeants, and 52 rank and file wounded—73. This was the heaviest loss of any American regiment engaged in the battle.²

The officers of the 11th wounded were Col. Campbell, fatally, and Lient. Barron severely.³

The losses of both armies, stated by Wilkinson, purported to be official, from Niles' Register, but they are less than the numbers given in other reports. The general order of the British Adjutant General, July 13 1814, stated the total British loss at 494.⁴

NIGHT BATTLE AT LUNDY'S LANE, July 25, 1814.⁵

On the morning of July 25, the American army was encamped on the field of its victory twenty days before, with the village of Chippewa in front. Maj. Gen. Brown received two reports, one that the enemy was in force at Queenston, and the other, that Brown's depot at Schlosser was their object. In this emergency, in the afternoon Scott was ordered to march down to Queenston, and find the enemy and beat him—that being deemed the best way to divert the enemy from Schlosser. In less than thirty minutes the splendid column—horse, artillery, and infantry—had passed the bridge at the village of Chippewa, and was in full march for Queenston, (nine miles below,) intending no halt short of that point. The force consisted of the 9th regiment under Lient. Col. Leavenworth, the 22d regiment under Col. Brady, the 11th under Maj. McNeil, and a battalion of the 25th, under Maj. Jesup ; Towson's and Thomas Biddle's batteries, and a troop of U. S. dragoons and volunteers, under Capt. Harris. Warned that some of the enemy were near, but believing it to be an inconsiderable number, Scott went on without a halt, and passing a thick skirt of woods that crossed the road nearly opposite to the Falls, the head of the column emerged into an opening on the left, in full view and in easy range of a line of battle drawn up in Lundy's Lane, more extensive than that defeated on the preceding 5th at Chippewa. Sending word to Gen. Brown of his critical position, Scott determined to hold the enemy until reinforcements could come up, and did so successfully.

The British line was posted on the slopes and brow of an eminence over which Lundy's Lane passed—the artillery with a park of seven splendid guns, one of them a 24 pounder,¹ in the centre, the wings being thrown forward of the artillery. In the bowl of this crescent Scott found himself with about twelve hundred men, within canister-shot distance of a British line of battle of at least eighteen hundred men, strongly posted, some of whom were victorious veterans fresh from the army of Wellington. Sending a second messenger to Maj. Gen. Brown, the battle began shortly before sunset. Scott detached Jesup to the right to turn the enemy's left, and deployed the rest to the left, when a tremendous fire of all arms responded to that of the enemy. Emboldened by seeing that no reinforcements to Scott had come up, the British attempted to turn Scott's left, when the 11th threw forward its right, under cover of a clump of trees, and drove the enemy beyond reach. Jesup on the right had brilliant success, breaking the enemy's left, capturing the British Generals, Riall and Drummond, (the latter, however, escaping in the darkness,) and charging back, he joined Scott. His artillery and Brady's and Leavenworth's regiments had suffered and inflicted great losses under a direct fire, unremitted until dusk. The 11th, partially covered, up to that time suffered less. It had suffered severely, however, and being out of ammunition retired necessarily from the battle. Maj. McNeil had been severely wounded and removed from the field; and all the captains had been either killed or wounded. So Capt. John Bliss reported to Col. Leavenworth, and, though wounded, gallantly tendered his services in the 9th, as also did Lieut. David Crawford of Putney, then adjutant of the 11th, Lieut. F. A. Sawyer of Burlington, and several other officers of the 11th, while others joined the 22d. At 9 o'clock Maj. Gen. Brown arrived with Ripley's brigade, when the key of the enemy was found to be the battery on the hill, and Col. Miller of the 21st regiment was ordered to capture it—a terrible task which was admirably performed. It was the most desperate task of the war. From that moment the enemy made desperate attempts to recover their position, and the battle went on. The remnants of the 9th, 11th, and 22d regiments were formed into one battalion, gathering round the tattered flag of the 11th,¹ at first under Col. Brady, and soon under Lieut. Col. Leavenworth, Brady having been wounded. Jesup's men were added, and Leavenworth testified that the effective men of Scott's brigade did not exceed 150 or 200 men, exclusive of officers. They performed their full share in the remaining work of the night, and Col. Leavenworth gave special praise to Lieut. Crawford of the 11th. Ripley's brigade, however, bore the brunt of the battle, and upon Ripley devolved the command, Generals Brown and Scott both having retired wounded. The absolute repulse being manifest, Ripley, under directions from Brown to retire to Chippewa, rest, and re-organize the shattered battalions, and return by day-dawn to secure the fruits of victory, obeyed the first part of the order, but neglected the rest. In consequence, the enemy re-occupied their position, and regained all their cannon, except one which Miller's regiment had borne off as a trophy.²

Lossing states the whole number of troops engaged at a little over 7000, the British having about 4500, and the Americans a little less than 2600 ; but it must be remembered that from the beginning of the battle until 9 o'clock at night, less than 1200 Americans held the British and badly cut them up. American loss, according to Lossing, 852 ; and British loss, 878. Maj. Gen. Brown's return of Americans killed, wounded, and missing in this battle was 853. The returns for the 11th regiment were as follows :

Wounded —1 Major, 1 Captain, 5 Subalterns, 9 Sergeants, 1 Musician, 85 rank and file,	102
Missing —1 Subaltern, 2 rank and file,	3
Total	133

The 11th was one of the seven infantry skeleton regiments engaged, with whom were light dragoons, artillery, and three bodies of volunteers, whose losses were embraced in the return ; yet the losses in the 11th were more than one seventh of the total loss : a fact that attests the work and worth of the 11th. The 25th infantry exceeded the killed in the 11th by 1, and the 22d by 9 ; while the wounded in the 11th exceeded that of any other regiment, exceeding the 22d by 13, and the

Maj. John McNeil severely, canister shot in the knee ; Capt. John Bliss badly, shot in the leg ; 1st Lieut. William F. Haile slightly, shot in the thigh ; 2d Lieut. Enoch Cooper slightly, contusion in the breast ; 3d Lieut. Benj. Stevenson slightly, in the thigh ; and 3d Lieut. Humphrey Webster severely shot in the head and taken prisoner ; Ensign Elias Bedford [of Penn.] slightly, in the abdomen ; Ensign Nathan Thompson of Vt. of the 26th regiment, serving in the 11th, severely.²

In Brigade Orders, July 28 1814, Gen. Ripley said "he was satisfied with the conduct of his staff, Lt. McDonald of the 19th, and Lieut. Clark [Isaac jr.] of the 11th."³

The following letter, from the Northern Sentinel of Aug. 19 1814, gives interesting details as to the Vermonters engaged in this famous battle. The letter was probably written by Lieut. F. A. Sawyer of Burlington :

Extract of a letter from an officer of the 11th Regt. to his friend in Burlington, dated Buffalo Aug. 2d 1814.

The late engagement was perhaps the most sanguinary one ever fought on this continent. We engaged the enemy the 25th July, at 6 P. M. near the falls of Niagara, and continued the fight until half past eleven at night, when by very inferior numbers the enemy was compelled to retire, leaving us in quiet possession of the field of battle.

The first brigade, [Scott's,] as usual, bore the brunt of the action. We maintained our ground for one hour and a half against the whole forces of the enemy, which were four times our number, before we were supported by a solitary individual of Gen. Ripley's and Porter's brigades—they however joined in time to prevent us from being wholly cut up, and contributed a little in giving the enemy a hearty drubbing.

On leaving camp, no one anticipated a general engagement. It was the impression that the brigade was ordered out to disperse four or five hundred, as it was supposed, of the enemy's militia and Indians, who were hanging on our rear for the purpose of annoying our piquets and kidnapping those who might be led by curiosity to visit the falls. As we advanced, a few of the enemy would form, and then retire ; this manœuvre was continued until we had advanced within half musket shot of the enemy's lines, when the battle commenced. The enemy's position was a most excellent one—their line of infantry was posted behind a fence, which formed a semicircle and encompassed a field which our troops were compelled to accept of, if they made the attack ; their flanks were protected by woods, filled with militia and Indians, and in their rear, at a desirable distance, was a height on which their artillery was planted ; nature could not have formed a more advantageous position. Under these disadvantages our troops attacked them. The 9th and 25th were ordered to attack their flanks, while the 11th and 22d met their front. We endeavored to form a line in face and eyes of all their infantry and artillery, but they opened such a deadly and destructive fire upon us that we were compelled to retire a few paces and form in the skirts of a wood, and before we opened upon them more than two thirds of the two regiments were cut down.⁴ However, we then maintained our ground until a reinforcement joined us, when we advanced and drove the enemy in every direction. Col. Miller with his regiment charged and took their artillery consisting of nine pieces, but they repossessed themselves [on the next morning, when our army had left the field,] of all but two brass six pounders. For an hour the two lines were within four rods of each other, firing with as much deliberation as if it had been a sham fight, and now and then for a change the point of the bayonet was used. Here for the first time I witnessed a charge. It did not prove as destructive as I had expected, but God knows it was destructive enough. Towards the close of the action, as there was hardly a company remaining of our regiment, and but one man in my platoon, I volunteered in the 9th, and was assigned to Capt. Hull's company. He was killed in the last charge we made upon the enemy.¹ Capt. Pentland and two or three subalterns were also wounded. The latter part of the action was the most severe. Generals Brown and Scott remained untouched, as well as the greater part of the field officers, until the action was near at an end. That part of the fight proved much more destructive to the enemy than to us, as our men did much better execution when in close contact with them. Our fire at length proved so destructive, that the enemy's bugle sounded the retreat for the last time, and our troops were left in undisturbed possession of the heights. After having taken off all our own and some of the enemy's wounded, we were ordered to camp. It is a circumstance much to be regretted that our troops did not keep possession of the field until the next morning, as it is believed it might have been effected without much hazard on our part, and then the enemy would not have had a shadow of claim to the victory—for never was an enemy more completely beaten than in this action, nor never was one gained by harder knocks. We may date all mishaps from the time our beloved general [Scott] was wounded. None could fight more gallantly than he did—he had three horses shot under him. Gen. Brown was brave even to imprudence. He and Gen. Scott were continually in front of the line, encouraging the men both by example and precept.

It would be impossible to give you an account of the killed and wounded on their side, if it was proper, neither can I guess at it, although I am a Yankee. Of our regiment is Capt. Goodrich killed, Capt. Bliss, Lts. Hale, Cooper, Webster and Stephenson, and Ensigns Thompson and Bradford wounded. But two captains of our regiment were in the action. Capt. Weeks with five or six other officers of the regiment were at Buffalo sick.² Our company suffered more severely than any other one: at the commencement of the action it was fifty strong, and next morning but thirteen could be mustered for duty. Gen. Drummond joined the enemy but an hour previous to the action with 1400 men. They had 800 or 1000 more in the field than we did.

NIGHT BATTLE OF FORT ERIE, Aug. 15, 1814.

This was the third of the terrific battles on the Niagara frontier in which the 11th regiment was engaged. Gen. Ripley had succeeded to of his efforts to prevent it. The 11th was not engaged when this happened. Corporal Tobias Hubbard testified that Blake gathered about fifty men, and returned to the field. It has already been stated that the 11th, 22d and 9th were consolidated under Col. Brady, and, when Brady was wounded, under Col. Leavenworth, and continued in the battle until its close.

the command of the remnant of the army, and, at the peremptory order of Maj. Gen. Brown, reluctantly posted it at Fort Erie, while the British army under Drummond remained near Lundy's Lane, receiving reinforcements. From the 27th of July until the 5th of August Ripley vigorously labored, night and day, to put the Fort in the best possible condition for defence, and on the 5th Gen. Gaines assumed the command, and Ripley with good feeling resumed the head of his brigade. From the 7th until the evening of the 13th Drummond vigorously besieged the Fort with his artillery, making little impression, however, and the Americans gallantly responding to him. Gaines was convinced that Drummond would make a direct assault that night with all the force he could bring to bear, and therefore was on the alert at every point. Every battery was in order and freshly charged; and the infantry were posted—the 9th, 11th, and 25th regiments (remnants of Scott's veteran brigade) on the right under Lieut. Col. Aspinwall, Ripley's brigade of the 21st and 23d on the left, and Gen. Porter's brigade of volunteer infantry and riflemen in the centre. At evening parade, a shell came screaming across the space between the armies, and lodging in a nearly empty magazine within the American lines, exploded it with a tremendous report. Supposing it to be one of Gaines's chief magazines, and hoping to profit by the expected confusion and loss, the British prepared at once for the onset. They relied upon scaling ladders to surmount the fort, and close contests with pikes and bayonets. But some hours were spent in preparation. At midnight silence prevailed in both camps, the British in their camp however were active in preparation, while the Americans except a picket-guard were quietly resting. At two o'clock the American picket-guard fired an alarm. Sound, not sight, gave warning of the advance of the enemy, and the guard fell steadily back to camp, and after them dashed the enemy, fifteen hundred strong, and charged furiously upon Towson's battery and the abatis on its left. Col. Miller's brave 21st regiment was behind the abatis, and on the right the 23d supported Towson. Towson's 24 pounders sent out a continuous stream of flame, and the 21st poured forth a fire, both illuminating the ground and revealing the position of the enemy, who five times came gallantly to the attack and were repulsed every time and abandoned the attempt. The British Lieut. Colonels Drummond and Scott, with five hundred infantry and artillery and a reserve of infantry, assailed Gaines's right. The enemy's left under Col. Scott was repulsed by the 9th regiment and volunteers; but Lieut. Col. Drummond of the British centre persisted, approaching every assailable point of Fort Erie at once, attempting to scale the walls. Twice he was repulsed with dreadful carnage, when, under cover of dense smoke, he scaled the parapet and gained a bastion with one hundred men of the Royal Artillery. He instantly ordered his men to charge upon the garrison with pikes, spears, and bayonets, and to "show no mercy." Most of the American officers and many of the men received deadly wounds. Among them was Lieut.

Macdonough, who was severely hurt, and asked for quarter. Drummond refused, when Macdonough seized a handspike and bravely defended himself until Drummond, repeatedly crying "Give the damned Yankees no quarter!" shot him down. Hardly had the murderer of Macdonough done his savage work, when he in turn was shot through the heart and bayoneted, falling by the side of his victim.

The battle now raged with increased fury on the right, where Scott's veterans, who had won laurels at Chippewa and Lundy's Lane, were engaged; but on the left the enemy had been put to flight, and from the left and centre the right was reinforced. The enemy still held the bastion, the artillerymen within failing to drive them out. Capt. Birdsall of the 4th rifle regiment with infantry led them through the gate-way and charged the enemy, but was wounded and repulsed. Then, wrote Gen. Gaines in his report:

A detachment from the 11th, 9th, and 22d infantry, under Capt. Foster, [William S. of New Hampshire,] of the 11th, were introduced over the interior bastion, for the purpose of charging the enemy. Major Hall, Assistant Inspector General, very handsomely tendered his services to lead the charge. The charge was gallantly made by Capt. Foster and Maj. Hall, but owing to the narrowness of the passage up to the bastion, admitting only two or three men abreast, it failed. It was often repeated, and as often checked. The enemy's force in the bastion was however much cut to pieces, and diminished by our artillery and small arms. At this moment every operation was arrested, by the explosion of some cartridges deposited in the end of the stone building, adjoining the contested bastion. The explosion was tremendous—it was decisive: the bastion was restored.¹ At this moment Capt. Biddle was ordered to cause a field piece to be posted so as to enfilade the exterior plain and salient glacis. The Captain, though not recovered from a severe contusion in the shoulder, received from one of the enemy's shells, promptly took his position, and served his field piece with vivacity and effect. Capt. Fanning's battery likewise played upon them at this time with great effect.² The enemy were in a few moments entirely defeated, taken or put to flight, leaving on the field 221 killed, 174 wounded, and 186 prisoners, including 14 officers killed, and 7 wounded and prisoners. A large portion are so severely wounded that they cannot survive; the slightly wounded, it is presumed are carried off. * * * The judicious preparations and steady conduct of Lt. Col. Aspinwall, commanding the first brigade, [in which was the 11th regiment,] merit approbation. * * * The detachment of Scott's gallant brigade consisting of parts of the 9th, 11th, and 22d infantry, did its duty in a

² From the fact that these orders were given simultaneously with the blowing up of the bastion, the inference is fair that the explosion was made with the knowledge and consent of Gen. Gaines; and pertinent to this suggestion are a statement of Lieut. Sawyer below, and two notes to the same effect in Lossing's Field-Book, p. 835, one of which is as follows:

The venerable Jabez Fisk, now [1867] living near Adrian, Michigan, who was in the fight, is not so reticent concerning the explosion. In a letter to me, dated May 20, 1863, he writes: "Three or four hundred of the enemy had got into the bastion. At this time an American officer came running up, and said: 'General Gaines, the bastion is full. I can blow them all to hell in a minute.' They both passed back through a stone building, and in a short time the bastion and the British were high in the air. General Gaines soon returned, swinging his hat, and shouting 'Hurra for Little York!' This was in allusion to the blowing up of the British magazine at Little York, where General Pike was killed."

In a subsequent letter to the Secretary of War, Gen. Gaines stated that deserters from the enemy's camp put the British loss at more than one thousand men. The enemy admitted a loss of 805. The American loss was 17 killed, 56 wounded, and 14 missing.²

Of this battle the Northern Sentinel of Aug. 26 1814 gave the following account, from the same officer of the 11th who described the preceding battle at Lundy's Lane :

Again I have the satisfaction of informing you that our army has obtained another glorious victory over our invincible enemy—and at a very cheap rate too. Yesterday [Aug. 15.] at 2 o'clock in the morning, the enemy attacked our fort and batteries with the intention of carrying them by storm. They were repulsed with a loss of 600 killed and about 400 prisoners. The number wounded is not known, as all but a trifling number were carried off by the enemy; but if we were to judge by the number killed, it could not be less than 700 or 800. In this affair, therefore, we can account to Gen. Drummond for more than a thousand of his troops. Our loss does not exceed forty in all. Among the number is Lt. Macdonough of the artillery killed, who, after having gallantly fought and killed a number of the enemy with a handspike, as they were attempting to storm his battery, was unfortunately bayoneted. Three other officers were slightly wounded. It is said the enemy lost many of his best officers: [Lieut.] Cols. Drummond [killed] and Scott fell.³ The latter is one of the most enterprising officers in the British army: he visited our camp in disguise last winter. Among the prisoners taken are 2 majors, 4 captains, and a great proportion of subalterns. The afternoon previous to the attack, Gen. Drummond sent in a flag demanding a surrender, threatening, in case of a refusal, to put the garrison to the sword. Gen. Gaines returned for answer, that if he obtained possession of the fort, neither himself nor his troops wished for quarter. This summons induced Gen. Gaines to believe that it was their intention to make an attack, and every possible preparation was made for their reception. A mine was sunk under one of our batteries, which when filled with about 250 of the enemy, the mine was fired, and the whole were blown into nonexistence. About 100 more shared a similar fate: they took shelter in a stone building, which had been partly demolished by the enemy's artillery, and was so wrecked by the explosion that the walls fell and crushed them to atoms just as they had entered it for safety. Their army had, for sixteen days previous to the action, laid within a mile and a half of our fort—they battering away at our mud works, and we at their heads—and I presume by this time they are convinced that our works are much the hardest. Their deserters say that our cannon killed and wounded 150 of them in one day. Our riflemen have had many skirmishes with them during the time, and have drove them in every instance with great loss on their part. In one of the skirmishes, however, the gallant Maj. Morgan was killed. Gen. Gaines in the late affair has covered himself with honor, and will undoubtedly be brevetted for his gallant conduct.

All of our wounded are doing well but Col. Campbell and Maj. McNeil. It is feared the Col. will not survive the week—and it is doubtful whether the Major survives longer.

Col. Campbell died, and Maj. McNeil recovered.⁴

SORTIE FROM FORT ERIE, Sept. 17 1814.

Immediately after the repulse of the British on the 15th of August, both parties prepared for another struggle, by reinforcements and strengthening their respective positions. Drummond posted new batteries, from which the Fort was almost daily bombarded until the close of August. On the 28th, Gen. Gaines was wounded by a shot which entered his quarters, when he was obliged to give up the command to Col. Miller. Sept. 2d Maj. Gen. Brown reached the Fort and placed Gen. Ripley in command, but, persuaded by the advice of his officers and the peril of the Fort, Brown shortly assumed the command himself. The British camp was two miles from the Fort, in a field surrounded by a forest, beyond the reach of shot or shell, and the army was divided into three brigades of from twelve to fifteen hundred men each, one of which brigades in turn daily worked with the artillery, batteries of which had been advanced to within four or five hundred yards of the Fort. Heavy rains for several days had flooded the country and the British army was weakened by sickness in camp. Against the advice of a council of his officers, Gen. Brown determined to improve his opportunity, and with great secrecy he planned and prepared for a sortie on the 17th of September, "to storm the batteries, destroy the cannon, and roughly handle the brigade upon duty before those in reserve could come up." His force was divided into three corps, the first under Gen. Porter being directed to attack the British right flank; the second consisting of fragments of the 9th and 11th regiments under Lieut. Col. Aspinwall, and the 19th under Maj. Trimble, Col. Miller commanding the corps, to attack the British centre; and part of the 21st under Gen. Ripley to be the reserve. At a quarter before three Porter drove back the British right flank, stormed two of the batteries and a block-house and in thirty minutes carried them, capturing the garrison, destroying the cannon and carriages, and blowing up the magazine. Miller penetrated between the two remaining batteries, captured both of them, and also the block-houses in the rear. In forty minutes the object of the sortie was fully accomplished, and substantially the British army on the Niagara frontier was put hors du combat. Lieut. Gen. Drummond retreated to Chippewa, abandoning some of his stores, and destroying others. The British loss was nearly one thousand men, of whom 385 were made prisoners: American loss, 79 killed, 216 wounded, and 216

American navy with six or eight men entered the inn of Caleb Hill of Isle la Motte and called for rum, and while they were drinking, Judge Hill and one of his sons armed themselves, and, presuming their visitors to be the crew of a British guard-boat, levelled their pieces and demanded a surrender of their arms. Lieut. Drury parried Hill's gun, when three or four of the sailors fired and killed Hill. He was then an assistant judge of Grand Isle County.

missing—total 511. Capt. Horace Hale of Vermont, of the 11th regiment, was killed; and of the wounded in the 11th, was Lieut. Col. Aspinwall, arm amputated; Lieut. David Crawford of Putney, of Vt. Brigade Major, slightly; 1st. Lieut. W. F. Haile of N. H., dangerously; 2d Lieut. Isaac, Clark jr. of Vt., severely; 3d Lieut. Benjamin Stevenson severely; and 3d Lieut. Elijah B. Davis dangerously.¹ Col. Miller in his report to Maj. Gen. Brown made honorable mention of Lieut. Cols. Aspinwall and Bedel, and Lieut. David Crawford, of the 11th.² This closed the severe and highly honorable service of the 11th infantry on the Niagara frontier. On the 5th of November Fort Erie was blown up and the American army withdrawn from Canada.

LAND AND NAVAL BATTLES AT PLATTSBURGH.

Late in the Summer months of 1814, not less than fifteen thousand troops, most of them Wellington's veterans, fresh from victories over the French, arrived in Canada and were encamped between the St. Lawrence and Sorel rivers. Early in August Generals Macomb and Bissell, under the command of Gen. Izard, were at Champlain with eleven regiments, watching the enemy, a considerable body of whom, under the personal observation of Sir George Prevost,³ had concentrated at Isle aux Noix. The British naval force on Lake Champlain had also been strongly reinforced. In this state of the two armies, our own far smaller than the British, Izard was detached by the Secretary of War and ordered to march four thousand men to the Niagara frontier. This was more than half of our army on the Champlain frontier, leaving Macomb with only 3,400 men, of whom over 1,400 were invalids.⁴ Izard

³ SIR GEORGE PREVOST was born in New York city May 19 1767, son of Maj. Gen. Augustine Prevost of the British army. He entered the army young, and served with distinction. In 1805 he was made Major General and created a baronet; and in 1811 was made Lieut. General and military commander of British North America. He went to England in 1815 to defend his reputation, and died Jan. 5 1816.—Drake's Dict. of Am. Biography, corrected.

⁴ From the returns of the 28th of August it appears that on that day Macomb had the following troops within the limits of his command:

Capt. McGlassin's company, 15th regt.	50 was indignant, and though he would not disobey orders, he on the 11th of August addressed to the Secretary of War the following emphatic language:

"I will make the movement [westward] you direct, if possible; but I shall do it with the apprehension of risking the force under my command, and with certainty that every thing in this vicinity but the lately erected works at Plattsburgh and Cumberland Head will, in less than three days after my departure, be in the possession of the enemy. He is in force superior to mine in front; he daily threatens an attack on my position at Champlain; we are all in hourly expectation of a serious conflict.¹

On the 29th of Aug. Gen. Izard left Champlain and Chazy with his army for the west; on the 30th the British Gen. Brisbane occupied Champlain; and on the 3d of Sept. Prevost, assisted by Gen. De Rottenburg,² had his splendid army of veterans, 14,000 in number, at the same place, preparing to advance as soon as his flotilla could co-operate.

Prevost's plan was substantially a repetition of Burgoyne's in 1777, supplemented by a naval force supposed to be sufficient to command the lake; and like Burgoyne, he began his work with a proclamation, which follows:

From the Northern Sentinel of Sept. 23, 1814.

GEORGE PREVOST.

By command of His Excellency,

F. L. COONE, Maj. & Aid de Camp.

The command of the little American army at Plattsburgh fell to Gen. Alexander Macomb.¹

This army was indeed ridiculously small and lamentably weak, compared with the British force which it was to confront. Against fourteen thousand British troops, Macomb had, at the close of August 1814, about three thousand five hundred, with only one organized battalion among them; and in his force were fourteen hundred invalids and non-combatants.² His first work was to call upon New York and Vermont for reinforcements, which were promptly given, and to bend all his energies to the strengthening of the three forts and blockhouse, lying on the right bank of the Saranac at Plattsburgh and commanding the territory to the shore of the lake. Of these forts, one [Fort Brown] was garrisoned by detachments of Vermonters from the 30th and 31st infantry, under Lieut. Col. Huckens Storrs. Macomb's work was for the most part necessarily defensive; but he also sent out parties under Lieut. Col. Appling, Maj. Wool and Capts. Sproul and Leonard of the regulars and Gen. Moores of the New York militia, to retard the advance of the enemy and annoy them as much as possible. This work was well done, but the overwhelming force of the British steadily pressed back the

S. army in 1828. He was in battle at Sackett's Harbor, Fort Niagara, Fort George, and at Plattsburgh, and took the field for a time in the Florida war. He was author of a treatise on martial law and courts-martial. His death occurred at Washington city June 25 1841.—Drake's Dict. of Am. Biography. ²The withdrawal of Izard and his army from the Champlain valley at that time strongly countenances the assertion of the late Alvan Stewart that the purpose of our government was "not to take Canada, but to prevent its being taken."—See Lossing's War of 1812, p. 259.

small bodies of skirmishers until they were driven across the Saranac, taking up the bridges behind them.'

On the lake, Thomas Macdonough² had the command of the U. S. flotilla, and, like Macomb, he was thoroughly vigilant in preparing for

GENERAL ORDER.

H. Q. PLATTSBURGH, Sept. 7, 1814.

The affair of yesterday was honorable to the small detachments of regulars, under Maj. Wool of the 29th regt. consisting of 180 men of his regt. and 50 men of the 30th, 31st, and 34th regt. and the light corps under Brevet Lieut. Col. Appling of the rifle corps, and Capt. Sproul of the 13th regt. of Infantry, consisting of a like number which joined after the action had commenced. The militia for want of arrangement did not act with their usual address, notwithstanding the exertions of their General and Staff officers. Yet it is evident that they killed and wounded many of the enemy. In the afternoon, the militia met the British regulars in the woods near the Saranac river, and after disputing the passage of that stream for some time, the enemy retired with considerable loss. Here the militia did their duty, and it is by meeting the enemy in the woods, and flanking and annoying him on all occasions, that the most essential service can be rendered by them. The killed and wounded on our part is trifling. That of the enemy is reported to be from two to three hundred.

Capt. Sheldon has been directed by Gen. Macomb to call on all volunteers, and request that they report immediately to the scene of action.

² THOMAS MACDONOUGH was born in New Castle Co., Delaware, Dec. 23, 1783, son of Maj. Macdonough, who came from the north of Ireland previous to the revolutionary war, and served with distinction in it. The son entered the navy as midshipman in 1800, was lieutenant in 1807, commander in 1813, and captain Sept. 11 1814. He served in 1803-4 against Tripoli under Bainbridge and Decatur, was captured with the Philadelphia, but fortunately escaped imprisonment, and was one of the party which recaptured and destroyed that ship. While in the Mediterranean an incident occurred which testified to his heroism. While he was temporarily in command of the Siren, a boat put off from a British frigate and impressed from a trading vessel a seaman who was entitled to American protection. Instantly pursuing the British boat, he came up with it and recaptured the man under the very nose of the frigate. The captain of the British frigate immediately called him to account, threatening to "blow him to the devil." "That you may do; but as long as my vessel swims, I shall keep the man," calmly replied Macdonough. The Englishman returned to his frigate, again went with a boat toward the American merchantman, when Macdonough instantly started in pursuit, and the Englishman, deeming discretion the better part of valor, gave up the game. Macdonough died at sea, Nov. 16 1825.—Drake's Dict. of Am. Biography; and Devens's Our First Century, pp. 251-2. the contest, and had his vessels anchored in line of battle in Plattsburgh bay in ample time.

From the 7th of Sept. until the morning of the 11th, Prevost was busily engaged in bringing up his battering trains and supplies, and erecting batteries. On the morning of the 11th Capt. Downie rounded Cumberland Head with the British flotilla, which was the signal for battle, both on the land and water. Of this double battle it is not deemed necessary to record here any accounts but those contained in the official reports, since other histories, better than can be given here, are to be found in modern books. Of these are Lossing's Pictorial History of the War of 1812, and Dawson's Battles of the United States. A single additional fact, as to the service of Vermonters on this occasion: After repeated attempts to cross the Saranac and storm Macomb's forts, the British once succeeded, and advanced until they met the Green Mountain Boys under Gen. Strong, when they were driven back with great loss.

The victories at Plattsburgh filled the whole country with astonishment and delight; the newspapers teemed with glowing accounts of the battles; and towns, cities, State Legislatures and Congress united in crowning the victors with the highest honors. But best of all undoubtedly was the powerful influence of this mortifying defeat of the British, in uniting the commissioners of the two countries, then at Ghent, in the treaty of peace, on the 24th of the succeeding December.¹

On the 12th the Vermont volunteers returned home, and on the 13th the New York militia were disbanded by General Macomb, and orders issued countermanding the march of thousands who were flocking to the frontier. On the morning of the 13th the remains of the lamented GAMBLE, STANSBURY, BALDWIN, CARTER, and BARRON were placed in separate boats, which, manned by crews from their respective vessels, [followed by Commodore Macdonough and the American naval officers,] proceeded to the Confiance, where they were joined by the British officers, with the bodies of DOWNIE, ANDERSON, PAUL, GUNN, and JACKSON. At the shore of the lake the procession was joined by a large concourse of the military and citizens of Plattsburgh, who accompanied the bodies to the village burial ground. Near the centre of the grave yard, beneath the shade of two pines, now rest the ashes of those gallant officers. The sailors and marines who fell in the engagement were buried on Crab Island, side by side, in one common grave.²

SIR,—In compliance with the resolution of the honorable house of representatives, of the 25th instant, I herewith transmit to you, and through you to that honorable body, several letters and communications, marked No. 1 to 14, inclusive.

A copy of the answer to Gen. Macomb's first letter, dated the 1st of September last, I find, by examining my papers, has been mislaid. It was short, and in substance, as well as I can recollect, that attention should be paid to his communication, and such aid afforded as should be found necessary, and in my power constitutionally to grant.

An introductory letter to Gen. Macomb was given to Gen. Strong on his crossing the lake, stating his laudible exertions in inducing volunteers to turn out for the defence of their country, and recommending him as an old and experienced officer, in whose judgment and integrity the fullest confidence might be placed. Of this letter, it being made out in haste, I did not take a copy.

I am, Sir, respectfully, your humble servant, MARTIN CHITTENDEN.
Hon. D. Chipman, Speaker of the H. R.

Copy of a Letter from Brig. Gen. Macomb.

PLATTSBURGH, August 31, 1814.

SIR,—I am this moment informed, that the enemy is advancing in full force towards this place, and have already proceeded so far as to cross the Chazy at Champlain village. It is perhaps in your power to throw a detachment over the lake, so as to advance to our assistance on the road leading from Essex. Those men should be light armed. We shall be able to hold our ground until they come to our assistance in case they should be too powerful for us to meet the enemy beyond our defence. With sentiments of respect, I have the honor to be your most obedient servant,

ALEXANDER MACOMB.

PLATTSBURGH, 1 P. M. September 4, 1814.

SIR,—It is now ascertained, beyond a doubt, that the enemy will march for this place, with his whole force, this morning. Every preparation is made and making that our time will admit. The enemy must besiege us, as our works are now in a tolerable state of defence. This will give time for succours to get to our assistance, which may possibly end in a complete discomfiture of his designs, and oblige him to raise the siege. Much is at stake at this place, and aid is actually wanted, as the garrison is small, and the enemy in considerable force. Under these circumstances your excellency will, I am sure, not hesitate to afford us all the assistance in your power. I have the honor to be, sir, with proper respect, your most obedient servant,

ALEXANDER MACOMB.

JERICHO, September 4, 1814.

SIR,—Enclosed I transmit to you the copy of a letter, this moment received from Gen. Macomb, which will shew you the situation of our army at Plattsburgh, and the necessity of such assistance as can be afforded. I would recommend it to you to take the most effectual method to procure such number of volunteers as may be had, for his immediate assistance, from your brigade. It would be advisable for the troops to cross the lake at McNeil's ferry. I am respectfully your humble servant,
M. CHITTENDEN.

CHARLOTTE, September 5, 1814.

SIR,—I received, late last night, your excellency's letter of the 4th instant, with a copy of General Macomb's letter to yourself, of the same date, enclosed, in which you have referred me to Gen. Macomb's letter to learn the defenceless situation of Plattsburgh; the force and approach of the enemy, and his request for your assistance, with the militia of Vermont. You have, also, recommended to me, to procure such number of volunteers from my brigade, as may be disposed to repair to Plattsburgh, and have them cross at McNeil's ferry. If I rightly understand your letter, I can perceive no request, or order, from your excellency, directing me to have the militia under my command, or any portion of them, march to Plattsburgh, or any other place, for the assistance of Gen. Macomb, or for any other purposes. From your letter, therefore, I consider myself unauthorized to order out any portion of the militia under my command, or to do more than your excellency has recommended, namely, to offer my advice, which may be followed or not. As I consider myself, with the brigade I command, fully under your direction and controul, and as our assistance is requested, and seems very much needed at Plattsburgh, I regret that your excellency has not ordered either the whole or a portion of this brigade to their assistance, as I shall cheerfully obey any request, direction or order you may give, to repair to Plattsburgh, or any other place, to assist in opposing the enemy, protecting our territory and citizens, and in defending our country from invasion. I am, sir, with respect, your excellency's most obedient servant, JOHN NEWELL.

volunteers. This call was at once responded to, not only in the western counties nearest the scene of battle, whose men arrived in time to take part, but also in central and eastern Vermont. Irrespective of party opinions or age, the people turned out en masse—fathers and sons, veterans of the revolution and lads too young for military service,—and all pressed on toward the lake. Had Prevost carried Plattsburgh and undertaken to winter at Ticonderoga, the Vermonters alone could have penned in his army and forced it by starvation to surrender. Doubtless the same reasonable apprehension of danger from the Green Mountain Boys, which Burgoyne expressed in 1777, induced Prevost to invade New York rather than Vermont.

¹Gen. Newell probably did not sympathize with Gov. Chittenden's scruple about ordering the militia out of the state. It is pleasant to read that the men of Charlotte volunteered largely, and engaged the enemy at Plattsburgh: otherwise possibly some might doubt whether the General did not show the white feather. Of course Gen. Newell did his duty.—See Vt. Hist. Magazine, Vol. 1, p. 737, title Charlotte.

JERICHO, September 5, 1814.

SIR,—I have received yours of this date, and state, in answer, that I do not consider myself authorised, either by the constitution, or laws, under which we act and from which all our powers are derived, to order the militia out of the state. But considering the peculiar situation of the army at Plattsburgh, it was my desire that every aid, constitutionally in our power, should be afforded. And I am induced to believe, that a request, in such case, would have more effect, than an attempt to assume unauthorised power, on all such as are willing to turn out for the defence of our country. I am, respectfully, your humble servant, MARTIN CHITTENDEN.

SIR,—I have the honor of acknowledging your note of this date, on the subject of fixed ammunition for the volunteers. If there is any at Vergennes subject to my order, this letter may be considered as a sufficient order for such part of the same as may be wanted.

I would inform you, that agreeably to your suggestion, I enclosed, and sent by express, on Sunday evening, to general John Newell, a copy of general Macomb's letter, and strongly recommended it to him to use every exertion to procure such number of volunteers, from his brigade, as could immediately be induced to cross the lake to the assistance of the army at Plattsburgh. SEPTEMBER 10, 1814.

SIR,—I am sorry not to have it in my power to give you a correct statement of the British force approaching this place. From the best information I can obtain, which was from general Mooer, they are 8000 or 9000 strong, all regular troops, except a few. Their artillery has not been made use of against us as yet, although it is believed they have considerable. I have been up the river this morning, five or six miles, which was lined with the enemy on the north side. They have made several attempts to cross, but without success. This is the line to be defended. I have ascertained to a certainty, the number of militia from Vermont now on the ground, well armed, is 1812; from New York 700. Regular troops under General Macomb, he says, 2000. He treated me very friendly. I presume Doct. Pomeroy gave you the particulars of the first interview we had. We have strong expectations of 2000 detached militia, ordered out by general Mooer, arriving soon. He has written to governor Tompkins to send on the militia, and says he expects him in person. I hope you and our friends will send four or five thousand to our assistance as soon as possible, if you should think best. If not, we shall, if our courage holds out, keep close to them. Do not, sir, let my wishes turn you from the correct principles you have heretofore pursued, as governor of Vermont. Permit me, sir, to subscribe myself, your friend and humble servant,

September 11, 1814—Sunday, 7 o'clock P. M.

DEAR SIR,—We are now encamped, with 2500 Vermont volunteers, on the south bank of the Saranac river, opposite the enemy's right wing, which is commanded by general Brisbane. We have had the satisfaction to see the British fleet strike to our brave commodore Macdonough. The fort was attacked at the same time, the enemy attempting to cross the river at every place fordable for four miles up the river. But they were foiled at every attempt, except at Pike's encampment, where we now are. The New York militia were posted at this place, under Gens. Moor and Wright. They were forced to give back a few miles, until they were reinforced by their artillery. The Gen. informed me of his situation, and wished our assistance, which was readily afforded. We met the enemy, and drove him across the river, under cover of his artillery. Our loss is trifling. We took twenty or thirty prisoners. Their number of killed is not known. We have been skirmishing all day on the banks of the river. This is the only place he crossed, and he has paid dear for that. I presume the enemy's force exceeds the number I wrote you. What will be our fate to-morrow I know not; but am willing to risque the consequences attending it, being convinced of the bravery and skill of my officers and men. We are abundantly supplied with ammunition and provisions, from Gen. Macomb. I am, dear Sir, yours, with esteem,

SAMUEL STRONG.

His Excellency Martin Chittenden.

VERGENNES, September 16, 1814.

DEAR SIR,—I received your letter of the 14th inst. on my return to Burlington, where I had the satisfaction of expressing your thanks to the citizens who had turned out to repel our invading foe at Plattsburgh. At the same time, I was mortified to hear citizens of a government like ours, where all officers are limited in their official powers, urging the propriety of that power being exceeded in an unconstitutional and arbitrary manner. We, as citizens, have rights secured to us by the blood and wisdom of our forefathers. The constitution wisely secures to us certain rights and privileges, that ought not, and, I say, with thousands of others, shall not be infringed on. The late invasion will convince our enemies, and our citizens at home, that our freedom and liberties are not to be taken by force or intrigue.

I wrote you on the 11th. Nothing appeared to oppose us on the 12th, and we all left the ground in harmony, returning to our families, except a few who were killed or wounded. If God be with us, who can stand against us? I am, sir, your excellency's friend, and humble servant,

SAMUEL STRONG.

WAR DEPARTMENT, September 15, 1814.

SIR,—The force under Gen. Macomb being exposed to imminent danger, I have to request your excellency to order to his aid, immediately, such a reinforcement, not less than two thousand of the militia of your state, as may be adequate to the object. The emergency is such as to make it necessary that you call into service, en masse, the militia from the counties most convenient to the scene of action.

The extravagant and pernicious views of the enemy make it of the highest importance to the best interest and union of these States, that their career should be checked. It is in the power of your excellency, with the means in your hands, to afford such aid as effectually to check it. I rely on your patriotic zeal to make the exertions necessary to the end. I have the honor to be, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

JAMES MONROE.

BURLINGTON, Vermont, September 27, 1814.

SIR,—The despatch herewith would have been handed to your excellency at an earlier day, but that the late glorious success of our navy and army in this quarter rendered it unnecessary.

I am directed, by the secretary of war, to present the thanks of the general government, through you, to the brave and patriotic citizens of your state, for their prompt succor and gallant conduct in the late critical state of this frontier.

It is the wish of the government that two thousand of the militia of your state should be drafted and organized for immediate service, subject to the call, when necessary, of the commanding officer in this quarter. There are arms at Montpelier from which such as may be without can be furnished. I have the honor to be, sir, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

BURLINGTON, September 28, 1814.

SIR,—I have the honor to acknowledge yours of the 15th inst. and have the great satisfaction to inform you that every object contemplated in your communication has been effected. Volunteers, to a much larger number than that mentioned in your request, turned out, and crossed the lake to meet the enemy, without distinction of age, character, or party, exhibiting a spirit and zeal for the defence of their country, which reflects the highest honor on themselves and the country they have signally aided in defending. The glorious event of our success against a far superior force, both by land and water, is of the highest importance to this portion of the Union, and cannot fail so to be considered in a national point of view. CAPTURE OF THE BRITISH FLEET ON LAKE CHAMPLAIN.

From American State Papers, Naval Affairs, Vol. I, p. 390.

Secretary of the Navy to Senate Naval Committee.

NAVY DEPARTMENT, October 3, 1814.

SIR: In compliance with your request I have now the honor to enclose copies of all the documents received from Captain MacDonough, in relation to the brilliant and extraordinary victory achieved by the United States' squadron under his command, over that of the enemy, in Plattsburgh Bay, on Lake Champlain. This action, like that of its prototype on Lake Erie, cannot be portrayed in language corresponding with the universal and just admiration inspired by the exalted prowess, consummate skill, and cool persevering intrepidity, which will ever distinguish this splendid and memorable event. This, like those brilliant naval victories which preceded it, has its peculiar features, which mark it with a distinct character.

¹This call for help, dated four days after the danger had been averted, is an illustration of the inefficiency of the War Department in its operations generally on the northern frontier.

²Eight days previous to the date of Gen. Nourse's letter, Gov. Chittenden had issued a proclamation directing the militia of the State to hold themselves in readiness and march without further order in case of an invasion.—See proclamation, post. At the succeeding session of the Legislature the governor submitted the request, contained in Nourse's letter, to the Council, when it was determined that detached militia must be commanded either by a state officer or the President in person, and not by an officer of the United States.—See ante, pp. 80, 85, 89, 92.

It was fought at anchor. The firm, compact, and well-formed line, the preparations for all the evolutions of which the situation was susceptible, and the adroitness and decisive effect with which they were performed in the heat of battle, mark no less the judgment which planned than the valor and skill displayed in the execution. All these are heightened by the contemplation of a vigorous and greatly superior foe moving down upon this line, in his own time, selecting his position, and choosing his distance, animated by the proximity of a powerful army, in co-operation, and stimulated by the settled confidence of victory. To view it in the abstract, it is not surpassed by any naval victory on record; to appreciate its results, it is, perhaps, one of the most important events in the history of our country. That it will be justly estimated, and the victors duly honored by the councils of the nation, the justice and liberality hitherto displayed, on similar occasions, is a sufficient pledge. I have the honor to be, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

W. JONES.

UNITED STATES SHIP SARATOGA, off Plattsburg, September 11, 1814.

SIR,—The Almighty has been pleased to grant us a signal victory on Lake Champlain, in the capture of one frigate, one brig, and two sloops of war, of the enemy. I have the honor to be, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant, at anchor off Plattsburgh, September 13, 1814.

SIR: By Lieutenant Commander Cassin I have the honor to convey to you the flags of his Britannic Majesty's late squadron, captured, on the 11th instant, by the United States' squadron under my command. Also, my despatches relating to that occurrence, which would have been in your possession at an earlier period but for the difficulty in arranging the different statements. The squadron under my command now lies at Plattsburgh: it will bear a considerable diminution and leave a force sufficient to repel any attempt of the enemy in this quarter. I shall wait your order what to do with the whole or any part thereof; and, should it be consistent, I beg you will favor me with permission to leave the lake, and place me under the command of Commodore Decatur, at New York. My health, (being some time on the lake,) together with the almost certain inactivity of future naval operations here, are among the causes of this request for my removal. I have the honor to be, sir, with much respect, your most obedient servant,

T. MACDONOUGH.

UNITED STATES' SHIP SARATOGA, Plattsburgh Bay, September 13, 1814.

SIR: I have the honor to give you the particulars of the action which took place on the 11th instant on this lake. For several days the enemy were on their way to Plattsburg by land and water, and it being understood that an attack would be made at the same time by their land and naval forces, I determined to wait at anchor the approach of the latter.

At 8 A. M. the lookout boat announced the approach of the enemy. At 9 he anchored in a line ahead, at about three hundred yards distance from my line; his ship opposed to the Saratoga, his brig to the Eagle, Captain Robert Henley, his galleys, thirteen in number,¹ to the schooner, sloop, and a division of our galleys; one of his sloops assisting their ship and brig, the other assisting their galleys; our remaining galleys with the Saratoga and Eagle. In this situation, the whole force, on both sides, became engaged, the Saratoga suffering much from the heavy fire of the Confiance. I could perceive, at the same time, however, that our fire was very destructive to her. The Ticonderoga, Lieutenant Commandant Cassin, gallantly sustained her full share of the action. At half past ten o'clock, the Eagle, not being able to bring her guns to bear, cut her cable, and anchored in a more eligible position, between my ship and the Ticonderoga, where she very much annoyed the enemy, but unfortunately leaving me exposed to a galling fire from the enemy's brig. Our guns on the starboard side being nearly all dismounted or not manageable, a stern anchor was let go, the bower cable cut, and the ship winded, with a fresh broadside on the enemy's ship, which soon after surrendered. Our broadside was then sprung to bear on the brig, which surrendered in about fifteen minutes after.¹

'This successful manœuvre of the Saratoga was the turning point of the battle, and inspired the following letter, from one who served on that vessel, to his father, who had been in the victory of 1777 on the field of Saratoga. It is copied from the Northern Sentinel of Dec. 30 1814.

TUESDAY, 13th Sept. 1814.

DEAR DAD—I oft have heard you tell
How many fought, how many fell,
And how the foe you drubbed well,
On the plains of Saratoga.

It's now my turn with pride to boast,
We conquered Britain's warlike host;
On Champlain's lake we rule the roost,
On board the Saratoga.

At nine A. M. on Sunday morn
The mighty foe approached in form,
And viewed us with contempt and scorn
On board the Saratoga.

How frequently I've heard you say,
That those who fight ought oft to pray:
Our Commodore did both that day
On board the Saratoga.

Then with the Christian's hope we fought,
Nor ought of fear or danger thought,
But death or victory we sought
On board the Saratoga.

The battle rag'd for near three hours,
When aided by the Almighty powers
We claim'd the enemy as ours
On board the Saratoga.

O had you seen the sore dismay
Of poor Sir George, who ran away,
And bitterly he curs'd the day
He saw the Saratoga.

Then brave Macomb hung on his rear.
For our firesides we've naught to fear
Whilst heroes to their country dear
Command our forts, our vessels steer:
Success will still crown their career,
And Sailor's Rights,* and Free Trade's cheer, Shall be extended far and near,
Whilst Patriots yet unborn shall hear
The fame of the Saratoga.

And now let Saratoga's name
Be niched in thy temple's fame;
By land or water be it bless'd,
By all admired, by all confess'd,
And while for Gates the harp's unstrung,
Macdonough's glory shall be sung,
For he the British Lion stung
On board the Saratoga.

*Just as the American squadron was going into action, the Commodore displayed this signal: "Impress'd seamen call on every man to do his duty!" which excited in every bosom an enthusiastic ardor that would not be defeated. — Niles's Register, Vol. VIII, p. 116.

The sloop that was opposed to the Eagle had struck some time before, and drifted down the line; the sloop which was with their galleys having struck also; three of their galleys are said to be sunk, the others pulled off. Our galleys were about obeying, with alacrity, the signal to follow them, when all the vessels were reported to me to be in a sinking state; it then became necessary to annul the signal to the galleys, and order their men to the pumps. I could only look at the enemy's galleys going off in a shattered condition, for there was not a mast in either squadron that would stand to make sail on; the lower rigging, being nearly all shot away, hung down as though it had been just placed over the mast-heads.

The Saratoga had fifty-five round shot in her hull; the Confiance one hundred and five. The enemy's shot passed principally just over our heads, as there was not twenty whole hammocks in the nettings at the close of the action, which lasted, without intermission, two hours and twenty minutes.

The absence and sickness of Lieutenant Raymond Perry left me without the services of that excellent officer. Much fairly ought to be attributed to him for his great care and attention in disciplining the ship's crew, as her first lieutenant. His place was filled by a gallant young officer, Lieutenant Peter Gamble, who, I regret to inform you, was killed early in the action. Acting Lieutenant Vallette worked the first and second divisions of guns, with able effect. Sailing master Brum's attention to the springs, and in the execution of the order to wind the ship, and occasionally at the guns, meets with my entire approbation; also Captain Young's, commanding the acting marines, who took his men to the guns. Mr. Beale, purser, was of great service at the guns, and in carrying my orders throughout the ship, with Midshipman Montgomery. Master's Mate Joshua Justin had command of the third division; his conduct during the action was that of a brave and correct officer. Midshipmen Monteath, Graham, Williamson, Platt, Thwing, and acting midshipman Baldwin, all behaved well, and gave evidence of their making valuable officers.

The Saratoga was twice set on fire by hot shot from the enemy's ship.

I close, sir, this communication with feelings of gratitude for the able support I received from every officer and man attached to the squadron which I have the honor to command.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

T. MACDONOUGH.

Honorable William Jones, Secretary of the Navy.

P. S. Accompanying this is a list of killed and wounded, a list of prisoners, and a precise statement of both forces engaged. Also letters from Captain Henley and Lieutenant Commandant Cassin.

Purser's Report.

UNITED STATES' SHIP SARATOGA, September 13th, 1814.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose you a list of the killed and wounded on board the different vessels of the squadron under your command in the action of the 11th instant. It is impossible to ascertain correctly the loss of the enemy. From the best information received from the British officers, from my own observations, and from various lists found on board the Confiance, I calculate the number of men on board of that ship, at the commencement of the action, at two hundred and seventy, of whom one hundred and eighty at least were killed and wounded, and on board the other captured vessels at least eighty more, making in the whole, killed and wounded, two hundred and sixty. This is, doubtless, short of the real number, as many were thrown overboard from the Confiance during the engagement. The muster books must have been thrown overboard, or otherwise disposed of, as they are not to be found. I am, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant, GEORGE BEALE, Jr. Purser.

Thomas Macdonough, Esq. commanding U. S. squadron on Lake Champlain.

For names of the killed and wounded in the U. S. squadron see American State Papers, Naval Affairs, p. 311. The recapitulation is as follows:

	Killed.	Wounded.		Killed.	Wounded.
Saratoga,	28	29	Borer,	3	1
Eagle,	13	20	Centipede,	0	1
Ticonderoga,	5	6	Wilmer,	0	1
Preble,	2	0		—	—
				52	58

The prisoners captured from the British were 27 officers, 340 seamen, and 47 wounded men paroled. Total 414.

The force engaged was 86 guns and 820 men in the U. S. squadron, and 95 guns and 1050 men in the British. Measuring by the size of the guns in pound balls, the U. S. squadron carried 2140, and the British 1880. This shows a superiority in the British in the number of guns and men, and in the U. S. squadron in the calibre of the guns.—See Am. State Papers, Naval Affairs, pp. 312-'13; and Sketches of the War, p. 409.

UNITED STATES' BRIG EAGLE, Plattsburgh, September 12, 1814.

SIR: I am happy to inform you that all my officers and men acted bravely, and did their duty in the battle of yesterday with the enemy. I shall have the pleasure of making a more particular representation of the respective merits of my gallant officers to the Honorable the Secretary of the Navy. I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ROBERT HENLEY.

P. S. We have thirty-nine round shot in our hull, (mostly twenty-four pounders,) four in our lower masts, and were well peppered with grape. I enclose my boat-swain's report.

U. S. SCHOONER TICONDEROGA, Plattsburgh Bay, September 12, 1814.

SIR: It is with pleasure I state that every officer and man, under my command, did their duty yesterday. Yours respectfully.

STEPHEN CASSIN, Lieutenant Commandant.

Commodore Thomas Macdonough.

U. S. SHIP SARATOGA, off Plattsburgh, September 15, 1814.

SIR: As Providence has given into my command the squadron on Lake Champlain, of which you were (after the fall of Captain Downie) the commanding officer, I beg you will, after the able conflict you have sustained, and evidence of determined valor you evinced, on board His Britannic Majesty's brig Linnet, until the necessity of her surrender, accept of your enclosed parole, not to serve against the United States, or their dependencies, until regularly exchanged. I am, &c. &c.

To Captain Pring, Royal Navy.

THOMAS MACDONOUGH.

Captain Pring, in his report, attributed the defeat of the Confiance to the failure to wind the ship when the Saratoga did, and to the lack of locks for her guns. It is quite possible that the Captain, who was on the Linnet, was unaware that the Confiance was supplied with locks, but such was the fact. The Confiance bore 39 guns, and after she was captured 37 gun-locks were found on board of her.—See Niles's Register, Vol. VIII, p. 423, and Supplement to Vol. VIII, p. 152.

The prize money, distributed to the officers and men of the U. S. squadron for the capture of the British vessels on Lake Champlain, Sept. 11 1814, amounted to $290,438.19.—See Am. State Papers, Naval Affairs, pp. 572-589. Macdonough received $22,807, and in addition Vermont and New York gave him farms; so, as he said, from a poor officer he became a wealthy man.

GEN. MACOMB'S GENERAL ORDER AND REPORT ON THE BATTLE OF PLATTSBURGH.

*General Order.*¹

II. Q. PLATTSBURG, Sept. 14, 1814.

The Governor General of the Canadas, and Commander in Chief of the British forces in North America, having invaded the territories of the United States, with the avowed purpose of conquering the country as far as Crown Point and Ticonderoga, there to winter his forces with a view to further conquest, brought with him a powerful army and flotilla.¹ An army amounting to fourteen thousand men completely equipped and accompanied by a numerous train of artillery, and all the engines of war—men who had conquered in France, Spain, Portugal, the Indies, and in various other parts of the globe—and led by the most distinguished general of the British army ;² a flotilla also, superior to ours in vessels, men, and guns, had determined at once to crush us both by land and water.

The Governor General, after boasting of what he would do, and endeavoring to dissuade the loyal Inhabitants of the United States from their allegiance by threats and promises, as set forth in his proclamation and orders, fixed his head-quarters at the village of Champlain, to organize his army and to settle the government of his intended conquests. On the second day of the month he marched from Champlain, and on the 5th [6th] appeared before the village of Plattsburgh with his whole army, and the 11th, the day fixed for the general attack, the flotilla arrived.

The enemy's flotilla at 8 in the morning passed Cumberland Head, and at 9 engaged our flotilla, at anchor in the bay of the town, fully confident of crushing in an instant the whole of our naval force ; but the gallant Commodore Macdonough, in the short space of two hours, obliged the large vessels to strike their colors, whilst the galleys saved themselves by flight. This glorious achievement was in full view of the several forts, and the American forces had the satisfaction of witnessing the victory. The British army was also posted on the surrounding heights, so that it could not but behold the interesting struggle for dominion on the lake.

At the same time the fleets engaged, the enemy opened his batteries on our forts, throwing hundreds of shells, balls, and rockets, and attempted at the same time to cross the Saranac, at three different points, to assault the works. At the upper ford he was met by the militia and volunteers, and after repeated attempts, was driven back with considerable loss in killed, wounded, and prisoners. At the bridge, near the village, he was repulsed by the pickets and the brave riflemen under Captain Grosvenor and Lieutenants Hamilton and Riley, and at the bridge in the town he was foiled by the guards, block-houses, and the artillery of the forts, served by Capt. Alexander [S.] Brooks, Captains Richards and Smith, and Lts. Mountford, Smyth, and Cromwell. The enemy's fire was returned with effect from our batteries, and by sunset we had the satisfaction to silence seven batteries which he had erected, and to see his column returning to their camp, beyond the reach of our guns.

Thus beaten, by land and by water, the Governor General withdrew his artillery and raised the siege at 10 o'clock at night, sent off his heavy baggage, and under cover of the darkness, returned with his whole army towards Canada ; leaving his wounded on the field, and a great quantity of bread, flour, and beef, which he had not time to destroy, besides a quantity of bomb-shells, flints, and ammunition of all kinds, which remain at the batteries, and concealed in ponds and rivers.³ As soon as his retreat was discovered, the light troops, volunteers, and militia were in pursuit and followed as far as Chazy, capturing several dragoons and soldiers, besides ¹The British vessels bore, as ballast, cannon and other munitions of war, and winter clothing for the army. Had their squadron been victorious, both Crown Point and Ticonderoga might have been occupied and fortified : with a good prospect, however, of being starved out in the winter.

²Baron De Rottenburg.

³It is hardly correct to leave the inference that Governor General Prevost remained on the ground to superintend the retreat. The British squadron surrendered at a little after eleven o'clock, and at a little before noon Prevost started for Canada with a small escort ; of course leaving Gen. De Rottenburg to manage the retreat.—See Sketches of the War, p. 407. Prevost's report was dated at Plattsburgh on the 11th, but it was never written until he had placed himself safe in Montreal.—See Niles's Register of March 4, 1815.

covering the escape of hundreds of deserters, who continue still to be coming in. A violent storm and continual fall of rain prevented the brave volunteers and militia from further pursuit.

Thus have the attempts of the invader been frustrated by a regular force of only 1500 men, a brave and active body of militia of the State of New York under Gen. Moore, and volunteers of the respectable and patriotic citizens of Vermont, led by General Strong and other gentlemen of distinction. The whole not exceeding 2500 men.¹

The British force being either expelled or captured, the services of the volunteers and militia may be dispensed with. General Macomb cannot, however, permit the militia of New York and the volunteers of Vermont to depart without carrying with them the highest sense he entertains for their merit. The zeal with which they came forward in defence of the Country when the signal of danger was given by their Generals, reflects the highest lustre on their patriotism and spirit. Their conduct in the field has corresponded with the laudable motives which led them into it. They have deserved the esteem of their fellow citizens and the warm commendation of their commander. They have exemplified how speedily American citizens can be prepared to meet the enemies of their country. In testifying his sense of the merits of the troops, the general cannot but express his sorrow and regret for the loss of some brave and virtuous citizens, and for those who have been wounded; the loss will no doubt be keenly felt by their friends and countrymen, but, at the same time, will be borne with that fortitude and resignation which become good citizens and good christians.

The affection of the general will accompany his brave associates in arms where-soever they may go, nor will anything give him more pleasure than opportunities of testifying to them individually, by actions as well as words, the high regard he cherishes for them.

The general, in the name of the United States, thanks the volunteers and militia for their distinguished services, and wishes them a happy return to their families and friends.

ALEX. MACOMB.

Report to the Secretary of War.²

HEAD QUARTERS, Plattsburgh, Sept. 15, 1814.

SIR, — I have the honor to communicate, for the information of the War Department, the particulars of the advance of the enemy into the territory of the United States, the circumstances attending the siege of Plattsburgh, and the defence of the posts entrusted to my charge.

The Governor General of the Canadas, Sir George Prevost, having collected all the disposable force in Lower Canada, with a view of conquering the country as far as Crown Point and Ticonderoga, entered the territory of the United States on the first of the month, and occupied the village of Champlain; there avowed his intentions, and issued orders and proclamations tending to dissuade the people from their allegiance and inviting them to furnish his army with provisions. He immediately began to impress the wagons and teams in the vicinity, and loaded them with his heavy baggage and stores. From this I was persuaded he intended to attack this place. I had but just returned from the lines, where I had commanded a fine brigade, which was broken up to form the division under Major General Izard, ordered to the westward. Being senior officer, he left me in command. Except the four companies of the 6th regiment, I had not an organized battalion among those remaining. The garrison was composed of convalescents, and recruits of the new regiments — all in the greatest confusion, as well as the ordnance and stores, and the works in no state of defence.

¹This was about the number when the fight commenced on the 6th; but the Vermont volunteers poured in daily, reporting to Gen. Strong, and not to Gen. Macomb. On the 10th 1812 Vermonters were under Gen. Strong, and on the 11th 2500—then outnumbering probably the combined force of regulars and New York volunteers.—See letters of Gen. Strong to Gov. Chittenden, ante pp. 523, 524.

²*Sketches of the War*, pp. 400-404.

To create an emulation and zeal among the officers and men in completing the works, I divided them into detachments, and placed them near the several forts; declaring in orders, that each detachment was the garrison of its own work, and bound to defend it to the last extremity.

The enemy advanced cautiously and by short marches, and our soldiers worked day and night; so that by the time he made his appearance before the place, we were prepared to receive him.

General Izard named the principal work fort Moreau, and to remind the troops of the actions of their brave countrymen, I called the redoubt on the right fort Brown, and that on the left fort Scott. Besides these three works, we have two block-houses strongly fortified.

Finding, on examining the returns of the garrison, that our force did not exceed fifteen hundred effective men for duty, and well informed that the enemy had as many thousands, I called on General Mooers, of the New York militia, and arranged with him plans for bringing forth the militia en masse. The inhabitants of the village fled with their families and effects, except a few worthy citizens and some boys, who formed themselves into a party, received rifles, and were exceedingly useful. By the fourth of the month, Gen. Mooers collected about 700 militia, and advanced seven miles on the Beekmantown road to watch the motions of the enemy, and to skirmish with him as he advanced; also to obstruct the roads with fallen trees, and to break up the bridges.

On the lake road at Dead Creek bridge, I posted two hundred men under Captain Sproul of the 13th regiment, with orders to abattis the woods, to place obstructions in the road, and to fortify himself; to this party I added two field-pieces. In advance of this position, was Lieut. Col. Appling with one hundred and ten riflemen, watching the movements of the enemy, and procuring intelligence. It was ascertained that before daylight on the 6th, the enemy would advance in two columns on the two roads before mentioned, dividing at Sampson's, a little below Chazy village. The column of the Beekmantown road proceeded most rapidly; the militia skirmished with his advance parties, and, except a few brave men, fell back most precipitately in the greatest disorder, notwithstanding the British troops did not deign to fire on them, except by their flankers and advanced patrols. The night previous I ordered Major Wool to advance with a detachment of two hundred men to support the militia and set them an example of firmness. Also Capt. Leonard, of the light artillery, was directed to proceed with two pieces, to be on the ground before day, yet he did not make his appearance until 8 o'clock, when the enemy had approached within two miles of the village; with his conduct, therefore, I am not well pleased. Major Wool, with his party, disputed the road with great obstinacy, but the militia could not be prevailed on to stand, notwithstanding the exertions of their general and staff officers; although the fields were divided by strong stone walls, and they were told the enemy could not possibly cut them off. The state dragoons of New York wear red coats, and they being on the heights to watch the enemy, gave constant alarm to the militia, who mistook them for the enemy, and feared his getting in their rear.

Finding the enemy's columns had penetrated within a mile of Plattsburgh, I despatched my aid-de-camp, Lieut. Root, to bring off the detachment at Dead Creek, and to inform Lieut. Col. Appling that I wished him to fall on the enemy's right flank. The colonel fortunately arrived just in time to save his retreat and to fall in with the head of a column debouching from the woods. Here he poured in a destructive fire from his riflemen at rest, and continued to annoy the column until he formed a junction with Major Wool. The field pieces did considerable execution among the enemy's columns. So undaunted, however, was the enemy, that he never deployed in his whole march, always pressing on in column. Finding that every road was full of troops crowding on us on all sides, I ordered the field-pieces to retire across the bridge and form a battery for its protection, and to cover the retreat of the infantry, which was accordingly done, and the parties of Appling and Wool, as well as that of Sproul, retired alternately, keeping up a brisk fire until they got under cover of the works. The enemy's light troops occupied the houses near the bridge, and kept up a constant firing from the windows and balconies, and annoyed us much. I ordered them to be driven out with hot shot, which soon put the houses in flames, and obliged these sharp shooters to retire. The whole day, until it was too late to see, the enemy's light troops endeavoured to drive our guards from the bridge; but they suffered dearly for their perseverance. An attempt was also made to cross the upper bridge, where the militia handsomely drove them back.

The column which marched by the lake road was much impeded by the obstructions, and the removal of the bridge at Dead Creek, and, as it passed the creek and beach, the galleys kept up a lively and galling fire.

Our troops being now on the south side of the Saranac, I directed the planks to be taken off the bridges, and piled up in the form of breastworks, to cover our parties intended for disputing the passage, which afterwards enabled us to hold the bridges against very superior numbers.

From the 7th to the 11th, the enemy was employed in getting on his battering train, and erecting his batteries and approaches, and constantly skirmishing at the bridges and fords. By this time the militia of New York, and the volunteers of Vermont, were pouring in from all quarters. I advised General Mooers to keep his force along the Saranac to prevent the enemy's crossing the river, and to send a strong body in his rear to harass him day and night, and keep him in continual alarm.

The militia behaved with great spirit after the first day, and the volunteers of Vermont were exceedingly serviceable. Our regular troops, notwithstanding the skirmishing and repeated endeavours of the enemy to cross the river, kept at their work day and night, strengthening the defences, and evinced a determination to hold out to the last extremity.¹

It was reported that the enemy only waited the arrival of his flotilla to make a general attack. About eight in the morning of the 11th, as was expected, the flotilla appeared inside round Cumberland Head, and at nine bore down and engaged our flotilla at anchor in the bay off the town. At the same instant the batteries were opened on us, and continued throwing bomb-shells, shrapnells, balls, and congreve rockets until sunset, when the bombardment ceased; every battery of the enemy being silenced by the superiority of our fire. The naval engagement lasted but two hours, in full view of both armies. Three efforts were made by the enemy to pass the river at the commencement of the cannonade and bombardment, with a view of assaulting the works, and had prepared for that purpose an immense number of scaling ladders. One attempt to cross was made at the village bridge, and another at the upper bridge, and a third at a ford about three miles from the works. At the two first he was repulsed by the regulars—at the ford by the brave volunteers and militia, where he suffered severely in killed, wounded, and prisoners; a considerable body having crossed the stream, but were either killed, taken, or driven back. The woods at this place were very favourable for the operations of the militia. A whole company of the 76th [British] regiment was here destroyed—the three lieutenants and twenty-seven men prisoners, the captain and the rest killed.

I cannot forego the pleasure of here stating the gallant conduct of Captain M'Glassin, of the 15th regiment, who was ordered to ford the river, and attack a party constructing a battery on the right of the enemy's line, within five hundred yards of Fort Brown, which he handsomely executed at midnight, with fifty men; drove off the working party, consisting of one hundred and fifty, and defeated a covering party of the same number—killing one officer and six men in the charge, and wounding many.

At dusk the enemy withdrew his artillery from the batteries, and raised the siege, —and at 9, under cover of the night, sent off in a great hurry all the baggage he could find transport for, and all his artillery. At 2 the next morning the army precipitately retreated, leaving the sick and wounded to our generosity; and the governor [Prevost] left a note with a surgeon, requesting the humane attention of the commanding general.

Vast quantities of provisions were left behind and destroyed, also an innumerable quantity of bomb-shells, cannon balls, grape shot, ammunition, flints, &c. &c., intrenching tools of all sorts, also tents and marquees. A great deal has been found concealed in the ponds and creeks, and buried in the ground, and a vast quantity carried off by the inhabitants. Such was the precipitancy of his retreat, that he arrived at Chazy, a distance of eight miles, before we discovered he had gone. The light troops, volunteers, and militia pursued immediately on learning of his flight; and some of the mounted men made prisoners five dragoons of the 19th regt. and several others of the rear guard.¹ A continual fall of rain and a violent storm prevented further pursuit. Upwards of three hundred deserters have come in, and many are hourly arriving.

We have buried the British officers of the army and navy with the honors of war, and shown every attention and kindness to those who have fallen into our hands.

The conduct of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers of my command, during this trying occasion, cannot be represented in too high terms, and I feel it my duty to recommend to the particular notice of government, Lieut. Col. Appling of the 1st rifle corps; Maj. Wool of the 29th; Maj. Totten of the corps of engineers; Capt. Brooks of the artillery; Capt. McGlassin of the 15th; Lieuts. De Russey and Trescott of the corps of engineers; Lieuts. Smyth, Mountford, and Cromwell, of the artillery; also my aid-de-camp, Lieut. Root, who have all distinguished themselves by their uncommon zeal and activity, and have been greatly instrumental in producing the happy and glorious result of the siege.

I have the honor to be, with sentiments of profound respect, sir, your most obedient humble servant,

ALEXANDER MACOMB.

The American loss, from the 6th to and including the 11th of September, was 37 killed, 62 wounded, and 20 missing: the British loss, including deserters, about 2500.¹

PREPARATIONS FOR A CAMPAIGN IN 1815.

Although the proposed campaign of Gov. Prevost had most signally failed, it was nevertheless evident that the large British army was hovering on the frontier, which might be used for an invasion by land. Accordingly the militia and people of Vermont were warned by Gov. Chittenden to be in constant readiness for defence.

By the Governor of the State of Vermont,

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas it appears that the war, in which our country is unfortunately engaged, has assumed an entirely different character since its first commencement, and has become almost exclusively defensive, and is prosecuted by the enemy with a spirit unexampled during pending negotiations for peace, which leaves no prospect of safety but in a manly and united determination to meet invasion at every point, and to expel the invader:

And whereas, notwithstanding the signal and glorious naval victory lately achieved by our gallant Commodore Macdonough and his brave seamen, over a superior British naval force on Lake Champlain, and a like discomfiture of the enemy's whole land force, concentrated at Plattsburgh, by General Macomb's small but valiant band of regular troops, aided and powerfully supported by our patriotic, virtuous, and brave volunteers, who flew to meet the invader with an alertness and spirit unexampled in this or any other country—it is made known to me, that the British army is still on the frontier of our sister State, collecting and concentrating a powerful force indicating further operations of aggression :

And whereas the conflict has become a common, and not a party concern, the time has now arrived when all degrading party distinctions and animosities, however we may have differed respecting the policy of declaring, or mode of prosecuting the war, ought to be laid aside ; that every heart may be stimulated, and every arm nerved, for the protection of our common country, our liberty, our altars, and our firesides—in the defence of which we may, with a humble confidence, look to Heaven for assistance and protection :

Now, therefore, I, MARTIN CHITTENDEN, Governor and Commander-in-Chief, in and over the State of Vermont, do issue this Proclamation, earnestly exhorting all the good people of this State, by that love of country, which so signally distinguished our fathers in their glorious and successful struggle for our independence, to unite, both heart and hand, in defence of our common interest, and every thing dear to freemen.

I enjoin it upon all officers of Divisions, Brigades, Regiments, and Companies of the Militia of this State to exert themselves in the execution of their respective duties, in placing those under their command in a complete state of readiness, and, without further order, to march, at a moment's warning, to meet any invasion which may be attempted, and to chastise and expel the invader.

And I would earnestly recommend to those, who, by the lenity of our laws, are exempt from ordinary military duty, where they have not already done it, to organize themselves into Companies, and equip, and stand in readiness to meet the approaching crisis, reminding them that it is their property, themselves and their families, that are, in common with others, to be protected.

And more especially I would recommend it to the Selectmen and Civil Authorities of the respective towns, to be vigilant in the execution of the duties enjoined on them in providing ammunition, and in affording such assistance to the militia as their situations may require.

After witnessing the severe and degrading terms imposed on many of our unfortunate fellow-citizens on the seaboard, no man, who is mindful of what he owes to his country and to his own character, can advocate submission while resistance is practicable.

The fate of Alexandria forcibly appeals to the proud feelings of every American, to exert the augmented force and resources with which it has pleased a beneficent Providence to bless us, for the defence and security of that soil and those rights rendered inestimable by having been purchased by the blood of our fathers.

Given under my hand at Jericho, this 19th day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fourteen, and of the Independence of the United States the thirty-ninth.

MARTIN CHITTENDEN.

By his Excellency's command, SAMUEL SWIFT, Secretary.

Early in the winter of 1814-15, large preparations were made in Canada for a winter campaign, in sleighs, with a view, it was supposed, of reaching and destroying the American squadron of war-vessels, then at Whitehall. By a general order, all the subjects of the United States were ordered to leave Canada forthwith, and communication by way of L'Acadie woods and Missisquoi Bay was cut off. The British army on the border was at that time represented to be sixteen thousand men, with an immense train of heavy artillery mounted on sleighs.¹ Maj Gen. Strong met this exigency by the following

GENERAL ORDERS.

H. Q. VERGENNES, (Vermont.) January 9, [1815.]

The movements of the enemy in Canada indicating a probable invasion of our territory, renders it highly important that the militia be prepared for a short winter's campaign. Every one must be aware, that to ourselves alone we are to look for security and defence; the regular force on our frontiers being notoriously inadequate to withstand any serious effort of the enemy. Preparation, therefore, becomes indispensable; and it is hereby rigidly enjoined upon all officers and soldiers of this division, to use their utmost exertions, that we may be enabled to meet the enemy should they enter our territory, in a manner that shall not sully the high reputation of the Vermont volunteers.

The commanders of companies will see that the men under their charge be supplied with the quantity of ammunition required by law made into cartridges. And as the muskets in the hands of the militia are generally of an uniform calibre, it is recommended that a portion or the whole of the ammunition of the several towns, be made into cartridges, if the permission of the selectmen can be obtained, and placed in suitable depots for sudden emergencies. It is ascertained that most of the towns are supplied with the requisite quantity of ammunition; those which are not will undoubtedly see the necessity of being immediately. The exposed situation of this section of the country is a strong appeal to the patriotism of those of our citizens who are exempt from military duty, to join with the militia in the common defence; for which purpose it is recommended that those who are thus disposed form themselves into volunteer corps, to act as occasion may require. Much is expected from the most valuable and efficient portion of our physical strength, the riflemen, who undoubtedly will be at all times in readiness for the field. The utmost vigilance is requested at the present time. It is not to be expected that, if the enemy invade us again, they will by proclamations and slow marches forewarn us of their approach. Sad experience must have taught them wisdom. Let it not be said that they caught us slumbering.

The Major General is happy to have it in his power to communicate to those patriotic citizens of Vermont, who assisted in the defeat of our enemy in the late invasion, the very flattering compliment of the legislature of the State of New York. By a resolution of that body, which has been enclosed him by Governor Tompkins, with a request that it might be promulgated, the thanks of the legislature are unanimously voted them for their good conduct on that occasion.

By order of Major General STRONG,

ROBERT B. BATES, Aid.¹

Gen. Orms promptly issued orders to the commanders of the respective regiments in his brigade, to put the troops under their command under marching orders, and hold them in readiness to march at the shortest possible notice.² Doubtless other brigades were in like manner held in readiness for the field. The following shows that numerous companies of volunteers were formed:

To the volunteer Companies of the third division of the Militia of the State of Vermont.

FELLOW CITIZENS. Having received numerous communications, notifying me of the formation of volunteer Companies in pursuance of my request of the 9th of January, accompanied with assurances of your readiness to put yourselves under my command and march at a moment's warning, in the defence of our country in case of invasion, I feel myself in duty bound to notice this ready display of your patriotic zeal. Although the war has ceased, and with it all our fears for the public safety, yet the merit of equipping without distinction of age or privilege of exemption from military service, to meet an expected foe, is not the less deserving our warmest approbation.

You will, my Fellow Citizens, be pleased to accept my grateful thanks for the respect you have paid me in organizing, equipping, and offering your services under my command. The evidence you have given of your readiness to place yourselves between our enemies and the safety of our country affords me perfect assurance that, had our services been demanded, I should have found you foremost in the field of danger. Nor have your expectations been in vain—your patriotic example is of public utility, and an honor to the several towns to which you belong.

The timely diligence of the selectmen of the several towns, in fixing the town ammunition &c. has contributed to the evidence of our united zeal in the common cause, and merits the public approbation.

With mutual congratulations on the return of peace, from her nearly three years' exile, we will rejoice together in the enjoyment of her blessings, and thank heaven that liberty, the boon of our fathers, is yet ours, and we trust we shall be able to bequeath it to our posterity as the richest of parental blessings.

This is an auspicious era. Peace has become Empress of Christendom, and extends to the world the branch of conciliation—and may the nations so demean themselves as not to dethrone her and forfeit the blessings of her reign.

SAML. STRONG.

HONOR BY NEW YORK TO MAJ. GEN. STRONG.

VERGENNES, June 26, 1817.

Yesterday the sword voted by the Legislature of the State of New York to be presented to Gen. SAMUEL STRONG, in consideration of the services rendered by him at Plattsburgh in 1814, was delivered to him by the Hon. Ralph Hascall, Col. Melancthon Smith, Major Reuben Sanford, and Major David B. McNeil, appointed by the Lieutenant Governor of that State, acting as Governor, to perform that service.

The day was fine and the several exercises were conducted in a manner peculiarly gratifying, under the direction of David Edmond, Amos W. Barnum, Enoch D. Woodbridge, Luther E. Hall, and Francis Bradbury, Esquires, the committee of arrangements on the occasion; and Major Lawrence and Captain Huntington, Marshals of the day.

In the morning, the delegation from the State of New York were met at Mr. Johnson's inn, in Ferrisburgh, by Messrs. Woodbridge and Bradbury, and Capt. Geer's troop of cavalry, and escorted to this place. It is but justice to remark here, that the conduct of the troops on this occasion, and through the exercises of the day, was such as to do honor to themselves and their commander.

At one o'clock Gen. Strong was escorted from his house to Mr. Painter's inn, when, after a short interview with the gentlemen from the State of New York, he proceeded through a numerous procession of the volunteers who accompanied him to Plattsburgh, and other respectable citizens, to the platform in front of the Court House.

The Delegation from New York were then escorted by Capt Geer's troop, dismounted, to the top of the platform, where the following address was delivered to Gen. Strong, by Col. Melancthon Smith, in behalf of himself and his associates:

"Sir—The Legislature of the State of New York have directed the Governor to cause to be presented to you a sword, as a testimony of the high sense they entertain of your valor and public spirit, and for the services rendered by you, during the invasion of Plattsburgh by the British troops in September, 1814. The Lieutenant Governor acting as Governor has honored us with this commission.

"In adverting to the events of that period, when a numerous, disciplined and well appointed army, under officers of experience and well versed in the art of war, flushed with recent and astonishing victories; conquerors of the conquerer of Europe, boastful of their prowess, and confident of success—when such a force retires before our newly raised, undisciplined troops, not one fourth their numbers, we have cause of gratitude to the God of Armies, who so manifested His strength in our weakness. We are not unmindful that, uninfluenced by local considerations, with no motive but the love of country—no prospect of fame except at the sacrifice of your life—no interest but a sense of duty—and, notwithstanding every discouragement, you, Sir, volunteered in defence of a sister State. The act will be remembered by that people with gratitude.

"Accept, Sir, this sword. It is the gift of a free people to a free man. It bears on its hilt the device of a Herculean Mountaineer, crushing in his arms the British Lion. It will be as a memento for your sons to imitate your example, and excite them to deeds of glory. It is given not as a reward but a pledge, which the State of New York will redeem when occasion shall present itself.

"We are directed to communicate to you the consideration of his Excellency the Lieut. Governor, and of the representatives of the people. We offer you our personal regard and respect."

To which Gen. Strong made the following reply :

"To be honored, gentlemen, for any services I may have rendered, with the approbation of a State acknowledged to be the first in wealth, in commerce and population, and in no respect inferior to any State in the Union, affords a satisfaction which I cannot undertake to express.

"It is well known that the precipitate retreat of the British troops from Plattsburgh, to their own territory, prevented the citizens and militia of the States of New York and Vermont from coming to a close and severe conflict with the enemy. Had it been otherwise, I am persuaded that the volunteers from Vermont, who knew no discouragement in flying to the relief of your State, when suddenly invaded, would have faithfully performed the duty which one member of the Union always owes to another.

"I accept the sword, gentlemen, and request you to communicate to the Lieutenant Governor and Legislature of the State of New York the high sense I entertain of the honour they have conferred; and you will permit me to say, that the manner in which you, gentlemen, have executed your commission has added much to my gratification. You will please to accept the assurance of my respect and esteem."

The sword presented was of exquisite workmanship; its hilt and scabbard of gold. On the scabbard was the following inscription :

"Presented by His Excellency Daniel D. Tompkins, Governor of the State of New York, pursuant to a Resolution of the Senate and Assembly of the said State, to Major General SAMUEL STRONG, of the Vermont Volunteers, as a memorial of the sense entertained by the State of his services, and those of his brave mountaineers, at the battle of Plattsburgh."

After the presentation of the sword, the General and the delegation from New York, with the citizens, proceeded to Painter's inn, where they partook of a dinner provided for the occasion.¹

APPENDIX F.

VERMONT ON SLAVERY AND THE MISSOURI QUESTION —1819 AND 1820.

In February, 1819, Congress considered a proposition to authorize the people of the then territory of Missouri to adopt a constitution, with a view to the early admission into the Union of Missouri as a State. The slavery question arose and was largely discussed, and on a proposition to exclude slavery, the Vermont delegation in the House (Messrs. Crafts, Hunter, Merrill, Rich, and Richards,) favored it, while her Senators were divided, Mr. Tichenor voting to exclude slavery, and Mr. Palmer against it.¹ The subject was a very interesting one to the people of Vermont, and the political opponents of Senator Palmer were very willing to avail themselves of that opportunity for censure.² Among them was the late Hon. STEPHEN HAIGHT of Monkton, then and for many years an active and influential member of the General Assembly, and an ardent Federalist, but afterward a leader of the Jacksonian Democracy in the State, and Sergeant-at-Arms of the U. S. Senate. The record shows that Mr. Haight led in legislative action on this question:

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, November 8, 1819.

Mr. Haight introduced the following resolution, viz.

“Resolved, That a committee, consisting of four members, to join from Council, be appointed, to inquire into the expediency of adopting a memorial to Congress, soliciting that body to prohibit the further introduction of slavery into the territories of the United States, or to instruct our senators, and request our representatives in the Congress of the United States, to use their influence to prohibit the further extension of slavery over the territories of the United States, and that they report to this house as soon as may be."

² Oct. 25 1819, the Vermont Colonization Society was organized, at a large meeting consisting of members of the legislature, and other persons, without distinction of party, Governor Galusha in the chair. Its officers were selected from the ablest and best men of the State, and avowedly their purpose and expectation was to aid in the extinction of slavery. In the proclamation for a fast, issued on the next day, Gov. Galusha enjoined prayer to Almighty God, that He would “put down all tyranny and oppression, and open a way for the emancipation of all that degraded class of human beings, who are held in slavery, especially those in this highly favoured country.”—See Northern Sentinel of Nov. 12 1819; and post, p. 540.

Which was read and adopted.

Nov. 11.—The committee raised by resolution, to enquire into the expediency of adopting a memorial to Congress on the subject of slavery, and to instruct our representatives and senators in Congress, made report of the following resolution and preamble, viz.

"IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, November 11, 1819.

"The General Assembly of the State of Vermont view with deep concern the attempt to introduce slavery into the territories of the United States; and to legalize it in States to be admitted into the Union. They regard it as a measure manifestly tending to increase and perpetuate an evil of no ordinary magnitude and danger; of magnitude, as it deprives a portion of mankind of those privileges, which republican principle guarantees to all; of danger, as it may, and that possibly at no distant period, subject the master to the vengeance of the slave; and, as it will retain the physical force of the slave-holding States, for self preservation, when it may be most needed for national effort or defence. They regard it as tending to increase the number of slaves, as the extending their territories, and increasing their demand and value, will encourage the violation of all laws made to prohibit their importation; and as tending to perpetuate slavery, by adding the influence and power of States to be formed within our territories, which eventually may constitute a majority of the Union.

"They do not perceive that the plea of the necessity, on which the existence of slavery can alone be palliated, will extend to the territories of the United States, nor that the principle of compromise, that conceded to the slave-holding States, [applies to States] hereafter to be admitted into the Union. They cannot doubt, that the powers of Congress are adequate to the effective prohibition of the further introduction of slavery, that they have supreme power of legislation over the territories for all purposes of national concern, and that they are not bound to assent to the admission of any State into the Union, unless on such conditions as shall be consistent with the general welfare.

"The General Assembly do therefore resolve, that our senators be instructed, and our representatives in Congress be requested, to use their influence to prohibit the introduction of slavery in the territories of the United States, and to prevent its being legalized in any State hereafter to be admitted into the Union."

Which was read and adopted, and ordered to lie on the table.

Nov. 16.—The resolution reported relative to the further introduction of slavery, was called up, when Mr. West [Pres West of St. Johnsbury] moved that the resolution be dismissed, and, after debate, the motion prevailed, and the resolution was dismissed.¹

The incongruity of this record, in postponing and dismissing a resolution which had been adopted, was noticed in Gov. Skinner's speech of 1820, and the occasion of his recommendation of further action on the subject. — See ante, p. 443. The fact, however, seems to be, that the error in the record was clerical, the report of the committee having been accepted, and ordered to lie for further action — not "adopted." The avowed reason for the dismissal of the resolution is probably to be found in the fact that on the 5th of November, three days before Mr. Haight introduced his resolution, the following had been adopted, in response to a petition of the Vermont Colonization Society, an association just then organized on avowed anti-slavery principles.²

"IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, November 5, 1819.

"Holding as sacred the great principle, "That all men are born equally free and independent, and have certain natural, inherent, and inalienable rights, among which are the enjoying and defending life and liberty, acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and pursuing and obtaining happiness and safety."

"Resolved, That, whilst this General Assembly deeply deplore the degraded and abject situation of the coloured population of the United States, and most sensibly feel a sympathy for the white population of the South, on whom, without their own procurement, is entailed a great calamity, it is with heartfelt satisfaction they witness the laudable and humane exertions of many good men from different sections of the country, especially from the middle and southern States, in establishing the American Colonization Society, for the purpose of colonizing the free people of colour of the United States, on the west coast of Africa, a measure wisely calculated, in the opinion of this General Assembly, to alleviate human woe, and eventually to secure this country from great and impending evils.

"Resolved, also, that this Assembly do most cordially approbate the recent organization of the Vermont Society, auxiliary to the Society aforesaid, and cheerfully recommend the same to the favourable consideration and encouragement of the good citizens of this State, confidently hoping that, under the guidance of a beneficent, all wise, overruling Providence, their benevolent exertions for the extension of human happiness may be crowned with abundant success.

"Resolved, also, That the senators of this State in the Congress of the United States be instructed, and the representatives requested, to exert their influence for the adoption of such measures as will more effectually promote the great and benevolent views and objects of the Society aforesaid; and use their best endeavours in support of all constitutional measures to prevent the further extension of that great national evil."

Which resolution was [resolutions were] read and adopted.¹

RESOLUTIONS ON THE MISSOURI QUESTION—1820.

Gov. Skinner called the attention of the Legislature to this question in the executive speech, referring to the action of the previous session; and this part of the speech, on motion of Hon. Chauncey Langdon, was referred to a committee of six members of the House, to join from Council. This committee consisted of Chauncey Langdon of Castleton, Moses Robinson of Bennington, Matthias S. Jones of Waitsfield, Benj. Miner jr. of Bridport, Isaac Fletcher of Lyndon, and William Gile of Leicester, of the House, and Lieut. Gov. Cahoon of the Council.² The Governor also transmitted resolutions of the Legislature of Virginia on the same subject, which were referred to the same committee. The report of the committee was as follows:

STATE OF VERMONT.

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY, November 15, 1820.

The Committee, to whom was referred so much of his excellency's speech as relates to the admission of Missouri into the Union, Report, That the history of nations demonstrates, that involuntary servitude not only plunges the slave into the depths of misery, but renders a great proportion of community dependent and wretched, and the remainder tyrannic and indolent. Opulence, acquired by the slavery of others, degenerates its possessors, and destroys the physical powers of government. Principles so degrading, are inconsistent with the primitive dignity of man, and his natural rights.

² Councillor Phelps was originally appointed, but he obtained leave of absence, when Councillor Wetmore was appointed; but he also obtained leave of absence, and the Lieut. Governor was appointed.

Slavery is incompatible with the vital principles of all free governments, and tends to their ruin. It paralyzes industry, the greatest source of national wealth, stifles the love of freedom, and endangers the safety of the nation. It is prohibited by the laws of nature, which are equally binding on governments and individuals. The right to introduce and establish slavery, in a free government, does not exist.

The declaration of Independence declares, as self-evident truths, "That all men are created equal—that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the [consent of the] governed: That whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it."

The Constitution of the United States, and of the several States, have recognized these principles as the basis of their governments: and have expressly inhibited the introduction or extension of slavery, or impliedly disavowed the right. The power of Congress to require the prohibition of slavery in the constitution of a State, to be admitted as one of the United States, is confirmed by the admission of new States according to the ordinance of 1787, and by a constitutional "guarantee to every State in the Union of a republican form of government." This power in Congress is also admitted in the act of March 6, 1820, which declares that in all that territory ceded, under the name of Louisiana, which lies north of 36 deg. 30 min. north latitude, "slavery and involuntary servitude shall be forever prohibited."

Where slavery existed in the States, at the time of the adoption of the constitution of the United States, a spirit of compromise, or painful necessity, may have excused its continuance, but can never justify its introduction into a State to be admitted from the territories of the United States.

Though slavery is not expressly prohibited by the constitution, yet that invaluable instrument contains powers, first principles, and self-evident truths, which bring us to the same result, and lead us to liberty and justice, and the equal rights of man, from which we ought never to depart. "In it is seen a deep and humiliating sense of slavery"—and a cheering hope that it would, at some future period, be abolished—and even a determination to do it.

It is apparent that servitude produces in the slave-holding States peculiar feelings, local attachments, and separate interests: and should it be extended into new States, "it will have a tendency to form a combination of power, which will control the measures of the general government;" and which cannot be resisted, except by the physical force of the nation.

The people of the United States adopted the constitution "to form a more perfect union of the several states, to establish justice, to secure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty;" and have thereby blended and inseparably connected the interests, the safety and welfare of every State in the Union. We, therefore, become deeply concerned in the fundamental principles of the constitution of any new State to be admitted into the Union. Whatever powers are necessary to carry into effect the great objects of the Union, are implied in the constitution, and vested in the several departments of the general government.

The act of the United States, authorising a provisional admission of Missouri into the Union as a State, does not pledge the faith of government to admit, whatever may be its constitution or system of state government: for that constitution, by the act, must be republican, and not repugnant to the constitution of the United States.

From information, it is to be seriously apprehended that Missouri will present to Congress, for their approbation, a constitution which declares that "the General Assembly shall have no power to pass laws—First, for the emancipation of slaves, without the consent of their owners, or without paying them, before emancipation, a full equivalent for such slaves so emancipated"—and, "secondly," to prevent emigrants from bringing slaves into said State, so long as slavery is legalized therein. It is also made the imperious duty of its legislature to pass laws, as soon as may be, "To prevent free negroes and mulattoes from coming to, and settling in that State, under any pretence whatever."

These powers, restrictions, and provisions, to legalize and perpetuate slavery, and to prevent citizens of the United States, on account of their origin, color or features, from emigrating to Missouri, are repugnant to a republican government, and in direct violation of the constitution of the United States.

If Missouri be permitted to introduce and legalize slavery by her constitution, and we consent to her admission, we shall justly incur the charge of insincerity in our civil institutions, and in all our professions of attachment to liberty. It will bring upon the constitution and declaration of independence, a deep stain, which cannot be forgotten, or blotted out! "It will deeply affect the Union in its resources, political interests, and character."

The admission of another new State into the Union, with a constitution which guarantees security and protection to slavery, and the cruel and unnatural traffic of [in] any portion of the human race, will be an error which the Union cannot correct, and an evil which may endanger the freedom of the nation.

Congress never ought, and we trust never will, plant the standard of the Union in Missouri, to wave over the heads of involuntary slaves, "who have nothing they can call their own, except their sorrows and their sufferings," and a life beyond the grave—and who can never taste the sweets of liberty, unless they obtain it by force or by flight. Nor can a community, made up of masters and slaves, ever enjoy the blessings of liberty, and the benefits of a free government: these enjoyments are reserved for a community of freemen, who are subject to none, but to God, and the laws.

The committee therefore submit, for the consideration of the General Assembly, the following resolutions, viz.

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this legislature, slavery, or involuntary servitude, in any of the United States, is a moral and political evil, and that its continuance can be justified by necessity alone. That Congress has a right to inhibit any further introduction, or extension of slavery, as one of the conditions upon which any new State shall be admitted into the Union.

Resolved, That this legislature views with regret and alarm, the attempt of the inhabitants of Missouri to obtain admission into the Union as one of the United States, under a constitution which legalizes and secures the introduction and continuance of slavery—and also contains provisions to prevent freemen of the United States from emigrating to and settling in Missouri, on account of their origin, color and features. And that, in the opinion of this legislature, these principles, powers and restrictions, contained in the reputed [reported] constitution of Missouri, are anti-republican and repugnant to the constitution of the United States, and subversive of the unalienable rights of man.

Resolved, That the senators from this State in the Congress of the United States be instructed, and the Representatives requested, to exert their influence and use all legal measures to prevent the admission of Missouri, as a State, into the union of the United States, with those anti-republican features and powers in their constitution.

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be requested to transmit a copy of the foregoing report and resolutions to each of the Senators and Representatives from this State in the Congress of the United States.

The foregoing report and resolutions were agreed to by both houses without a division.¹

RIGHTS OF THE RESPECTIVE STATES IN THE PUBLIC LANDS OF THE UNITED STATES.

In the Executive Speech of 1821, Gov. Skinner commented favorably upon propositions of Maryland and New Hampshire in respect to the rights of the several States in the public lands of the United States,¹ and the subject was referred to a committee consisting of Cornelius P. Van Ness of Burlington, David Edmond of Vergennes, Abner Weston of Randolph, Munis Kenney of Townshend, of the House, and Henry Olin of the Council. The following report and resolutions resulted:

The Committee to whom was referred his Excellency's message, accompanied with a report of [and] sundry resolutions of the Legislature of the State of Maryland, relative to appropriations of public land for the purpose of education, and a report and sundry resolutions of the Legislature of the State of New Hampshire, on the same subject, beg leave to Report:

That they have attentively considered the said reports, and the resolutions respectively predicated thereon, and find them to contain the following principles, which, in the opinion of your committee, cannot be denied or resisted:—

That the public lands of the United States, whether acquired by force or by acts or deeds of cession from particular states, or by purchase from foreign governments, are the common property of the Union; and ought to be applied to the common use and benefit of all the states, in just proportions, and not to the use and benefit of any particular state, or states, to the exclusion of others; and that any such partial appropriation of them, for state purposes, is a violation of our national compact, as well as of the principles of just and sound policy:—

And that, as large appropriations of the public lands have been made by the United States—and, in the opinion of your committee, with perfect propriety—to certain particular states, for the purposes of education, the rights of the other states will be violated, unless a like appropriation be made to them, of the public lands, for the same purpose, in just proportion.

On these principles your committee fully agree with the Legislatures of the states of Maryland and New Hampshire, and believe the arguments detailed in the reports made to the Legislatures of those states, respectively, and particularly that from the state of Maryland, to be altogether unanswerable.

The reports and resolutions, referred to your committee, which have been published for the use of the General Assembly, so clearly and irresistibly elucidate and establish the principles maintained, that an attempt, on the present occasion, at further, or more ample discussion, would be superfluous.

They may be allowed, however, to suggest, that the claims of the state of Vermont may be urged, with as much justice, as those of any other state. The burdens and sacrifices of the revolutionary war, which secured the sources of our national wealth, as well as our independence, were shared, in full proportion, by the people of this state. At the same time, as this state was not a member of the confederation, no indemnity was obtained from the United States, though, on its accession to the Union, it became subject, equally, with the other states, to the burden of the public debt.

Your committee recommend to the General Assembly the adoption of the following resolutions :¹

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS.

Gov. Israel Smith, Vol. v.—In connection with the biographical note, on page 147 of Vol. v, the editor intended to give a portrait of Gov. Smith, the existence of which he had learned from CHAUNCEY K. WILLIAMS, Esq., of Rutland, but was unable to find it until the present volume had been nearly completed. The portrait, of which an engraving is given herewith, proved to be a silhouette, which has been regarded as excellent by the descendants of the governor. Thanks for a photographic copy of the original are given to Miss JOANNA PRENTICE of Cleveland, Ohio, who is a niece of Gov. Smith, and to the Hon. SAMUEL B. PRENTISS of the same city, who has interested himself in the matter in behalf of his native State.

The editor has additional documents on the controversy of Vermont with New Hampshire, &c., which are necessarily deferred.

Vol. 1, p. 158.—Note 3 is erroneous. The blank referred to should be filled with Bennet Bardsley. This correction is made from a copy of an extract from the original record, printed in the North Star of April 5, 1821.
